It plunged through his clothing but only succeeded in grazing the skin.

LOOTED THE BODY The Italians then looted the body and pack of the murdered peddler and fled with their boodle into the woods.

The escaping Jew ran seven miles to this village, where the first news of the murder was received.

A posse was hastily organized and equipped but five hours had elapsed before the scene of the tragedy was reached and the search instituted. EASILY TRACEABLE

The course of the murderer and his companion was easily traceable in the light snow. It described a wide cetour returning to what is known as the Portage Road, at a point but one mile and a half from the place of the murder.

Five miles along the road taken by the fleeing Italians the jewelry case of the peddler was found covered with brush. The upper drawers of this had been wrenched out, but the two lowest, locked when found, had evidently resisted every attempt on the part of the fugitives to open. When finally drawn they were found to contain thirty watches and eleven hundred dollars in cash, the anticipated booty of the Italians. Some few hundred yards further on was discovered the gun of the murderer hidden beneath a fallen log.

TRAIN FOR BUSINESS

Most men train their brains and almost entirely neglect their bodies. They do not seem to realize that keenness of judgment and clearness of thought depend as much on the body as on the brain itself. Any man can prove this to his own satisfaction by attempting to decide a weighty business problem while suffering with an acute attack of indigestion or a violent spell of biliousness.

The amount of work that the brain 1 do depends much on the healthss of liver, bowels, kidneys and
