WEDDING

PACKARD-STEPHENSON

A very pleasant company to the number of 135 gathered at the home of Mr and Mrs C. E. Stephenson, Florenceville, on Wednesday evening, March 20th, at 6 p.m., to witness the marriage of their youngest daughter, Faye Mabel, to Elbridge Decker Packard, eldest son of Webster and the late Eva Packard of Bridgewater, Maine. They were attended by Edwin Lorne Mackay, cousin of the bride, and Miss Isadore Genson, friend.

The bride looked very nice in cream serge, heavily trimmed with cream satin, ribbon and fringe, with bridal veil and white satin slippers, while the bridesmaid wore pink cashmere very prettily trimmed with black fringe. Mrs. Roland Semple, of East Florenceville, rendered the wedding march on the piano very effectively, while Rev. Mr. Manuel, Presbyterian, performed the religious service very impressively. Immediately after the ceremony and congratulations, dinner was served at the tables, and very many were the wishes tendered the young couple by their many friends for a long and happy life. The bride will be very much missed by her many friends as she was a great favorite with old and young by her vivacity and cleverness and will be long missed at all the homes she frequented, as she was always the life of any party or place she attended. On Thursday afternoon the happy couple left for Robinson, Maine, where a large reception of about 200 people was held on Thursday evening in Rideout's hall, Mr. Rideout being an uncle of the groom. The bride's reception dress was very beautiful, being of shell pink albatross, heavily trimmed with pink satin and black fringe, with pink satin covered buttons with black cord loops. The bride and groom received the congratulations of their friends seated on a sofa on the platform with their attendants standing on either side of them. As a bride always looks very lovely, we will have to in this case say that the groom is a very fine-looking young man and has made many friends around the bride's home the past winter, wherever he has gone, and is a young man of most estimable character. Refreshments of sandwiches and cake with tea and coffee was served at 12 o'clock at the reception and afterward fruit and cigars were passed, after which dancing was indulged in by old and young. The reception broke up about 2 1/2 p.m., every one voting it the time of their lives. On Saturday, March 23rd, the young couple took a 9 o'clock train for Waterville, Maine, where they will be the guests of the bride's sister, Mrs. Ira Parkhurst, for two weeks. The bride's travelling dress was of green broadcloth with coat, trimmed with black black satin. Her travelling hat was of green velvet faced with black velvet and trimmed with green wings. Her appearance suit is fawn cloth with hair stripe of green, trimmed very prettily with green satin and covered satin buttons and loops.

Her hat is of cream satin with facing of black velvet, with a beautiful black willow plume, with black jet ornaments. The presents at both wedding and reception were beautiful being nearly all silver. Those that were present at the reception from this place were: O. E. Stephenson, father of the bride, and Rex Stephenson, brother, who came down from Green River to be present at the wedding. Ed Mackay, Miss Ennis Perkins, Centerville, Bertram and Fred Perry, Connell, and George and Fay Perley, Connell. We can truly say that what is Carleton Co's loss is Aroostook Co's gain.

MR. DIFEIN INTERVIEWS THE PROVINCIAL SECRETARY

A Man of Superior Intelligence—Very Frank and Says he is a Tory—Talks Economy and Announces $56,000 Deficit

I left off last week where Flemming was talking. He's one of the busiest talkers I ever met.

There was just one thing I didn't like about him. That was his clothes.

If he was mine I'd dress him different.

It's none of my business but his coat wasn't becoming to him and he wants to shift when he goes after the former vote. He's one of those fellows that look's best in his shirt sleeves.

Mr. Flemming has one awful good quality. He is perfectly democratic in his tastes.

He would just as soon talk to a hackman as to the Governor General.

Just give him some one who will let him do all the talking and not interrupt and he will babble right along as happy as a joyous child.

He can go right along with his biography from chapter to chapter without making a single break, or missing a punctuation mark.

Before I tell you of the other men that I met I must speak of Colonel Harry McLeod, who is holding down the chair of the Provincial Secretary.

As soon as I was introduced Mr. McLeod told me he was glad to see me and he would be pleased if I would interview him.

"Interviews," says he, "are as necessary to the politician as Walkers rye is to a celebration on the appointment of new postmaster in Woodstock."

"I would just as soon interview you as not," says I, "and under modern scientific methods, where the interviewer uses a properly sterilized fountain pen, it can be done without pain."

To begin with, do you expect to be the next Federal representative from York?

He paused.

There was no one to tell him what to say and under these circumstances it is hard for some men to talk, but after what I could see was an awful struggle, he said:

"I don't know."

That struck me as being diplomatic and at the same time frank and I put my next question with the idea of giving him a chance to expand on well known lines.

"Upon what," says I, "do you base your claim to the office of Provincial Secretary?"

"On my legislative service," says he, "I have been in the local legislature several terms and have done nothing."

"That alone has led many to high office in the tory government, but it did not satisfy me. I assisted in almost getting that Hazen-Flemming Electric Railway. I repeated a great speech on this subject, mostly about myself with strong and sarcastic allusions to Carvell and Pugsley, who up to that time had never heard of me. Since being Provincial Secretary I have had the pleasure of voting for the Pugsley-Carvell railway scheme, which I had strongly opposed."

"I talked economy and voted for all the appropriation bills and was most successful in announcing a deficit of $56,000 to which is to be added $146,554.76, in short I showed myself to be a modern Tory statesman."

"Well," says I, "I think you'll win the nomination for Ottawa unless Crockett gets more votes than you, but perhaps you will both get the bag, in which case bets should be flagged."

Not desiring to further embarrass the Col. by asking him questions which he could not answer, and knowing he would try no matter what they were, I wound up the interview (Continued on page ten)
