

Paying for a Reputation

"Why pay for the reputation that any article has?" say some purchasers

Because the reputation that his trade-mark has is the most valuable asset of many a manufacturer. He can't afford to risk that reputation by selling you inferior goods. That's why we handle the Kodak line in our photographic department. The Kodak company cannot afford to put out an inferior article.

We sell KODAK FILM exclusively because it is properly orthochromatic—because it is the dependable film. Greatest speed, greatest certainty of good results. We have the size to fit your camera

HARVESTING MACHINERY

The Deering Reapers and Binders always had the reputation of being lightest in draft and most durable, but this year we are selling a New Improved Deering Binder which means we have something very superior and years in advance of any other competition

Before purchasing a reaper or Binder it will pay you to look the Deering over and get our prices. We can refer you to good farmers in your own locality, which is our best advertisement. In fact they are the only binders which two ordinary horses can handle satisfactorily.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

ful and confident that the genius of the man that for so long past has guided the Liberal party to victory and won the plaudits of friends and foe alike, can again be depended upon to steer safely through any and every crisis that may confront him.

In concluding perhaps it is well to note that the accomplishment of the reciprocity legislation in the United States is significant of the trend of the times, and a thing which few Canadians would have thought possible a year ago. The constitution of the nation is notoriously opposed to the facilitating of diplomatic arrangements. The protective spirit has been as universal and as intense throughout the country that tariff revision has been an idle dream until a few months ago. All these and many other obstacles have been overcome by the strategy of President Taft. When the United States Senate passed the reciprocity agreement they opened the markets of that country to all of the important natural products of Canada at a time when the United States is just developing a consumption demand in excess of its own supplies. It opens that market to Canada alone. The consumers of that new market are people with great quantities of money to spend, and a determination to get the best in return for it. The climate and soil of Canada are such as to enable us to produce the best of almost any class of products to which the northern situation is favorable. And the brains of Canadians ought to be as apt at turning the climate and soil to advantage as those of any other people.

Mr. Borden and the Conservative party insist that Canada shall take no notice of this conditional action on the part of the United States but should continue on its way as if nothing had happened, as if no markets were available to us still, but those of Europe, and as if our destiny on this continent required that we should have absolutely to do with our neighbors. It is a strange demand, especially when coupled with an attempt by the present regrettable tactics of the Opposition. The issue now has dwindled down to this one side or partner to the agreement made last autumn has spoken. It is now up to Canadians to secure these advantages which they have been endeavoring to acquire during the forty years.
