RECALL MEN IN CONVENTION.

More Than 1,200 Stockholders of the United Drug Co. Attend Eighth Annual Convention.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 30.—The most important convention of its kind ever held in the East, if not in this country, ended here last night when more than 1,200 stockholders of the United Drug Company, and some 600 ladies, members of their families, stood in the immense enclosure of the Boston Arena and listened to the voices in the chorus of "Auld Lang Syne" as a finale to the annual banquet. It made an impressive sight. The magnitude of everything connected with the banquet cannot be adequately described, for the plans were carried out on a scale commensurate with what the convention represented, a gathering of leading druggists from every section of the North American continent.

For three days business and pleasure were combined. While the program was confined to that length of time, yet the early arrival in Boston of several hundred stockholders allowed these men to fraternize and exchange ideas most profitably, and as many are to remain here a few days longer it means an entire week practically devoted to the interests of the company. This was the eighth convention of those who stand sponsor for the Rexall remedies, and it surpassed its predecessors in every way. Plans which had been perfected for months of work were in such complete shape that there was no possibility of disarrangement, and to-day President Louis K. Liggett was complimented freely on the success achieved by him and his subordinates. Men of prominence in many national affairs were amazed at the admirable features introduced here and they were not stinting in their praise.

The convention opened last Tuesday morning at 9:30 a.m. In order to house the large gathering the Boston Arena was secured. This is the largest building in Boston, and while it is arranged to accommodate thousands it proved none too large for the United Drug Company convention. As the stockholders wandered into the building they were surprised at its beauty. The interior had been transformed into a Roman amphitheatre, surrounded by Italian gardens, large white columns reaching their tops into the air, which, with scenic paintings around the walls, gave the necessary perspective to present the illusion that it was outdoors. Naturally the American colors were in evidence, accompanied by the flags of England and Canada, and they blended perfectly with the masses of white and green that abounded there.

The Roman scheme was carried out further by an esplanade which took the place of the regular entrance and exits, and this accentuated the beauty of the arena because it was viewed from its best point the moment one stepped within. There were a score of booths erected where were displayed all the Rexall remedies. These spaces were prettily decorated with flowers which were entwined about the lattice work so that they added to the general beauty of the scene. This was especially true at night, when myriads of tiny electric lights of different colors glowed from every conceivable crevice and from the centres of beautiful flowers.

President Louis K. Liggett called the convention to order and then he introduced Hon. John F. Fitzgerald, Mayor of Boston, to the gathering. There were many present who knew Mayor Fitzgerald personally and many more who had heard much about him, and he was given a most hearty reception. The Mayor welcomed the visitors to Boston, and he told them that he considered it a high tribute to the city that the United Drug Company stockholders thought so much of the Hub that they were willing to sacrifice their time in coming long distances to meet here. He also paid a tribute to the company for locating here and adding much to the wealth of the city, not only in taxes, but also in giving employment to hundreds of men and women. He ended by praising President Liggett for his brilliant conception of the Rexall idea and his efforts in making it such an industrial success. When Mayor Fitzgerald finished he was given an ovation, the cheering lasting several minutes. Then there was an impromptu reception when the mayor was introduced to many of those from far off points.

When the regular business was resumed lunch was accomplished. President Liggett outlined what had been accomplished during the past year and the number of stockholders who had been added to the company.

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

THIRTY Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury, Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes: "For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes affected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifying the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's.

ent there are nearly 4,000 druggists affiliated with the company, representing the leading ones in that many cities and towns in the United States and Canada, all working with the one idea of advancing Rexall remedies. The general order of business was followed by discussions in which many participated, the result being an exchange of ideas of great benefit to all.

The keynote of the business sessions was the advancement of the sale of pure drugs and the prevention of the sale of noxious preparations, so that purchasers might be certain that they were getting the best drugs obtainable at the lowest possible price, allowing a fair margin of profit to the dealer. The newer stockholders learned from their talks with the older ones how valuable the co-operative idea had been because it eliminated the middleman; how during the past eight years business had increased largely because the purchasers had confidence in Rexall remedies, and this allowed the company—the largest organizations of its kind in the world—to buy its drugs in such wholesale quantities as to permit a great saving, with the natural result that the quality was always bound to be excellent. A large number of the stockholders, having been in business for many years, were able to speak words of wisdom from experience, and their words were listened to carefully, while on the other hand these older men were glad to hear the younger men give their opinions, realizing that this is an age of progressive ideas and young, fresh mind contain many kernels of value.

Tuesday afternoon while the men were attending the business session, the ladies were treated to a motor trip. Over a hundred automobiles had been engaged and a trip planned that gave the ladies a splendid idea of the many historical places in and around Boston. After visiting such places as Faneuil Hall, the Old State House, the site of the Boston massacre, the place where the members of the Boston tea party performed their celebrated act, the old North Church where Paul Revere saw the warning lights hung, they were driven across the river to Bunker Hill and then over the road to Lexington and Concord, where the first struggles of the Revolution took place. It was a memorable trip and the ladies saw more in a few hours than they could have learned from books in a month's time. On returning to the city the route took them through Boston's celebrated park system. One of the finest in the country. That evening they attended the Tremont Theatre, the entire house having been bought out for the performance of "The Fortune Hunter," presented by John Barrymore and an all-star cast of New York favorites.

Wednesday was even more of a red-letter day for pleasure because everyone participated in the outing, which, like everything else that was carried out, was arranged on a mammoth scale. In the morning while the men were attending the business session the ladies were taken to the Riverside recreation grounds in special motor cars. Motor boats and canoes were available for hire on and down the Charles river, while for those who preferred to remain on shore there was an exhibition of fancy swimming and diving by a company of girls who had been performing all summer at one of the big beach resorts. The gentlemen ended their session early and went to the grounds, arriving there in time for luncheon. The afternoon was devoted to all sorts of outdoor sports, some of them arranged for the members of the party, the others being for amateurs and professionals. Pretty soon vents in the way of fancy parades, horns, caps, etc., were given out as mementoes of the occasion. The special feature of the afternoon was the appearance of Charles Foster Willard, the noted aviator, with one of Gler Curtiss' biplanes. Mr. Willard soared up in the air and did all sorts of things, to the amazement of the party, many of whom had never seen an aeroplane operated before. The astonishing ease with which Mr. Willard flew around the track, sometimes close to the ground, and again hundreds of feet in the air, turned in circles at sharp angles, dropped miniature bombs down in a circle, and landed with the lightness of a bird after gliding down in graceful sweeps from a high altitude, delighted the onlookers.

When it began to grow dark red lights were lit in all sections of the grounds. There were thousands of them and they cast a soft glow all over the place, those near the banks reflecting from the river, adding to the beauty of the scene. A large tent had been set up and nearby on the river bank immense open fireplaces had been built of field rocks. There a force of chefs from Cook's, Boston's foremost caterer, prepared what proved to be the largest outdoor clam bake ever given in Boston. It was one of the old-fashioned bakes, where the clams were served piping hot, and with the side dishes of roast corn and other appetizing dainties made a most enjoyable meal. It was after 8 when the last of the good things had been eaten, but there was more entertainment to follow. The tent was then ablaze with electric lights, and for two hours a splendid vaudeville program was put on, a number of the best acts from Boston theatres having been brought out in motor cars for the purpose. For those who were inclined to dance the two big pavilions, beautifully decorated, were thrown open and orchestras played captivating airs. Another place was given over to those who wished to have a smoke-talk quietly and many took advantage of it. Others enjoyed themselves singing parodies composed for the occasion. Special cars brought everyone back to the city happy, though a bit tired, perhaps before midnight.

Thursday morning while the gentlemen were attending the business session shopping trips were arranged for the ladies. At 10 o'clock they all gathered at the United Drug Company laboratories, where a buffet luncheon was served. Then followed an inspection of the laboratories. This proved very interesting, for an exhibition of how various articles that have made the name Rexall famous are manufactured was demonstrated by the experts. The visitors got some idea of the immense plant occupied by their company, which covers six acres of floor space and gives employment to about 1,000 people. A visit was also made to the plant where chocolates are made, and it was seen that everything pertaining to sanitary conditions was in evidence in turning out the high grade Liggett and Fenway confections. This plant employs several hundred people, too.

The banquet Thursday evening was a fitting climax to the three days' convention. While the party was visiting the laboratories a big force of workmen was busily engaged removing the booths in the Boston Arena building and replacing them with tables, so that when evening arrived and the gentlemen escorted the ladies arrived at the place the transformation was astonishingly complete. Here again everything was on the same mammoth scale.

that marked the preceding events. The head table alone was 80 feet long. With thousands of lights shining, the perfume from hundreds of prettily arranged floral decorations pervading the air, delightful music stealing across from a hidden bower, ladies in beautiful evening gowns, gentlemen arrayed in spotless black and white, tables heaped with banquet fixtures, it made a beautiful composite picture. Yet there was nothing savoring of affectation or primness about the gathering. It was like a big, happy family. The small dealer in the little town rubbed elbows and chatted amicably with the proprietor of the largest store in a metropolis, for this is the spirit that prevails all through the organization and insures its success. The music for the banquet was furnished by the famous Boston orchestra, Belle Yeaton Renfrew, conductor, the same orchestra that supplied the music at the clam bake outing.

President George W. Coleman of the Pilgrim Publicity Association of Boston, an organization comprising the leading advertising men of New England, was toastmaster. He proved a brilliant one, too. He had the happy faculty of introducing each speaker in an entirely different manner from the preceding one. The first one he called upon after all the good things had been put away and the ladies were admiring their handsome lace fans and the gentlemen were attaching the silver and silk watch fobs presented to them as mementoes of the occasion, was Rev. A. Berle one of the best known clergymen in the East. He responded to the toast, "To the ladies." He made a capital address punctuated with witticisms that kept everyone interested, and he was applauded heartily when he ended. Hon. P. H. Sullivan of Manchester, N. H., was next introduced. His talk was more along business lines, and it made an admirable contrast with the Rev. Mr. Berle's talk. Mr. Creswell McLaughlin of Cornwall-on-the-Hudson was then called. His topic was "Adam and His Rib." As the subject denotes, it was amusing Mr. McLaughlin kept everyone convulsed, and his references to the original table decorations, comprising such novelties as aeroplanes, automobiles, etc., in which Adam and his co-relation could soar through space, made an exceptional bright speech all the more entertaining. Mr. Robert Frothingham of Everybody's Magazine was the next speaker. Here again variety was introduced, for he spoke on "Advertising as an Asset." It was a splendid address, full of suggestions that made a deep impression upon his hearers. Mr. Walter E. Anderson, known as Boston's contra-tenor, was then asked to sing. The remarkable range of his voice and the rapidity with which he changed from one key to another added much to the evening's program. Mr. Mart King of Newark, N. J., was the final speaker. His subject was "Stories to Remember." It proved a delightful ending to the speaking. The menu was handsomely gotten up and they will prove valuable souvenirs also. So will the checkbooks that contained the tickets to everything. The banquet then ended as stated in the opening paragraph, leaving a train of pleasant recollections in the minds of those who participated in the convention.

The next meeting is in Richmond, Virginia. Mr. E. W. Mair, who handles the Rexall Companies Remedy, is a member of this company and was unable to attend the convention.

EARL GREY AS A COMMISSIONER.

Ottawa, Oct. 3.—The visit which Earl Grey is to make to the West Indies this winter, is not as generally understood for pleasure. It is in fact that fulfillment of an important mission, to be undertaken at the express request of the British Government, which asked the Governor-General to carefully follow the recent investigations of the Royal Commission which has just presented its report upon the relations between Canada and the West Indies. His Excellency's instructions are understood to include the important questions of steamship and cable connections, both of which were emphasized in the report of the commission presented last week. The British Government is anxious to aid in the "All-Red" character of such communications, and would prefer to subsidize connections via Halifax or St. John and the direct Canadian Cable than to give aid to any connections via New York or Boston. Earl Grey will, of course, report to the Imperial Government. He will be the commissioner, and his name will represent the Canadian Government.

THIRD OPERATION PREVENTED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was so sick that two of the best doctors in Chicago said I would die if I did not have an operation. I had already had two operations, and they wanted me to go through a third one. I suffered day and night from inflammation and a small tumor, and never thought of seeing a well day again. A friend told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her, and I tried it, and after the third bottle was cured."—MRS. ALYSSA SPERLING, 11 Langdon Street, Chicago, Ill.

If you are ill do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until an operation is necessary, but build up the feminine system, and remove the cause of those distressing aches and pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively restored the health of thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.
