VISIT THE SCHOOLS.

If a woman owns a valuable horse that she is obliged to board at a livery-stable, she goes occasionally to see the animal in its stall. No matter how much confidence she may have in the keeper of the stable, she wishes to assure herself that the horse has the right kind of food and enough of it, and is otherwise properly cared for.

So, too, with the man who owns a farm that he has put in charge of a superintendent. He is not content to rely on the superintendent's reports. He wants to see for himself whether the work is being properly planned and the soil wisely tilled; whether he can visit the place whenever he can, and talks things over with him.

But when it comes to children, possessions that this man and this woman value above everything else in the world, they turn them over to the hands of others. They have only a small part in their lives, and whom they may never have seen, and allow year after year to pass without ever paying a visit to the shop where these managers are doing their important work—in other words, the schools.

The years in school are the most momentous in the child's whole life. The farm is now in the hands of the superintendent, who will determine whether the soil is to become truly fertile and remain productive through a long future, or whether it is to be superficially cultivated, for a mere show and temporary crop. It is a time when every step of the child's progress should be watched by the parents, and when the lessons and daily influences of the schoolroom should be supplemented by intelligent co-operation in the home.

No body of men and women in the country stand on a higher plane than the teachers in the public schools. They work hard, for small pay, unselfishly striving to make the most of the inestimable wealth that the nation has entrusted to them. But they cannot do it all. Instead of being criticized by those who have no first-hand knowledge of their work, and discouraged by apparent indifference, they deserve to be cheered by intelligent interest and stimulated by close acquaintance with parents, and by the visits of parents to the schools.

If, then, you have never darkened the door of the building where your child studies, what right have you to complain of his lack of progress? Do you really know anything about it?

THE PEOPLE'S CHAMPION.

In the election of Woodrow Wilson to the presidency of the United States the electors have vindicated their claim to sanity and common sense. His program of political policy made him the people's champion, as against entrenched privilege. His election is a blow to the omnipotence of the money power, and means the end of the abuse of the prospective principle for the enrichment of the few, and of injustice to the many. In the reforms that should be expected under his administration, he has the people at his back, and the bitter opposition he will receive from the big interests, will be made more or less nugatory by this fact. President-elect Wilson is a scholar and a gentleman. It is hard to conceive him as a tail-twister; so that the prospect for improved or continuously good international relations are promising. As far as sentiment goes, and this is all we are called upon to express, his election is almost universally popular in Canada. The best we can wish for our great neighbor is that he may in office be able to fulfil the promise of his aspiration for it.

A LESSON IN ADVERTISING.

Says an American exchange—"It would not be necessary to ask the Canadian Pacific railway if advertising pays. The American public has heard a great deal about emigration from this country to Canada. The annual departure of thousands of our farmers to the great Northwest is due largely to the fact that the Canadian Pacific has been able to create the impression that it can give the stranger in Canadian territory opened for settlement something better than he has secured in the United States. By judicious advertising the railroad corporation has brought inquiries from thousands of correspondents. It has gone about the business of demonstrating that it can 'produce the goods.' It has kept faith with every settler. There has been no misrepresentation. Each man's personal resources are ascertained and his wants in the farming line are carefully inquired about. Then land is named and the prospective settler has an opportunity to inquire into his chances of success in the event of his becoming one of the pioneers of the Canadian Far West. Any merchant might learn a valuable lesson from the method of the Canadian Pacific.

October has been one of the best periods of the whole year—Exchange—New Brunswick offers superior attractions all the year round. In the summer we have green hills and blue skies, and as the green of the hills passes by, by easy transition, into the world defying colors of autumn, such a picture is unfolded as to the nation has entrusted to them. make instant and powerful appeal to those who are at all responsive to the glories of nature. And it is no different in the winter. What winter should be, it is in New Brunswick. But, nevertheless, the New Brunswick winter is enjoyable. Winter sports may be enjoyed to the utmost, and with the reddening of the blood there comes the full realization of the joy of living.

To those who are unfortunate enough to make their homes elsewhere, New Brunswick would be a revelation.

The Fredericton Mail says of the police situation in that city: "The attempt being made in certain quarters to make scapegoats of the United members of the police force is a little transparent to go down with the public. If the police are found guilty of wrong-doing they will be punished, but there is no reason why the 'higher ups' should get off in a Co., ex-professor of political economy. If the aldermen respond to the demoralization of the police, the public, we would suggest that they tender their resignations. The chairman of the police commission has been so busy during the year dispensing patronage for domination and local governments that he apparently forgot all about the police force."

Did You—Yet?

Many have accepted the unusual offer. They are glad. Let your dealer introduce you also, to this tea of exceptionally mellow strength. This condition is attached:

"I am devoted to the Democratic party," Mr. Wilson has declared, "because I believe that amid a multitude of blunders, no doubt, it has been trying to steer by the standards set up in ancient days when our conception of democracy was so clear eyed and simple and that no party has approximated more nearly than it has the efforts to serve the people rather than the special interests."

The discouraging thing about the high price of beef is the length of time it takes for a steer to grow to a marketable size. A single season may quite change the situation in the matter of pork, but even if every dollar started to raise cattle now, it would be three years before the new supply would be ready to meet the constantly growing demand.

Through the courtesy of Principal Floyd we are enabled to publish the school report for October. Next month the report will embrace all the departments. The public is always deeply interested in these reports and the schools are institutions which hold a warm place in the hearts of the people of Woodstock.

Mr. Armand Lavergne, Mr. Bourassa's lieutenant, says he was offered a portfolio in the Borden government. Mr. Borden was at least not devoid of gratitude. But for Bourassa and Lavergne he would be without a working majority.—London Advertiser.

Cheer up! the new Secretary of Agriculture has found a market for potatoes in South Africa. After all the province is fortunate in having a man who can play the part of a Moses.

The coal shortage is beginning to be felt, and as the supply shortens the price lengthens.

We would like to see T. A. Ruspinch, but there is no reason why sell, manager of the Russell Motor Co., ex-professor of political economy and ex-secretary of the Canadian Manufacturers' association, explain how any Canadian citizen is better off by buying one of his automobiles for $2,500 when the same quality of car is sold south of the 35th parallel for $1,900. This is a year dispensing patronage for the riddle that we cannot solve.—Gardner's Guide.

The Board of Health is supposed to safeguard both its own citizens and the people of other communities, and there should be no let up of the vigor of local quarantine. Those who could carry disease should be restrained from commingling with others. There is no need of hysteria but actions should be guided by reason.

The "upper crust" of the newly built part of Broadway is proving durable, and giving entire satisfaction. It is probable that further work will not be necessary on this street.

The war in the Balkans will cost about four million or five million dollars a day, according to a calculation made by the New York Post, and the victor will have very little chance of getting back his costs.

The Richibucto Review is running a column in French, for the accommodation of the large French population of Kent County, Editor Scott knows how to rise to the exigency of the occasion.

Jack Johnson has been repudiated by the colored people. But wait till he goes out and wins another prize fight!

With all respect to "law-abiding citizenship," will some one kindly point out a law that isn't violated?

There is plenty of law if it is only put in force.

Departmental Store Improvements

The Manzer Departmental and Oak Hall Emporium has for some time been at the disadvantage of inadequate space for the display and management of its colossal and varied stock of merchandise. The enterprising business proprietor has begun a series of important changes in order to afford sufficient floor space and fixtures. The entire second story flat over the Bank of Montreal branch, in the Dr. Guy Smith building, has been leased and is now occupied. The entrance is from the Oak Hall second story department and is furnished with a fire-proof sliding door.

The improvement in the Main St. store, Lindsay building, will probably take place next month, when the removal of partitions will render available the entire space and prove of great importance towards the perfection of arrangement of stock, as well as the endeavour which will be employed that the visits of patrons of the store will be pleasing as well as profitable.
