ENGLISH LIQUID PAINT

A Handsome Paint

One special reason why "English" Liquid Paint gives your house such a handsome finish is because the 70% pure white lead used in its manufacture is Brandram's B. B. Genuine White Lead. This lead, ever since it was first manufactured, over one-hundred years ago, has been the standard of the lead trade and commanded the highest lead prices.

Yet "English" Liquid Paint is not an extravagant paint—it is the most economical paint you can use. Made by Brandram-Henderson Limited, in 45 hand-some shades, in addition to black and white. Prices are right. Come in for a color card.

Our Weekly Story.

The Light on the Headland.

(From the Presbyterian Banner)

There had been a dense, icy fog for ten days, and during that time the fishing along the coast had been almost suspended. Boats that had been outside when the fog enveloped them remained there and those nearer shore either tried to get outside or felt their way to land, slowly, apprehensively, a bit at a time. To be drifted about in that thick, moist darkness was a constant invitation to the jagged rocks and reefs that lurked near the shore.

On a bold headland overlooking one of the most dangerous parts of the coast was the home of Captain Griffin. Years ago Griffin had been a poor fisherman, but he had worked his way up, from boat to boat, until now he was captain and part owner of the fine schooner, "Petrel," which ran between Deep Harbor, the little village three miles below, and a city several hundred miles up the coast.

During the tenth and eleventh days the people on shore began to look more serious and apprehensive. The great bulk of the fishing boats had been away to the Banks, but it was now time for them to return, and there were no signs of the fog lifting. The best pilot on the coast would be helpless in that icy, relentless mass of enveloping mist.

On the morning of the eleventh day Mrs Griffin stood on the little porch in front of her house trying to peer through the gloom.

"If it doesn't lift soon," she said, gravely, "I am afraid there will be a good many wrecks. The boats cannot tell when they approach land, and there are no lighthouses to warn them away."

"But papa won't come back till next week," interposed ten-year-old Harry, encouragingly.

"No; but there is your Uncle John in the 'Surf,' and your Uncle Ben in the 'Tidal Wave,' and hundreds of men and boys from the village and along the coast. Nearly every one of our neighbors has somebody in the fleet; God grant the fog may lift before night!"

As she turned away Harry slipped down the steps and out toward the headland. He was thinking of the men outside, and of that regretful utterance of his mother's, no light-house to warn them away. He had heard that complaint many times before, but now the words came home to him with additional force and meaning. He had once passed a lighthouse when on a trip with his father, and he remembered the big, bright light which had shone so steadily through the darkness. Why did they not have one here? Suddenly he turned back and hurried toward the pile of driftwood which had been gathered along the shore. There were many wrecks on this coast and one of Harry's amusements was to gather up the boxes and barrels and planks and debris which he found on the beach and among the rocks. This he now carried, piece by piece, as far out on the headland as he dared to go.

The work was slow and laborious, and it was well on in the afternoon when his bright, eager face appeared in the doorway.

"Oh, mother!" he cried, "may I have the old oil barrels in the shed?"

"Yes, certainly," Mrs Griffin was thinking more of the boats outside than of Harry just then; and besides Harry was fond of building houses with the lumber.

Every few minutes she went to the window and gazed out into the fog, and it was not until the darkness warned her of approaching night that she thought of Harry and went to the door to call him.

As she stood there a bright, dazzling flame rose up from the headland. At first she did not understand it; then she thought of the oil barrels and of Harry's absence. And with this thought came another.

"Thank God! thank God!" she cried, fervently. "Why did I not think of it before!"

Bareheaded as she was, she ran out to the headland to where Harry was watching his fire.

"Don't let it go down, Harry she cried, 'it will warn them off the rocks. There are more oil barrels in the cellar, and plenty of wreckage behind the shed. We will keep it up all night.'"

Down at the village they saw the spire of flame rising from the headland, and they understood and made another on the beach. And the light of the two beacons penetrated even the dense fog and shone out across the breakers to where more than one anxious helmsman was peering through the darkness for some indication of his whereabouts.

The next morning the fog began to lift, little by little; and toward noon the boats came in, and with them came the 'Petrel,' six days earlier than she was expected.

"We made a quick run," Captain Griffin said that afternoon, as he sat on the porch between his wife and Harry, "but we struck the fog yester-

Most Canadians Have Catarrh

Our Changeable Climate is Responsible.

Where the atmosphere is damp, with sudden changes in temperature, almost everybody has Catarrh, in some form or other. The ordinary cold in the head inflames and weakens the membranes lining the nose and throat, and starts a discharge. The next cold is more easily caught, and soon the patient is never quite free of it.

As Catarrh develops the discharge increases—drops into the throat, especially at night—and takes on an offensive odor. Besides being exceedingly disagreeable, there is great danger of the disease extending to the lungs, stomach, or bowels.

Though it is very difficult to cure, Father Morrissey devised a combined internal and external treatment that has cured thousands. The Tablets tone up and invigorate the system, and assist Nature in throwing off the disease, while the salve, applied up the nostrils, clears out the discharge and heals the membranes. Combined treatment, soe at your dealer's, or from Father Morrissey Medicine Co., Ltd., Chatham, N.B.

day morning and soon lost our reckoning. I was at the wheel trying to make our course when I saw the first light. It saved the 'Petrel' from being wrecked, for she was close in upon the rocks, and only had just time enough to change her course. And not only the 'Petrel,' my boy, placing his hand upon Harry's brown curls, 'more than one man in the village told me that his boat was saved last night by that light on the headland.'

Pneumonia's Race with Consumption

These two Diseases Mow Down Annually Ten Times More than War and Famine Combined.

As this season, of the two evils pneumonia is most to be feared. It develops quickly and if not taken in time leaves the patient but a slim chance for his life. Look out for the little cold, don't let it run on—keep it from developing into their pneumonia or consumption.

Who knows of a real trusty remedy that can be relied on to cure colds as quickly as Nerviline, it is impossible to find anything that draws out inflammation, eases that tight, congested feeling, gives such sure relief as Nerviline. Why for fifty cents in thousands of homes no other medicine is even kept. "Sometimes I hurried off to work without an overcoat," writes Mr O C Hinckley, of New London, "and as a consequence caught severe chills. I neglected the cold that was tightening around me and finally La Grippe held me in its grip and I was taken to bed as helpless as a child. I feared pneumonia most, but fortunately I had lots of Nerviline in the house. When it was well rubbed into my chest, a hard, tearing cough loosened up. I used Nerviline as a gargle and got ease in my throat in a few hours. Every four hours I took half a teaspoonful of Nerviline in hot sweetened water to break up the fever and chills. My chest felt weak and tender after this attack and for several weeks I wore a Nerviline Porous Plaster which strengthened my chest and prevented a relapse."

"I can recommend Nerviline as the best and only cure for coughs, colds, tight chest, sciatica and rheumatic pains."

Don't be misled into taking anything but "NERVILINE" fifty years, success stands behind it. Large 25c bottles at all dealers.

These Wonderful Fruit Juice Tablets Are Winning Friends on Every Side.

Lancaster, Ont., Sept 16, 1908

I was a martyr for many years to that distressing complaint, chronic Constipation. I tried many kinds of pills and medicines without benefit and consulted physicians, but nothing did me any real good. Then I began to take "Fruit-a-lives," and these wonderful little fruit tablets entirely cured me.

At first, I took five tablets a day, but now I take only one tablet every two days. I am now entirely well, and thanks to "Fruit-a-lives," I give you permission to publish this testimonial.
