

BRITISH COLUMBIA ORANGEMEN AND HOME RULE

(Vancouver Sun.)

Not once in a decade, perhaps in a generation, do we find so delicious an example of unconscious humor as the message of the Vancouver Orangemen to the "Orangemen and other loyal Protestants of Ulster." For grandiloquent phraseology, for classic diction, for the burning sentiments of the true Celt, that message must stand as a literary monument to the genius of W. B. County Master Professor Odium. None but the redoubtable Professor could have harnessed the English language and made it express such exhorting denunciation of the papacy nor such heart-string-thrumming sympathy for the last-ditch Orangemen of Ulster as that message conveys.

Had it been uttered upon Smithfield amid the raging fires upon whose mounting flames the souls of martyrs were borne to the bosom of Abraham it could not have been more pregnant with ardent loyalty, of zeal for "the cause," nor of lofty self-sacrifice. As a confection of words it is safe to say no such magnificent effort has ever before been produced in Vancouver, perhaps in all Canada.

How heartening it must be to the Ulster Orangemen to know that "we, thirty Orange lodges in Vancouver, appreciate your heroic struggles which are of such vast moment to the British Empire. We admire your invincible spirit, honor your loyalty, revere your lofty ideals, glory in your righteous cause, extend to you our sympathy and prayers, and offer you material aid at the moment of call."

All this and more to the extent of half a column set in eleven point, cabled regardless of expense.

Also how comforting to Ulster Orangemen to know that Vancouver Orangemen do

"clearly perceive the vastness of your struggles; for arrayed against you is the world-wide power known as the Papacy, and also every nation on earth which would rejoice in the downfall of Britannia."

We know, too, according to the Vancouver Orangemen, that Aquith, Churchill and Lloyd George are under the complete mastery and domination of their papist masters who design to bring, "not a blessing to South and West Ireland, but a curse to Protestant Britain."

Also the Ulster Orangemen are assured that "our ringing, clarion, dominating battle shout we send across our fair Dominion and over the Atlantic Ocean to the Orangemen and other militant loyalists now making a magnificent fight against terrible odds. Stand firm."

Isn't it perfectly grand? And God help the desecrating, devil-inspired, doubly-damned renegade traitor who would dare as much as think of "hot air" when the cable is pulsating with such ringing waves of heaven-inspired sentimental loyalty and God-given patriotism.

And then, oh, ye gods! why was not the gift of humor vouchsafed to W. B. County Master Odium before he penned these pregnant words when the message says: "Canada taught the priestly machine-manipulators a lesson last September, and, if necessary, will give the hordes of Jesuits another and a more effective lesson."

Some of us had been under the impression that Canada in September last was voting on the question of reciprocity with the United States, a policy to which the Dominion Government had committed itself and for which it took its life in its hands—and got assassinated.

Of course several side-issues were imported into the discussion, notably "the appeal to the British-born" by one Harthur 'Awkes.' But it is only now that I learn with amazement, horror, and a sense of degradation that Canada was menaced with "hordes of Jesuits," and words fail to express the relief and the downright feeling of gratitude that pervade my entire being—the whole 186 pounds—to know that Canada on September 21 last was delivered from the horrible fate hinted at in this fiery message from the Vancouver to the Ulster Orangemen. Lord save us, but it was a close shave!

But W. B. County Master Odium forewent to say some things in that message. He discreetly withheld some queer facts from the brethren in Ulster. For instance, although he aviates in the upper regions of supernatural loyalty, patriotism and love of the flag, he forgets to mention that he, all his Vancouver brethren, and a brother-member whom they voted to the House of Commons and all the other Canadian Orangemen, lined up cheek by jowl with the papist, rebel Nationalists of Quebec in their effort to defeat the Liberal Government. W. B. Odium omitted to say that the Orangemen of Vancouver, of Ontario and of Manitoba are today giving their succor, aid and support to a government partly composed of and dominated by that most uncompromising Jesuit—Hon. F. D. Monk—and other Nationalists whose political philosophy is separation from the Empire, whose flag is the tricolor, whose religion is the hated popery. Also he forgot to mention that Colonel Sam Hughes, redoubtable leader of Orangeism in Ontario, meekly sits at the council table of Canada in company with three Nationalists to whose doctrines, creeds and politics in lodge and on the Ontario hustings he is the sworn enemy.

The writer of this article is an Orangeman; he comes of Orange stock of many generations before him in Ireland and in Canada, but he has never yet found his political philosophy to lead him into the company with which the Orange body of Canada now finds itself in political alliance. The old principle of "equal rights to all"—and not an Orangeman but knows the significance of that phrase—is good enough for me. For hypocritical cant, for bombastic hot air, for denunciation of those who differ from us in creed, there is no support in Orange precepts. Orangeism in Canada is being degraded in the dust by political intriguers, for whose service and advancement false leaders, erratic word conjurers, and blatant humbugs are using it. Orange men should take a quiet hour to study the principles of their order and to pray to Almighty God for the discernment and strength to live up to them. One of the first lessons taught to an Orangeman is the value of a discreet tongue, and another is tolerance of the other fellow's religious convictions. It is pretty hard to convince the world that this is true when you read or hear some of the things that some Orangemen write or say.
