GOOD CORNER.

Moose meat on the bill of fare. Jack Frost somewhat obstructed the farmer in the discharge of his duties, a few days last week.

The Good Bros. made a success of their hunting trip to the Miramichi game territory this fall, as they were fortunate enough to secure two moose and a deer. Their mother, and Mrs. David Good accompanied them.

The writer and daughter visited friends in Hodgdon, Me., last Sunday and Monday. I found them not to be the cruel hideous monsters, ready to swallow me whole, boots and all, as represented by the Conservatives; but an honest industrious class of farmers who possess many qualities that Canadians would do well to copy. Their cigars are equally as good as ours and their "spearhead" promotes one to write poetry.

J. A. Good holds the record for plowing. With two teams he plowed eight acres in one day, and with the same teams he turned twenty-four acres in four days. Ambrose is usually known as a quiet law abiding citizen; but when he starts in to plow, it is well to keep out of his way.

James McCleary of Brookville, while hunting in this vicinity last week made a short call on the writer.

The Farmers Line has been extended as far south as our Post Office, and it is safe to predict that the N. B. Telephone Co. will lose many subscribers in this vicinity in the near future.

If it ever again falls to my lot to seek a life partner, there is one class of young ladies that I will most certainly give a wide berth, as they are continually getting me into trouble. These are newspaper composers. Some time ago I wrote an item in which I stated that a certain man was building a house, that he had the frame up; but the compositor substituted an "r" for the "u", and it read: "Mr — is building a horse, he has the frame up." Now as the gentleman in question had a very bony horse, I came nearly getting a black eye as a result of the error. (This does not apply to the Sentinel.)

The housefly is experiencing difficulties these mornings with cold feet. A Conservative politician one morning during our recent election campaign, was busy in his office getting up notes for his evening speech, when the door opened and a little boy entered with a small basket in which were six little kittens. "Want a tat?" asked the youthful vendor, "dood tats, Conservative tats too."

The politician was so pleased, especially at the concluding sentence of his description, that he bought one of the kittens from the little chap and sent him away feeling very happy. About a week after this same Conservative orator chanced to be in the office of a Liberal friend discussing the outcome of the election when the door bell rang. The Conservative listened to the same childish voice. "Want a tat? dood tats, Liberal tats." This was more than the orator could stand. "Look here kid," said he in a gruff voice, didn't you tell me one morning last week that those were Conservative cats?"

Yep! replied the kid, "guess I did, but dat was before dey dot their eyes open."

Willmot Watters has applied for a position on the Grand Trunk railway. Tommy is somewhat defective in understanding and as he happened to be in the village last Saturday evening he found himself somewhat embarrassed when he tried to adapt himself to suit circumstances. Seeing that most young men had one of the fair sex linked to his sleeve, Tommy resolved to find one also. Finding one young lady that appeared to have no companion, he asked her if he could escort her home. Her reply was in the negative, expressed in tones that could not be mistaken even by Tommy. But the youth was not to be nonplussed so easily. Giving her a look of surprise, mingled with contempt, he drawled out: "Why you don't know what's good for yourself."
