

The "Chemies" of Bread

LET us look a bit into the chemistry of bread. For we want our bread not only to seem good but we want it to actually be good. And as bread is a question of flour and flour a question of wheat we see that wheat is where we have to begin.

Gluten, starch, water and phosphates, are the principal component qualities of wheat. And in proportion as these qualities are more or less present is the wheat more or less valuable so far as nutrition is concerned.

The nutritive and bread-making qualities of wheat are the things that make it more valuable than rye or oats or barley or corn as human food. The quality of nutrition, too, is what makes one brand of flour more valuable than another.

If it were not for nutrition and bread-making qualities any flour would be as good as any other. We wouldn't have to care whether it was made from good wheat or poor wheat, from Spring wheat or Winter, from all wheat or part other cereals.

A chemist will tell you that ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR is richer in high quality gluten than flour made from low grades of wheat. And for that reason it is better for food, hence more valuable than ordinary flour.

And actual tests in your kitchen will tell you that it produces more and larger loaves to the barrel than ordinary soft wheat or blended flour, the reason being that flour made from hard Red Fyfe wheat is more expansive and more absorbent.

It is plain, common-sense that flour made from the finest hard wheat in the world and scientifically milled must produce the finest bread in the world. And it does. Try it. Prove it.

ENGLISH LIQUID PAINT

Said the Painter—

"There is a great house paint. It is 'English' Liquid Paint made by Branch-Burnham Limited, the same firm that make Branch-Burnham's D. B. Genuine White Lead. I never saw a paint before that was so finely ground, that spreads so easily or covers so well. The shades are clean and clear and perfect, and the white—well, the white can't be beat."

"I know why this paint is so good. The white base is 75% pure white lead, and 25% pure zinc white with pure linseed oil, turpentine and drier."

"The guarantee formula is on every can. That suits me. I want to know what is in the stuff I'm using on my jobs."

"English" Liquid Paint is most economical to use.

WHEELS STOPPED ON LOCAL TRAINS AT FUNERAL HOUR

Even United States Company Observed Tokens of Respect on Trains in Canadian Territory.

Although most people had read of the orders issued on the railways for the stopping of all trains for three minutes at eight o'clock this morning—the hour corresponding to the beginning of the funeral service for King Edward in England, the actual carrying out of the order broke in as a dramatic surprise for most travellers.

Suburban residents coming into the city through, in many instances, that there was some obstruction on the line, when they found their trains brought to a sudden standstill in unexpected places, but of course the significance of the occasion was quickly appreciated. All heads were immediately bared, and the wait of three minutes was as a general rule made in absolute silence.

The three-minute cessation was observed not only by all Canadian trains, but by American trains in Canadian territory, and none were more instant in their response to this silent tribute than the American travellers themselves. An instance of what occurred on trains all over the Dominion is supplied by the following description of the three-minute stop supplied by a traveller on one of the New York Central trains. He said: "Sharp at eight o'clock the New York Central train, which runs locally between Montreal and Valleyfield, came to a dead stop a little west of Blue Bonnets. 'We shall stay here,' said Conductor Carver, who wears the uniform of the New York Central road, 'for three minutes. I am carrying out the order that all trains must stop for this length of time out of respect to the late King of England.'"

In many respects the wait was a peculiar one. Although there were many passengers on board, almost absolute silence reigned for the period of time in question. One old gentleman who has been travelling on the road for many years took off his hat the moment the train came to a stop. In an instant every man's head was bare. If the funeral of King Edward had actually been passing the spot, more respectful silence and reverence could not have been observed.

Presently breaking rudely in upon the unusual scene came the grinding of wheels, the straining of cars, and the hoarse breathing of the locomotive—the three minutes had expired: the busy life of the world was going on apace once more.—Montreal Star.

Two miners were returning from a lecture in the village institute, when one of them after a thoughtful pause, remarked: "Say, Bill, I don't see the necessity of bringing from London to teach us about manners in the home. We ain't so bad as that feller made out." "Of course we ain't," replied, Bill. "Not by a long way," went on the first "I never swear before my wife." "No more don't I," put in Bill. I ain't see ladies first. That's me.—The Biss.

Spasmodic Pains in Arms and Chest.

A Common Ailment from which Many are Suffering Just Now. TELLS HOW TO CURE.

These pains come on very suddenly and while they last the pain is excruciatingly severe. Sufferers are attacked suddenly with a violent pain in and around the chest, extending often to the shoulder and running down to the ends of the fingers. Often the chest is so much contracted to give very painful feelings of suffocation.

To remove these pains nothing is known to act so rapidly as NERVILINE. Rub it on the chest, shoulders and other affected parts—rub it in well, and take in hot sweetened water four times daily about twenty drops of NERVILINE. Follow this very simple and safe treatment and you'll find that not an ache or pain in any part of the body will remain. It's the pain-subduing, penetrating power of NERVILINE that makes it so far superior to all other ailments. Fearful Traffic in Girls Told of in Bald Language.

New York, May 18th.—In the first of the Rockefeller "white slave" indictment cases to be brought to trial that of Belle Moore, a mulatto, Geo. A. Miller told today in the baldest language all the details of a bargain for white slaves, in which he swore he acted as buyer.

"I want young girls," Miller swore he told Belle Moore.

"I can get you babies, if necessary," Miller testified, that Belle Moore replied.

Then he told in detail how the girls were later exhibited, and how he and his companion, "Frankie Fuller," resorted to them as a buyer would inspect a filly.

The girls were acceptable and Miller testified that he paid $120 each for them. Both the girls said to have been bought, Alice Milton and Belle Wood, were in court during the testimony.

Lady Aberdeen's Love Story.

(M. A. P.)

A pretty romance is attached to the Countess of Aberdeen, who recently received congratulations upon her birthday anniversary. The Earl of Aberdeen, then about twenty-two, once lost his way when riding on his pony in the Highlands. Coming suddenly upon the Scottish home of the late Lord Tweedmouth, he asked that the pony, which had become lame, might be stabled for the night. Sir Dudley Marjoribanks, who was then staying there, gave the traveller a cordial welcome, and Sir Dudley's daughter, Isabel, helped to entertain the unexpected guest. A great friendship sprang up between the two, which ripened nine years later, into marriage.

EDWARD VII'S LAST CONSCIOUS ACT.

Sent Love and Congratulations to Manager of Racing Stud for Witch of Air's Race.

(New York World.)

London, May 19.—Innumerable stories are told about King Edward's last conscious action on the day of his death, but the following statement is authentic:

He received about 3 p.m. a telegram from Lord Marcus Beresford, manager of his racing stud, telling of the victory of the royal horse Witch of the Air.

The King was then in a very weak condition and under the anxious observation of his doctors and nurses, but he insisted on getting up from his couch to write a reply. A nurse stepped forward to assist him to the writing table after the King had refused to obey the doctor's desire to remain seated, but he motioned her aside. He reached the table with an effort, sat down and wrote a message on the back of Beresford's telegram.

His attendants feared the exertion would provoke a fatal fit of coughing and stood ready to help him. He turned around on his chair and said to Sir James Reid:

"Send my love and congratulations to old Marky"—his nickname for Beresford.

Then he arose with difficulty and had walked three or four steps toward his couch, when the choking fit came on and he collapsed, falling to the floor with a heart attack.

He was borne to the couch and soon afterwards lapsed into the state of coma from which he never rallied.

Strange to say, Beresford's telegram with the King's scribbled reply on the back—the last words he ever wrote—cannot be found, although it has been searched for in every place where it is thought possible it could have fallen or been put. Its disappearance is one of the unsolved mysteries of the monarch's sick room.

There is no doubt that King Edward's intractability as a patient hastened his end. Much criticism is made in medical quarters about what is known of his treatment, which can only be accounted for by his determined resistance to all medical injunctions to the very last.

King Edward's money affairs were so profitably managed by Sir Ernest Cassell that instead of dying in debt, as was commonly believed, he is said to have left more than $5,000,000, making a handsome provision for Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria outside of their state allowances. It is said that $1,250,000 of this fortune accrues from insurance taken out on the King's life in different companies four years ago on very advantageous terms.

A Winnipeg despatch says that the Hon. Robert Rogers, during his recent visit to England, found Mr. Balfour particularly interested in Canadian affairs, and proposing if he could possibly find the time to visit Canada this summer.

A BIT OF ADVICE

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. The kidneys are calling for help. Slight symptoms of kidney troubles are but forerunners of more serious complaints. They should be given attention before it is too late.

Booth's Kidney Pills cure kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Woodstock residents desire more convincing proof than the statement of Woodstock citizen.

Mr. James F. McLean of Chapel St., Woodstock, N.B., says: "My back had caused me much distress for many years. Severe pains would come in my sides and extend across the small of my back and into my shoulders. I would often be so stiff and sore I would be unable to get up from a chair without the support of both hands. Spots would float before my eyes and dizzy headaches were so constant as to keep me in a very poor condition most of my time. In all the remedies I had tried there was no relief for me and I had become discouraged. I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills, however, and I began their use on recommendation of our druggist, Mr. Mair. I had not completed the first box when I could notice a great change and after using a second box I was without the slightest symptom of the long standing disease. Sold by dealers. Price 50 cents. The R.T. Booth Co., Ltd., Fort Erie, Ont., Sole Canadian Agents."

Queen Alexandra has issued a touching letter to the nation thanking the people for their sympathy.
