

The Fountain Head of Life Is The Stomach

A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished.

Dr. PIERCE'S GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY makes the stomach strong, promotes the flow of digestive juices, restores the lost appetite, makes assimilation perfect, invigorates the liver and purifies and enriches the blood. It is the great blood-maker, flesh-builder and restorative nerve tonic. It makes men strong in body, active in mind and cool in judgment.

This "Discovery" is a pure, glyceric extract of American medical roots, absolutely free from alcohol and all injurious, habit-forming drugs. All its ingredients are printed on its wrappers. It has no relationship with secret nostrums. Its every ingredient is endorsed by the leaders in all the schools of medicine. Don't accept a secret nostrum as a substitute for this time-proven remedy of known composition. Ask your neighbors. They must know of many cures made by it during past 40 years, right in your own neighborhood. World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

Our Weekly Story.

A Woman of Her Word.

(By David Lyall, in the British Weekly.)

For the first time in his life, Robert Gourlay, of Balwhan, had a secret from Betty, his wife. It was a very innocent secret, but it troubled his conscience, and destroyed for a while the natural placidity of his disposition. He had been wont to consult her in most actions of his life, and there was a kind of fear-some element in his plotting and scheming to prevent his wife getting wind of what was in the air. He was not even sure how she might take it, when the cat actually leaped out of the bag, or was taken out. She had some sharpness of tongue, and great facility of expression, and when really put out could make the offender desire to crawl away from her sight. Robert had stood in whole-some awe of her through all his married life, yet had never desisted from his advice. So she was she, and such an unerring judge of human nature, she had seldom made a mistake in her estimate of man or woman. Beneath all the sharp corners of her speech there was hidden a true and kindly and loyal woman's heart, which never turned from those in trouble. Many private sorrows had not soured her, and her faith in God had never faltered. She believed that the daily lot sufficed for the daily need, and that it was appointed by One who knew that need far better than the poor worm of clay that occasionally rebelled against it. Betty's theology was of the old, stern, unbending sort, but she could not have found, even if she had sought anything that better fitted her need.

Robert was religious, more by habit than temperament, and there were times when the old Adam had awakened him, and inclined him to rebel against the routine of his days. He was the farmer and part-owner of Balwhan, and in his late middle-life, success having followed on his zeal and thrift, he had been able to buy the whole place. The hunger for land had been born and bred in him; he came of a long line of farming folk of the better sort, and his secret aim and desire was to be numbered among the lairds of the south country; and to be looked up to with all the deference that belongs to possession all the world over.

Betty scoffed openly at this ambition. They had no child, their precious three having died in infancy, the sorrow carving lines on Betty's sweet face that never left it; and she could not conceive of any reason why Balwhan should desire more land, or wish to move an inch out of the quiet and pleasant grove in which they lived. Balwhan was a pleasant place, situated in a beautiful cleft of the southern hills, a small, sweet, old-fashioned house, with bending eaves, and an old-world garden lying bonnily to the sun. True the rooms were small, but all were

That Old Winter Cough.

The Cough Syrup You've Taken Has Sickened But Not Cured You.

You'll Never Be Well Till You Heal the Lungs With "Cattarrhazone."

Nothing pulls down strength, makes you wretched, miserable and despondent like a chronic cough. The old-fashioned liquid mixtures slip down the throat, enter the stomach and do little else but ruin digestion. Cattarrhazone is the only breathable cold, catarrh and cough medicine. Instead of taking drowsy drugs, chloral, morphine and opium mixtures, you simply inhale the richest pine balsams, breathe into your lungs the healing, soothing vapor of a scientific remedy that commands the admiration of all good physicians.

The extraordinary efficacy of Cattarrhazone is without a parallel. A sneezing cold is cured in a minute, a harsh cough is eased in an hour, the most offensive catarrh is thoroughly drawn from the system. In case of asthma and bronchitis the relief and certain cure that comes from the healing balsamic extracts in Cattarrhazone is simply wonderful. "For more than twenty years I suffered with a cough, bronchitis, asthma and nasal catarrh," writes J. E. Fenwick, of Staunton, P. O. "Every attack I had seemed to grow worse and I could hardly breathe on account of an accumulation of phlegm in the nose and throat. One day I tried Cattarrhazone and in ten minutes was wonderfully relieved. I could breathe freely and naturally through the nose and blood spitting was stopped—the phlegm was cleared away and my regular breathing restored. No remedy can do more than 'Cattarrhazone.'"

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Cattarrhazone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitute. Large Cattarrhazone lasts two months, price $1.00. Smaller sizes 25c and 50c. All reliable dealers or the Cattarrhazone Co., Kingston, Ont.

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I wrote to her some time ago I was a very sick woman, suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the female organs, and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend this medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and think they are fine."—Mrs. FRANK EMBLEY, Lindsay, Ontario.

We cannot understand why women will take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, without first trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

hallowed, each one a particular shrine. Balwhan thought Betty silly about the house, but refrained from speaking it. Once or twice he had voiced his desire to build a larger and better house, and had sought to decry the homely little dwelling to which Betty had come a bride so long ago; but she merely laughed at him, and told him he had surely too little to do either with his money or his time. Soon after the last acres of Balwhan had been acquired, Robert began to have a great running to and fro to Dumfries, going much oftener than usual, though saying nothing about his business to his wife. It was the springtime, too, and there was plenty to do for man and beasts on the opening fields. Sometimes, seeing him dressed day after day, riding or driving here and there, Betty wondered whether her husband was getting lazy. She was active enough still, keeping her kitchen wench in wholesome awe of her immaculate supervision, and was in no way ashamed of the homely duties which filled up the sum of her days. She still baked and brewed, and at last accomplished much with her tireless hands, though sometimes of an evening she would fall asleep in the lamp-light just at the moment when Balwhan might have been inclined to sociability. They were a queer pair, yet so deeply attached to one another that nothing could assail their faith. Though Betty in duty found disapproval of a great many of her husband's performances, and thought him given of late to much needless wastery, in her secret heart she thought him a king among men. The secret concerned her; yet to her it was not told. It was her custom once a year to go upon a visit to her own folks in various parts of Scotland, to redd up her sister's houses and set them on their feet, as she expressed it, and it was at that time that Balwhan had his chance. Indeed, it was his only chance, because he knew perfectly well that the great scheme he had in his mind would be nipped in the bud by Betty, and that unless it was well in hand before she returned very likely it would have to be abandoned.

Mrs. Gourlay left Balwhan on a May morning, about seven o'clock, with her modest luggage in the well of the wagonette and herself on the box seat beside Thomas Aird, the groom. By nine o'clock strangers began to arrive at Balwhan, men with measuring tackle, and various weird paraphernalia, with which they were all very busy till dinner time. And after dinner, too, for the whole afternoon, they were engaged marking out distances on a little slope not a stone's throw from the house, a slope which rose in a daisied field at the bottom of the garden, and from which there was a fine view of the valley of the Nith with the red roofs of Dumfries in the clear distance.

The next day, but one, laboring men arrived, and began to deface the pleasant face of the hill by digging an immense big hole. It was good, rich soil, but they came to the sand and gravel by and by, which would ensure a dry foundation for the fabric that was to be erected on the site; the new house of Balwhan, that was to stand so sweetly to the sun, and to be a landmark for miles around. It represented the ambition of Robert Gourlay's life, the crown of all his labors, and he was as pleased about it as a child over a new toy. But Betty was in the background, Betty who had never been consulted, and who had scouted the idea of the new house every time Balwhan had made bold to mention it. Now when Mrs. Gourlay was absent on her yearly jaunt, it was not her habit to write letters; indeed, she was no scholar, but it happened that she was deeply interested in an ailing lassie in the village, and had desired her mother to send her an occasional line telling how she was getting on. And it was Allie Jardine that let the cat out of the bag. It was the afternoon of the tenth day of Betty's absence, and the hillside was practically demolished, and the plan marked out on the level clay, when there suddenly appeared upon the brae-face, coming slowly upwards from the Nith, a big, lumbering vehicle which Robert, in close consultation with the foreman of the work, recognized as the state bus. A cold sweat broke over him. "Ellick," said he, "believe that is the mistress comin' back. If it is there'll be the dell to pay."

Ellick scratched his head. He was a bachelor himself, but had a great respect for Mrs. Gourlay, of whose many kind deeds he had heard in Dumfries.

"Had she any fault to the plan?" he asked. "I dinna mind hearin' that she had passed on opinion, and, generally speaking, the weemin hary the pair chield that draws the plan, until he disanek which end o' him is uppermost."

"She's never seen it, Ellick," said Robert, desperately. "Man, it wad be a surprise, an' between me and you an' the gatepost, she didn't want the house, and my only plan was to begin it when she wasna there."

Agonizing Headache.

The Trying Experience of a Woodstock Man who nearly Died with Grippe.

People that allow "grippe" colds to run on unheeded often find themselves in the perilous predicament that nearly cost Marx M. Melanson his life.

"It was a long drive through the rain that started my cold. I didn't pay much attention thinking it would pass away. I soon experienced a stabbing tightness in my chest and throat. I grew quite intense and my throat swelled below the ears and it hurt to turn my head. A terrible dry, racking cough kept me sleepless and miserably sick, and my head felt like bursting. A neighbor brought me Nerviline and rubbed it in copiously over my throat and chest, and advised me to use it as a gargle and take it in hot water every four hours. I did this and got relief—the soreness left my chest and I put on a Nerviline Porous Plaster. Although nearly in despair when I started Nerviline, it was no time before I was well and on my feet again. Such remarkable power for breaking a cold I never thought of being found in one remedy. Nerviline saved my life and I consider it should be in every home."

Not only will Nerviline break up colds and prevent pneumonia, but it will also cure Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago and Sciatica. Wherever there is pain or inflammation, Nerviline will cure it quickly. Beware of substitutes—get Nerviline only, large 25c bottles at all dealers.

Rev. Father Morrissey

Father Morrissey's "No. 11" Cures Stomach Troubles.

When your stomach is working right you never know it is there. But when it feels as heavy as lead—when you have Heartburn, Belching of Wind, Sourness, a gnawing hunger, with distress after eating—when you feel irritable and depressed—then you may know that the digestive fluids in the stomach are not sufficient to digest what you eat.

Father Morrissey's "No. 11" Tablets supply these fluids in concentrated form. Each tablet, dissolved in the stomach, will digest 1 3/4 pounds of food, which is more than an average meal.

Read what Father Morrissey's treatment did for Mr. Gosline, of Salmon Lake. He writes Nov. 30, 1908:

"I was troubled with indigestion, so severe that I really thought I had cancer of the stomach. I took much doctors' remedies, till I was forced to seek another resource, and this was the Rev. Father Morrissey. His treatments worked miracles, until I have been entirely cured, so that now I do not look to the quality of the diet but to the quantity."

An English View.

The slang of New York has its origin, of course, in the climate. It is the climate that has produced the terrible doctrine and practice of "hustle," and for people living in a wild chaos of competition, always in a blinding hurry and in the midst of a deafening din, language has to be pitched up high to cope with the circumstances. There is no time to pause nor any place in which an ordinary quiet phrase would be able to reach your ear. Language to produce any effect at all must be as quick and as violent as all else. A phrase that has not the properties of dynamite goes unheeded.—Max Beerbohm in London Saturday Gazette.

Wire Wounds.

My mare, a very valuable one, was badly bruised and cut by being caught in a wire fence. Some of the wounds would not heal, although I tried many different medicines. Dr. Bell advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT, diluted at first, then stronger as the sores began to look better, until after three weeks, the sores have healed and best of all the hair is growing well, and is NOT WHITE as is most always the case in horse wounds.

Used according to directions, Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial will afford relief in the most acute form of summer complaint. Wherever the attack manifests itself no time should be lost in seeking the aid of the Cordial. It will act immediately on the stomach and intestines and allay the irritation and pain. A trial of it will convince anyone of the truth of these assertions.
