before. When I did get up I hobbled like an old woman and almost went distracted, but came to myself as I saw the note on the floor-the note I was told to burn. Lifting it, I moved toward the fireplace, but got a fright on the way and stopped in the middle of the floor and looked back. I thought

I had beard my sister speak. "But the fancy passed as I saw how still she lay, and I went on after awhile and threw the note into the one small fame which was all that was left of the fire. I saw it caught by a draft from the door behind me and go flam ing up the chimney.

"Some of my trouble seemed to go with the note, and I lifted a pillow from the window seat near by and covered ber face. I must have done more. must have covered the whole lounge with pillows and cushions, for presently my mind cleared again, and recollected that it was something about the poison. I was to put the vial in her hand-or was I to throw it from the window? Something was to be thrown from the window-it must be the vial. But I couldn't lift the window, so, having found the vial stand ing on the table beside the little flask. I carried it into the closet where there was a window opening inward, and I dropped it out of that and thought I had done all. But when I came back and saw Adelaide's coat lying in a beap where she had thrown it I recalled that she had said something about this, but what I didn't know. So I lifted it and put it in the closet-why I cannot say. Then I set my mind on going home.

"But there was something to do first -something not in that room. It was to telephone the police. I seized the receiver, and when central answered I said something about the Whispering Pines and wanting help. This is all 1 remember about that.
