TEMPORARY ENTHUSIASM.

Woodstock has a board of trade that seems to have outbursts of temporary enthusiasm that are fruitless so far as the home town is concerned.

The association, on several occasions, has arisen from a sort of torpid or lethargic state and shaken itself long enough to get energy to talk over some matters of importance, yet it soon returns to its normal state, as it were, and remains inactive until some matter, such as an annual meeting, may act as a special prod.

The reason set forth most often is that political differences creep in and most of the moves are made with a view of hitting factional political strength more than to the general welfare. However, such has not been the case on all occasions, and results can only be obtained when this feeling is entirely obliterated.

Woodstock has as able merchants and business men as any community of its size, and with these men co-operating for the general welfare of the town, the latter would be helped greatly and would make strides on the road of progress industrially and otherwise.

It is all very well to talk over town improvements and necessities, but it is development that is required, and the greatest means to bring about development is through the securing of new industries which will increase the number of wage earners. Other towns are working along these lines and Woodstock could make itself felt by waking up to this important fact and get a share of the benefit that will surely come to any live organization with true business intent and purpose.

The efforts of voracious members to fasten the apathy of the citizens to the indifference of the local press is all but simply a play to the galleries. The local papers have done all in their power to impress upon the members of the board the importance of working up an interest that would mean something to the town, and not merely indulge in moving resolutions that never get by the "whereas" stage. Now that a new start has been made and all are agreed that something must be done it only requires push and public spirit to let the world know that the men with energy and a fair amount of capital, can find in Woodstock, many opportunities in which to make good.

Let the president, officers and members of the Board of Trade get down to business and they will have the local papers at their back in anything and everything that comes up for the good of the place.

The Tory party may just as well make up its mind to have the general election, because it is going to have it. Whether it likes it or not, the elections are going to be held or the government be discredited. The Liberal party is justified in insisting upon an appeal to the people. Why? Because the present government was not elected in every part of the Dominion of Canada on the same naval issue. In one Province it opposed both a Canadian navy or a contribution, and the candidates who opposed both phases of the naval policy are now represented in its government and sitting in Parliament, in alliance with the Bordenites, who support the contribution. The government should be compelled to go to the people upon its policy as now definitely declared, and allow the people to decide. The government should be compelled to go to the country without one dollar of appropriations voted. Tory squirming should not prevent the appeal being forced.—Moncton Transcript.

The quaint ground-hog superstition is attributed to the German folk lore concerning the badger, who "peers" out of his hole Candlemas day, and if he finds snow he walks abroad, while if he sees the sun he draws back into his hole.

"If Candlemas day be fair and bright, Winter shall have another flight; If Candlemas day bring snow or rain, Winter is gone not to come again."

is the English form of the same idea. Thus the Candlemas signs all seem to go by contraries.

They picture spring as a fickle jade, dousing her suitors with the cold rains of tricky March and April. They seem to embody a primitive philosophy of the contradictions and disappointments of experience and the ironies of life.

Is it not strange that the Hon. T. W. Crothers did not question the authority of the applicants for a Board of Conciliation in the matter of the dispute between the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, at the time the application was made? The fact is that the authority was never disputed until the matter was brought up in the House of Commons. A poor excuse is better than none, apparently, in the view of the Minister of Labour.

Lord Haldane in a recent speech dwelt on the fact that during the last six years the British Government had paid off an average of ten and a half million pounds of the national debt—or over $300,000,000 for the period. Yet there are Canadians who are proudly strutting about with their chests sticking out, under the belief that they are about to save the Empire from ruin by a gift of thirty-five million dollars.

The logic of a militant suffragette. She is arrested. She is taken to court. She is fined a small sum. She refuses to pay her fine. She is sentenced to a few days in jail. She refuses to eat in the hopes that she will be released before her time is over. Yet she might have avoided being shut up at all by the payment of a few dollars. The conclusion is that she wants to be a martyr. But trying to be a martyr is often a thankless job.

The following appeared in the legal column of a matrimonial paper in reply to a Woodstock lady: "A man may not be arrested simply because he has failed to marry a girl as promised. He may be sued for breach of promise to marry but if this man is not worth $100 it is hardly worth while taking any action against him. Forget him." The remedy seems simple enough.

"I have a suspicion" said Mr. Carvell, in his speech on the C. P. R. strike, "that if the minister of labour were as anxious to force the Canadian Pacific Railway to take back these men as he was to force the Grand Trunk to take its men back—and agreed to hold up legislation until they did it—there would be no difficulty in having the men restored to their positions. The position of the minister is remarkable when you compare his conduct in this case with that in the case of the Grand Trunk strike."

We have always believed thoroughly in a policy of publicity for Woodstock, and if the town were to try the experiment the results would demonstrate the wisdom of such a venture. Other towns have proved to their own satisfaction that publicity pays, and pays well. Effective advertising of our natural advantages and resources will assuredly aid in enlarging the country's knowledge of what we have and prove beneficial to all concerned.

Hon. Charles Marcell in closing his eloquent address on the navy exclaimed:

"Every Canadian is interested, vitally interested, in solving this problem in the interests of his country and of his Empire, and, if I know this Opposition, it is prepared to stand until the final verdict is rendered by those who are entitled to render it.—the Canadian people."

The memory of the Hon. Minister of Labour must be very defective when he cannot remember that the Brotherhood of Railroad Employees were refused a Board of Conciliation by him in January, 1912, and another in June of the same year.—Labour World.

Calais has organized a board of trade for the purpose of inducing some concern to locate in that city to use the hardwood that neither the lumberman nor the pulp mill want's, and of which a considerable quantity grows near Calais.

So it is "loyal" to store Canadian grain in Duluth, but "disloyal" to sell Canadian grain, without a tax, in the same market. Wouldn't a text book from Premier Borden on "loyalty" be quite interesting?

Query: Is the president of the Board of Trade playing to the galleries, in his attacks on the local papers, or is he anxious to prolong the only meeting the board has during the year?

Who will tell Mr. Carvell, M. P., how Canadian Pacific employees can live on a wage of $30 to $48 per month? He says he would like to know.—Labour World.

Any public service board should be non-political in its nature, for the best interests of the town can be served only by the appointment of the best men.

The rot that is appearing in the local Tory paper, in reference to the armory situation, is so characteristic in its inane absurdity that the authorship of it is not far to seek. Such clamorous twaddle is a shining example of a nature that is as small as the point of a pencil.

Two days after Mr. Carvell pressed the government for an explanation of its attitude on the C. P. R. strike, Mr. Borden was in consultation with Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, and the situation seemed to undergo a change.

It is more or less of a personal triumph for the caretaker of the armory to "hold the fort" against the whole military force of Canada.

A little sanity at Ottawa, on the selling of Canada's chief products would add to the wealth of Canada's producers.

Carleton County farmers are losing thousands of dollars every month by reason of a closed market.

It has been discovered that the ground hog as a weather prophet is not in the amateur class.

In some localities the ground is actually white in spots, owing to snow.
