MURDER WILL OUT.

Will murder out? Can a man take the life of a fellow being and take his secret to the grave with him? In some instances, yes, but in the great majority, no. The amazing story of Hans Schmidt, a criminal of the basest sort, shows how difficult it is for a man to murder and keep free of the net of the law. A slight clue in the hands of the experienced detectives is very likely to lead to the door of the criminal. But if a man has been so cunning as to baffle the students of crime, how fares he? Sometimes he is able to withstand the strain until the grave frees him from his unnatural burden, but who knows whether or not the knowledge of guilt has not hastened the day of death? How often it is that at some period, either after the lapse of a few months or many years, a confession is made. The murderer seems unable to keep his secret within his breast. He must bare his heart to someone. His conscience sits heavily upon him, day and night, until at last he must take the world into his confidence or go mad.

How often it is that the murderer, once having confessed declares that he feels "natural" once again. For the first time in months or years he is able to eat and sleep; not that he is any less the murderer but that he hasn't the awful secret burdening his soul. Having the stain of another's blood on one's hand is an awful curse, and it is this curse which drives men to confess, even when they know that certain death awaits them when the condemning words fall from their lips. Murder will out, in the majority of cases. Human nature is the best detective.

The appointment of a judge is so important, that the people expect the most circumspect action on the part of the one or the many who are responsible for the choice. The people with reason expect that there will be no other consideration except to choose with the utmost wisdom. The test in the choice of a judge should be: who best will serve the interests of justice. There is needed a man of known honesty. It is criminal to select a man for a judgeship who does not measure up to the highest standard of personal and professional honesty.

There is needed a man of independence. A judge should be of that nature from the undue influence of any man or set of men.

The hunter has a duty of life and death to perform for himself and others. He should realize that he is in a strange environment and that he is doing a strange thing and that others are in a like situation. He is one of many and should surround himself with every possible safeguard.

Mr. Hazen in his St. John speech tried to show that Mr. Carvell and Dr. Fugsley, some years ago, were in favor of curtailing discussion if the opposition persisted in continuing to withhold supply. No attempt was made by the Liberals to withhold supply. They simply opposed the naval bill, holding that as a great constitutional change was involved it ought to be submitted to the people. And Mr. Hazen knows that if submitted to the people the Liberal position would be sustained.

One of the principal troubles of the Ministry this summer has been that there have not been enough private cars to go round—despite the purchase of two new ones for Hon. Robert Rogers and the Hon. Col. Sam Hughes. With only three or four Ministers in the Capital at a time, and the rest on tour the demand for Ministerial cars has exceeded the supply. More cars will have to be purchased.

The honesty (?) of the politicians and journals that opposed Reciprocity is now being shown up in its true light. They are now busy describing the benefits of the new American tariff. Yet these same pleaders of special privileges when the Reciprocity campaign was on, denied any such benefits. They would do the same if the question came up again, and good "party men" would fall into line and vote as directed.

The new American tariff does not give us nearly all the advantages promised under Reciprocity. Under Reciprocity we would have absolutely free access to the American market for all the products of the farm, and that advantage would have been confined to Canada alone. It is now shared by Mexico, Argentina and other food-producing countries.

Pleadings of youth are hard to resist and they are often effective with parents in the matter of furnishing guns for hunting. Pride and confidence in the ability of his son often lead a father to permit his boy to use a gun when such use is a menace not only to the lad but to all within range of the weapon during his wanderings.

Hon. I. Stephenson during his recent visit here was much impressed with the beauty of Connell Park, and when told what it cost said it would be worth that much per acre if situated in the West. He also had something to say about the influence that prevented it being used for exhibition grounds by the Agricultural Society.

Mr. Hazen in his speech in St. John did not explain why Aroostook County farmers were getting twice as much more per barrel for potatoes than Carleton County farmers.

There have been some pretty big bugs on juries in times gone by, but none to compare with the jury in the breach of promise case, Friday night.

Was the Andover-Grand Falls section abandoned to connect with the C. P. R.'s campaign payroll? Mr. Flemming can tell.

A highway is no better than its worst spot.

Houses to rent are as scarce as hens teeth, in this town. There seems to be a constantly growing demand for moderately-priced houses.

Old Habeas Corpus was not pressed into service at the Mock Trial—although Harry Thaw was prominent.

By this time it has been noticed that there is more than one kind of a September morn.

A NEW PHOTOGRAPH STUDIO

Mr. Edgar P. Smith, the proprietor of the Maritime Art Studios at Sackville and Woodstock, N. B., has had 15 years in high class photography, being a prize medalist in some of the principal exhibitions abroad and naturally with such a record it is his aim and purpose to win a reputation second to none in Eastern Canada for high-class artistic productions. To this end he has engaged the services of Mr. Herbert Coates who has had considerable experience in the best studios in the British Isles and has just terminated an engagement of six years with one of the principal and largest photographic houses in England—in a city where competition in photography is exceptionally keen. It was some months ago that one of the inhabitants of this town informed Mr. Smith that such a studio as he was capable of opening was much needed. It is needed and it is going to succeed.

We have seen some of Mr. Smith's work and it demonstrates that as a photographer he thoroughly understands his business.

The people of Woodstock are to be congratulated on having a studio equipped to meet every demand in the photograph line.

Editor Sentinel:

Every time a new principal takes charge of the schools (and that is too often) there seems to be new books wanted—the books of the previous year not being as good as some other books, etc. This matter should be looked into by the school board and some action taken to use books prescribed by the board of education and not books to suit the whims of the teachers.

FOUR FALLS

The Act of the legislature in 1912 separating the Parish of Grand Falls from the town was a long delayed measure of justice. The bye-election last year, owing to the hurried season went by default as the election appeared to be indifferent. Mr. Le-Baron Anderson will be the candidate for the Council this year. The requisition to this effect has been signed by fifty-two of the electors in this district No. 2. Fifteen days notice has to be given by the P. C. of No. 1. Nomination of candidates on 13th, posting the names of candidates by P. C. in three of the most public places in each district on 16th. Election 21st October. Polling place No. 2. at C. W. S. Baker's, Four Falls.

Potatoes in this county are a bumper crop and excellent quality.

Mrs. Maggie Marsten and daughter Miss Helen Marsten, are visiting at P. S. Marsten's.
