

THE YOUNGER SET

Somebody was knocking. He swung out of bed, stepped into his bath slippers and, passing swiftly to the door, opened it. Gerald stood there, fully dressed.

"I'm going to town on the early train," began the boy. "I thought I'd tell you."

The dawn was no paler than the boy's face, no more desolate. Trouble was his, the same old trouble that has dogged the trail of folly since time began, and Selwyn knew it and waited.

At last the boy broke out: "This is a cowardly trick, this slinking in to you with all my troubles after what you've done for me, after the rotten way I've treated you. Philip, I can't tell you; I simply cannot. It's so contemptible, and you warned me, and I owe you already so much."

"You owe me a little money," observed Selwyn, with a careless smile. "And you've a lifetime to pay it in. What is the trouble now? Do you need more? I haven't an awful lot, old fellow, worse luck, but what I have is at your call, as you know perfectly well. Is that all that is worrying you?"

"No, not all. I—Neergard has lent me money—done things—placed me under obligations. I liked him, you know. I trusted him. People he desired to know I made him known to. He was a—trifle peremptory at times, as though my obligations to him left me no choice but to take him to such people as he desired to meet. We—we had trouble recently."

"What sort?"

"Personal. I felt—began to feel—the pressure on me. There was at moments something almost of menace in his requests and suggestions, an importunity I did not exactly understand. And then he said something to me."

"Go on. What?"

"He'd been hinting at it before, and even when I found him jolliest and most amusing and companionable I never thought of him as a—social possibility—I mean among those who really count—like my own people."

"Yes, my boy, I see. Go on. When did he ask to be presented to your sister?"

"W—who told you that?" asked the boy, with an angry flush.

"You did—almost. You were going to anyway. So that was it, was it? That was when you realized a few things—understood one or two things, was it not? And how did you reply? Arrogantly, I suppose."

"Yes."

"With—a—some little show of—a—contempt?"

"Yes, I suppose so."

"Exactly. And Neergard was put out slightly?"

"Yes," said the boy, losing some of his color. "I—a moment afterward I was sorry I had spoken so plainly, but I need not have been. He was very ugly about it."

"Threats of calling loans?" asked Selwyn, smiling.

"Hints; not exactly threats. I was in a bad way too." The boy winced and swallowed hard; then, with sudden white desperation stamped on his drawn face, he added: "Oh, Philip, it—it is disgraceful enough, but how am I going to tell you the rest? How can I speak of this matter to you?"

"What matter?"

"A—about—about Mrs. Ruthven."

"What matter?" repeated Selwyn. His voice rang a little, but the color had fled from his face.

"She was—Jack Ruthven charged her with—and me—charged me with—"

"You!"

"Yes."

"Well, it was a lie, wasn't it?" Selwyn's ashy lips scarcely moved, but his eyes were narrowing to a glimmer. "It was a lie, wasn't it?" he repeated.

"Yes, a lie. I'd say it, anyway, you understand, but it really was a lie."

Selwyn quietly leaned back in his chair. A little color returned to his cheeks.

"All right, old fellow"—his voice scarcely quivered—"all right. Go on. I knew, of course, that Ruthven lied, but it was part of the story to hear you say so. Go on. What did Ruthven do?"

"There has been a separation," said the boy in a low voice. "He behaved like a dirty cad. She had no resources, no means of support." He hesitated, moistening his dry lips with his tongue. "Mrs. Ruthven has been very, very kind to me. I was—I am fond of her. Oh, I know well enough I never had any business to meet her. I behaved abominably toward you and the family. But it was done. I knew her and liked her tremendously. She was the only one who was decent to me, who tried to keep me from acting like a fool about cards."

"Did she try?"

WOMAN SUFFERED TEN YEARS

From Female Ills—Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Belleville, N.S., Canada.—"I doctored for ten years for female troubles and did not get well. I read in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. I write now to tell you that I am cured. You can publish my letter as a testimonial."

—Mrs. SUVRINE BABINE, Belleville, Nova Scotia, Canada.

Another Woman Recovers.

Auburn, N. Y.—"I suffered from nervousness for ten years, and had such organic pains that sometimes I would lie in bed four days at a time, could not eat or sleep and did not want anyone to talk to me or bother me at all. Sometimes I would suffer for seven hours at a time. Different doctors did the best they could for me until four months ago I began giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and now I am in good health."

—Mrs. WILLIAM H. GILL, No. 15 Pleasant Street, Auburn, New York.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.
