

CANADA WEST INDIA COMPANY

"A Good Thing For Conservatives Only"

Farmers Called Upon to Pay Notes—Imposture Expensive for Innocent Stock Holders

There is sorrow among the farmer members of the great and only Canada-West India Company who are just now being called upon to pay the notes they gave that concern's solicitors, the Reverend J. B. Daggett and W. W. Melville. These notes are coming due and the "Company" has vanished. Some who were duped by this imposture declare that they will not pay the notes, but there seems to be no way out of it. If they got no value these to whom the notes were made payable have traded and dickered with them and got money or its equivalent, and those who now hold them are going to collect. In most cases they can do so as the notes were given by farmers who are able to pay.

It is well known that the leading promoters of the Company, E. S. Kilpatrick, B. F. Smith, J. B. Daggett and W. W. Melville, pointed out that this scheme "was a good thing and for Conservatives only." In one certain case a farmer was told how good a thing it was, and not for anything to give the good thing away; particularly he was not to let a certain neighbor, a Liberal, know that he was investing. The man kept mum until the Company went into the air. Last week he told the story to his Liberal neighbor and asked for and got money from him to pay the note. It would almost seem that the man he should have gone to would have been B. F. Smith, president of the Canada-West India Co.

Another man gave his note for $100.00 and paid in 70 barrels of potatoes on it. The note is now due, the value of the potatoes is not endorsed on it, and the full face of it will be collected. This man has only a pretty piece of paper to show for $200.

avoided. If the white of an egg is used for mixing, the poultice will not even blister the most delicate skin.

May Work in the Flower Garden

Before your vines make much growth, stake and tie them up, says Suburban Life.

In sowing petunias, portulaca and similar plants, try scattering them on earth that has been well worked and then lightly sprinkling with fine earth. Press down with a smooth board. This will help to conserve the moisture.

A cloudy day is ideal for transplanting. Be sure to water plentifully after transplanting, but do it, if possible, by means of a fine spray.

Sow all seeds of annuals as soon as the ground becomes warm. Dry wood-ashes placed where the asters are planted will kill the root aphid.

It is a wise plan to plant the shallow-rooted drought-resisting annuals among the spring-flowering bulbs.

Late in the month, when all danger from frost is past, bedding-plants may safely be set out.

Any time from now until July, seeds of hardy perennials can be sown for flowers a year from now. The earlier they are sown, the stronger the plants will be.

Keep the ground around your lilies well mulched. Shade the stems, too, if possible. Beds that are well mulched will produce twice as many blossoms as those which are not mulched.

If you spray a rose with a whale-oil soap or kerosene emulsion, you will effectively dispose of aphids. Late in the month spray with arsenate of lead at the rate of one ounce to ten gallons of water, in order to kill the rose beetle.

Do not forget that some of the early-blooming shrubs must be pruned immediately after they have bloomed. Cut out the old flowering wood and any dead wood, in order to have more flowers next year.

Early in the month such popular annuals as candytuft, sweet alyssum and annual phlox can be planted.

Grass plants, such as pampas grass etc., that have been stored over winter in the cellar should be planted outdoors now.

Be sure to plant gladiolus, canna and dahlia bulbs this spring. The dahlias and canna clumps should be divided before planting, and a piece of stem should be taken with each tuber.

Tuberose does best if started in pots. Start them indoors in four-inch pots, and shift later to six-inch pots. They will be ready to transplant out-of-doors about the middle of June.

GARDEN HINTS

Onion Sets—Plant in long rows ten to twelve inches apart. The sets should be two to three inches apart, according to whether the plant is to be pulled while small. Plant seeds an inch deep in heavy soil; one and one-half inches in light soil.

Peas—Plant in long double rows six to eight inches apart. Plant one inch deep in heavy soil; two inches in light soil.

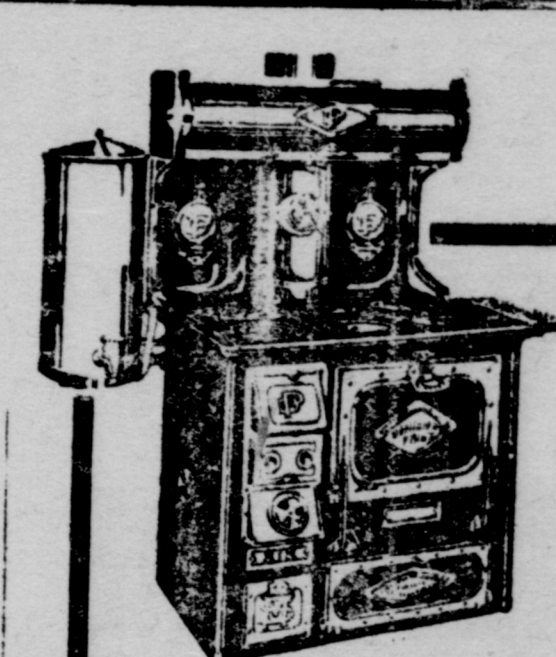

Lettuce—Sow in drills a few inches apart with a very wide thin covering of soil.

With radishes, carrots, beets and parsley follow these directions, but to save space let the rows of one species be planted between the rows of another.

Radishes—Sow always thinly in drills six inches or more apart and about one-half inch deep. A more wasteful method is to sow broadcast in small beds, but the better way is to plant carefully at first to avoid too much thinning out.

Beets—Sow in long rows a foot or more apart. Scatter the seed thinly, as best seeds are really fruits, each seed containing several true seeds. Sow an inch deep in the spring. Later when the ground is drier sow two inches deep. Early germination may be produced by soaking the seed overnight.

Carrots—Sow in long rows twelve to eighteen inches apart, one inch deep. When the plant is well up thin to three inches apart.

Parsley—Sow in long rows a foot apart; depth about one-half inch. Sow thinly, and thin early to six to nine inches in the rows.

The farmer often makes a great mistake by trying to do too much (ground). Till a smaller area and till it better and there will be more profit in it.
