Sergt. Knight's Straight John Redmond on Talk to Borden's Cabinet Colleagues

'Sooner We Get Rid of These Drags The Better It Will Be For The Country'

In a big recruiting meeting in St. John Friday evening, Sergt. Knight in dealing with Armand Lavergne's letter, in which he wrote he was opposed to Canada taking part in the war as were SOME MEMBERS OF BORDEN'S CABINET, paid his respects to these LOYAL gentlemen who are conducting the business of the country. He said: "If there is such a man in the government of Canada or in any British colony he should be out of it. (Applause). I don't care who he is, whose son he may be, or what blood he may belong to, nor how much money he may have, nor what position he may hold, I say we in Canada are one people and we are one with the British Empire in the cause of righteousness. (Loud applause.)

The sooner we get rid of the drags upon the wheel the better it will be for the country. If there is a man who has been knocking like that it is time he was told to keep his mouth shut. (Loud applause.)

"We have got to adopt other methods than we have and we must take other methods of handling those who speak so. I know there are men in the city of St. John who are actively engaged in prejudicing young men from signing their names on the honor roll. Yet I say that if we are to continue the liberty we have we must fight for it."

"MUDDLING" ALONG

But for All That, John Bull's Submarines are Taking Heavy Toll of German Ships

Not so spectacularly brilliant as the Emden, perhaps, and the other German raiders that corruscated over the seven seas in the early days of the war, but as to result quite as businesslike is the British naval service when it comes to sinking ships, plain destruction and devastation.

For in the 12 days between October 11 and 23 John Bull's submarines sank 20 German ships, totalling 38,000 tons. Here are the names: Lulea, Germania, Director Reppenhausen, Nicomedia, Walter Leonhardt Svania (or Svann), Gertrude, Pyrgos, Emgard, Babylon, Pernambuco, Soderhamn, Johannes Russ, Dalarn, John Wulf, Elctra, Rendsburg, Glaven, and two named Hornosand.

Every dog has his day, is an old saying. German submarines plowed the sea early in the war and took their toll. They say John Bull "muddles and muddles badly," but he appears to be "muddling through." Sheer preponderance of ships and sheer doggedness seem to be doing for England what brilliancy and dash have been doing for Germany. Latterly we have not heard so much of the German unterseeboten. Is it true that England has been destroying them, as has been intimated?

REV. FR. McMURRAY PREACHES FAREWELL SERMON

Left Tuesday for His New Pastorate—Address and Presentation of a Cross of Gold

Rev. F. J. McMurray who has been the honored pastor of St. Gertrude's church for thirteen years, left for his new pastorate, in St. John, Tuesday. At both masses, on Sunday, he spoke feelingly of his departure from among the people with whom he had labored for so many years. From those of all denominations he had been the recipient of every kindness and respect. In saying farewell he hoped God's choicest blessings would be showered upon them all.

Monday evening in the parish hall the members of St. Gertrude's assembled and presented Father McMurray with an address and a purse of gold amounting to $326. The reverend gentleman made a reply full of deep feeling. Fr. Murphy of Debec, who was present, made a few fitting remarks.

John McMurray who has been here for many years was presented with a travelling bag.

The addresses read by J. P. Ma-

lane are as follows:
St. Gertrude's Hall,
Woodstock, N. B.,
Nov. 8th, 1915.

Rev. Francis J. McMurray:

Beloved Pastor—We have met here this evening to bid you a fond farewell. To our surprise and regret we learn that you have been called away from us to take up the duties of your sacred calling in St. John. We most heartily extend our congratulations and best wishes to you on your promotion. We are glad that your worth has been recognized even though we regret that it means the severance of the intimate and pleasant ties that have so long existed between us—intimate, we say, inasmuch as no one can be more intimate with the people than their pastor.

It has been well said that the Catholic priest is a man who, having no family, belongs to his congregation. He is called in as a witness and a counsellor to his flock—no one comes into the world, or goes hence, without his ministrations; he blesses and consecrates the cradle, the bridal chamber, the bed of death, and the bier. He is one whom innocent children grow to love, whom even those who know him not salute him as Father; at whose feet Christians fall down and lay bare the inmost thoughts of their souls and weep their most sacred tears; he consoles the afflicted and softens the pains of body and soul; to whose doors come alike the rich and the poor—the rich to give alms in secret, and the poor to receive them without blushing. He belongs to all—to the poor by his humble poverty in a good many cases, and to the rich by his culture and his knowledge. Such is the parish priest, than whom no one has a greater opportunity for good, or power for evil, according as he fulfils or fails to recognize his transcendent mission among men.

We cannot help but call to your attention at this time the marked improvement in the church property since you have been pastor of St. Gertrude's parish—the building of a vestry and hall, the erection of a very expensive altar, the interior and exterior painting of the church, the addition of property, and the purchasing of a strip of land which rounds out a church property, free of debt, that probably cannot be excelled in the Maritime Provinces.

By your kind disposition you have greatly endeared yourself to every member of the congregation, and to the people of Woodstock as a whole, all of whom regret that your well deserved promotion means that you leave us this week.

We know that God will bless your labors in your new pastorate and we most heartily hope that your future years will be attended by good health and happiness.

Mr. John McMurray:
"John" we are going to call you once more, anyway, before the final blow has fallen and you have severed the pleasant ties that have united us for some 13 years.

Ireland's Part in the Recruiting— Living in Critical Times—Gravest Political Issues May Arise—People Should Not be Bullied Into Recruiting—"Carson's" Army Fighting Side by Side With Nationalists

(London paper)

Mr. John Redmond, M.P., delivered an important address at the Dublin Mansion House on Monday, to a Convention of representatives of County Dublin, most of them farmers and business men.

They were living in critical times Mr. Redmond observed. No one had the smallest doubt as to how the war would end, and no one doubted that the end of the war would mean the inauguration of an autonomy in Ireland. It should be made clear that their political organization and discipline in Ireland must be maintained. It would be reckless folly to do otherwise. No one could tell the moment when the gravest political issues would arise. The existence of the present Coalition Government was precarious. It was threatened with internal as well as external danger.

"There is no doubt about it," Mr. Redmond went on, "that at the present moment a rich and powerful conspiracy exists against its existence amongst men who are ready to sacrifice national unity in the face of the enemy in order to further their own predilections and theories; but happily we can boast in Ireland that Ireland is not in any degree whatever responsible for these dangers at a moment of a great national crisis. (Applause.)

"In this country we have observed the truth; we have given fair play and honest support to a Government whose constitution, it is well known, we dislike and distrust (hear, hear). We have no share in any conspiracy to forward our political views at the expense of unity." (Applause.)

The action of Ireland in the matter of recruiting, Mr. Redmond observed, had been not only magnificent, it had been marvellous (applause). In addition to some 30,000 reservists called to the colors from Ireland when the war began, and in addition to some 22,000 Irishmen in the army at the time the war began, Ireland had sent 81,408 recruits since the war broke out (applause). The City of Dublin alone had sent 14,151 men (applause). Of these 81,408 recruits, 44,689 were Catholics and 36,719 were Protestants. Taking the number of men in the army at the commencement of the war, and the reservists and recruits who have since joined, there were in the army now from Ireland 132,454 men, and of that great total 79,511 were Catholics and 52,943 Protestants. (Applause.)

"They were bound in honor," Mr. Redmond, added, to send the gallant men who had gone into danger the necessary reservists to support them. He ventured to say they would do it if proper business-like methods were adopted. It should be understood that it would not do to attempt to bully or drive people into recruiting."

Asked by one of the delegates about "Carson's Army," Mr. Redmond said: "Carson's army is at the front in Flanders, and I am certain they will acquit themselves like Irishmen, while fighting side by side with the Catholic and Nationalist volunteers."

PATRIOTIC MEETINGS

Meetings are scheduled to take place at the following places on the dates named. The probable speakers are given but there may be some unavoidable changes. On the other hand it is expected that soldiers not named, in uniform, will be present. Pte. Mr. Conron of the 104th Batt., should be a drawing card, while the well-known Sergt. Knight, it is expected will address meetings in the county. Capt. Tilley and Lieut. Teed will also likely take a hand.

The meetings held hitherto have been very successful showing plainly that the young men of this county are fully alive to their duty. At Victoria Corner, Florenceville and Bath there were large attendances and good results. Lieut. Shaw who was on the firing line until invalided home temporarily, has given some excellent addresses. At the Florenceville meeting, which was excellently arranged the following young men came to the front and signed the roll: Enoch Green, Green, Harry T. Boyer, D. Imman.

The meetings to be held the last of this week and next week are these: Centerville, Friday, Nov. 12.—Capt. Tilley, Sergt. Knight, D. Munro and others.

Lakeville, Saturday, Nov. 13.—F. C. Squires, D. Munro and others.

Lindsay, Monday, Nov. 15.—Pte. Rev. Mr. Conron, Rev. Mr. Baird, D. Munro and others.

Bloomfield, Tuesday, Nov. 16.—Pte. Rev. Mr. Conron, D. Munro and others.

Bristol, Wednesday, Nov. 17.—Pte. Rev. Mr. Conron, D. Munro and others.

Giasville, Thursday, Nov. 18.—Pte. Conron, D. Munro and others.

Mount Pleasant, Friday, Nov. 19.—Pte. Rev. Mr. Conron, D. Munro and others.

Special prayers were offered in all the churches on Sunday last for the safety of the 55th Battalion.
