DID NOTHING OF THE KIND.

Mr. Flemming tells the St. John Globe he is very sorry the Senate "killed" the Highways Bill; he says the Senate killed this bill which provided a huge sum for construction and improvement of highways. The Senate did nothing of the kind, and Mr. Flemming knows it. The Senate, as it had a right to do, amended the Highways Bill sent up from the Commons; the amendment provided certainty that each province would get its share of the money expended, and that the money would be expended for road making, as it would not be if it were left to the Dominion government to dole out in a way to do the most good for itself politically. The Senate did not kill the bill, but sent it back amended to the Commons, which not only refused to accept the amendment, but even refused to confer with a committee of the Senate to see if some compromise could not be effected. The Canadian constitution provides that when either the upper or lower Chamber does not agree with the amendments made by the other, a committee from each shall be appointed to consider, and, if possible, overcome the difference. The House of Commons in refusing a committee to consider and adjust the difference of opinion in regard to the Highway's Bill, not only acted unconstitutionally, but was guilty of killing the bill. The same applies to the Agricultural Aid Bill and the same will apply to Mr. Borden's naval bill. If the Senate makes amendments and refers them back to the Commons for concurrence, and if the Commons refuses concurrence, or refuses to appoint a committee for conference, it and not the Senate, will be guilty of killing the Naval bill.

TRUCK WITH THE YANKEE

From the tables inserted in the budget speech of the Minister of Finance we learn that the total imports into Canada for consumption from the United Kingdom were last year one hundred and thirty-eight millions and from the United States four hundred and thirty-five millions. In five years the imports from the United Kingdom increased only forty four millions and from the United States two hundred and thirty millions. The exports to the United Kingdom of Canadian and foreign produce were one hundred and seventy-seven millions and to the United States a hundred and fifty millions. Could anything more clearly demonstrate the utter folly and insincerity of what passes in this country for the debate of public questions? Even the money lent by England, the partners—Imperialism and protectionism—must recognize, is used to buy American, not British, goods, despite preferences and tariffs. When we reflect on such facts as these we are disposed to believe that the electorate was seized with some mad passion of religion or of race in 1911 and did not pass judgment on reciprocity at all. It could not be so inconsistent.

HOT SHOT FOR MR. PELLETIER.

Henri Bourassa, Nationalist Leader, lost no time in expressing in Le Devoir, the Nationalist Organ, his opinion of Mr. Pelletier's recantation at Toronto.

Regarding that speech Mr. Bourassa wrote:—"Every sentence is a contradiction of the opinions expressed by the same gentleman when he was begging the votes of his electors in September 1911, as a disciple of Armand Lavergne, as independent of two parties, and an antagonist of all contributions to the Imperial Navy. . . . In the olden times renegades secured the favour of Caesar or Mahomet by renouncing their creed. He (Hon. Mr. Pelletier) only deserves the contempt of honest people of all parties, schools and races, and he gets it."

A good many of the bicycle riders of the town furnish as good an example of following the path of least resistance as it would be possible to discover. They desert the roads and take to the sidewalks. Now the general impression has been that the sidewalks were built for pedestrians, while wheeled things were supposed to be content with the highways. The highways have been put into shape for this very reason, and likewise the sidewalks have been kept free from holes that there would be no broken legs. But evidently an error has been made. Nowadays it is no uncommon thing for a pedestrian to hear behind the ringing of a bell which is the warning the bicycle rider gives when he is coming. Now the rider wouldn't ring that bell if he didn't expect the walker to get out of the way, and that he does expect him to get out of the way is a measure of the extent to which the abuse has grown. There is an old saying about a place for everything and everything in its place.

Mr. Carvell and other Liberals are taken to task by the Conservative press for advocating a lower tariff, and for placing the British preference in the forefront of their arguments. Mr. Carvell is referred to in some quarters as practically a free trader, as if this were, a term of reproach. Mr. Carvell can stand it, and there is an increasing army of electors who share his opinion that when Canada takes from its taxpayers a sufficient sum yearly to pay all of its running expenses and leave many millions of a surplus it is time to consider giving the consumer relief.—Telegraph.

Do big cities grow big men? This is the question asked by The Christian Guardian. An analysis of the Cabinet of President Wilson shows that, with one exception every member began life as a boy in a small country town. In the Dominion Cabinet out of eighteen members all but one were born in rural sections or in small towns. Of the present Provincial Premiers in Canada not one was city-born. Out of thirteen native-born general managers of our leading banks only seven were born in cities.

The Renfrew Mercury administers this clever thrust:—"And just to think of the agony of mind of the Conservative M.P.'s when they learned that their good Canadian money had gone to buy an American car—an 'Ohio' for Mrs. R. L. Borden. There was to be no truck or trade with the Yankees, you will remember!"

The Standard's abuse of Messrs. Pugsley and Carvell has developed into a sickening slough of verbal slush. The driving idiocy of this "feature" of the St. John tory organ has long ago tired the patience of even its most devoted admirers.

All newspaper men, having the limitations of human beings, the time will never come when every statement of any paper will be accurate and truthful, but there is a difference between this condition and false interviews.

F. B. CARVELL WILL CONTINUE TO REPRESENT CARLETON COUNTY

Will Not Move to Montreal

Ottawa, Ont., May 26—F. B. Carvell, M.P., when asked regarding the report that he and A. K. McLean, M.P., for Halifax, are to form a partnership to practice law in Montreal, Mr. Carvell said there is no foundation for the report. He states that he proposes to remain in Woodstock and to continue to represent Carleton county in parliament.

REV. R. W. WEDDALL RECEIVES
RESOLUTION OF APPRECIATION
Leaves Soon For New Field of Labor

In these days of frequent changes and transitory impressions it is refreshing to come upon such an instance of deeply grounded and friendly relation as that which exists between the Woodstock Methodist church and its retiring pastor. In the Methodist ministry the custom of itinerancy tends to make the pastoral relations shorter than the other churches, and in the case of Rev. R. W. Weddall it goes without saying that his term has been extraordinarily helpful to the people whose spiritual charge has been placed in his hands. General felicitation is due on so happy a relation existing between pastor and people, in spite of the sorrow that is felt at the severance of loving ties that have been so marked the past few years.

In testimony of the deep appreciation of the church of the work and interest of the pastor the following resolution was passed:—

WHEREAS—The Pastoral term of the Rev. R. W. Weddall is drawing to a close,

THEREFORE RESOLVED—That we, as members of the Trustee Board of the Methodist Church in Woodstock, cannot allow Mr. Weddall to leave this Circuit, without placing on record our sincere thanks and high appreciation of the deep interest he has taken in everything in connection with the work of the Church, and more particularly with the financial side, the contributions to which have gone into the thousands.

And further resolved,—That our best wishes go with him in his new field of labor.

The Reformed Baptist Alliance will meet at Beulah Camp Ground June 25th. Rev. A. H. Trafton will preside.
