BRITISH OR CANADIAN.

Of all times possible, the present is the least appropriate for emphasizing unduly the feats of the various units who are enrolled in the "British" fighting forces. As some one has well advised, Canadians do not need to boast every time a Canadian fires a gun. To be sure we have reason to be proud of the contingent from this country, whether they be Canadian born, English, Scotch, Irish or anywhere else born. They form part of the Canadian contingent. No doubt in the English forces there are many men and officers who were born out of the old country. But why bother emphasizing the point one way or the other? As far as this country is concerned a large portion of its entire population were not born in Canada, but when they came here to live they came to form part of the Canadian people. That in many cases they rather delight in dwelling on the advantages and glories of the land from which they came is natural, just as no doubt Canadians who go to the old land proclaim the advantages of this country. The old home should always be dear. As long as this spirit is confined to good natured badinage, it is harmless, though its constant expression is in questionable taste. But sometimes it becomes offensive, and when it reaches this stage should be promptly suppressed. More particularly should care be taken at this particular time when the old country-born and native born—are all trying to do their duty. The careless remark, sometimes hiding a covert sneer, is as dangerous in a community as a spark about a gunpowder cask. The Canadian in the old country and the old-country-man in Canada would be doing a good service in the present stress, if each would try to remember that after all we are all British. It is said by a leading historian that the acute stage to which personal relations arrived between the English officer and the American colonist, had not a little to do with bringing on the American Revolution. No one would like to see history repeat itself in this regard.

PREMIER CLARKE AND MR. DUGAL.

(Moncton Transcript)

The present premier of the province informed the house (last year) that the charges made by Mr. Dugal had no substantial facts behind them. This being the case, under the rules of parliament, Mr. Dugal should not be in his seat. On the contrary, the former premier is absent from the legislature, and Mr. Dugal still remains therein. When the Gleaner seeks to obscure a pertinent fact, which like this stands out before the gaze of the people of this province, it is virtually betraying the interests of political morality. Bitter Mr. unsatisfactory condition exists it Dugal should or should not be in the legislature. Having claimed that the charges brought by Mr. Dugal were not sustained or supported in fact, it is Premier Clarke's duty now to move in the legislature that Mr. Dugal forfeit his seat and be expelled from that body, but if Mr. Clarke does not feel that, under the facts of the case, he can make this motion, then he ought to be gentlemanly and manly enough to stand up in the legislature and admit that he statement he made, at a previous session of the assembly, was now proven not to have been supported by facts. He should either move to condemn Mr. Dugal or to exonerate him. He owes it to the province to explain why the Hon. Mr. Flemming is no longer a member of the house or retains his seat.

The St. John Standard has been very pronounced in denouncing any person, who formerly expressed a belief that a war between Great Britain and Germany was improbable, and indeed it has gone so far as to intimate that those who expressed such doubts in the past were practically traitors to the British Empire. The St. John Telegraph, in an unkind moment, says that more than four months after the war began the Standard lifted up its editorial voice and, with unaccustomed deliberation of manner, spake as follows:—

"Up to the very day when this terrible war began, the vast majority of the people of the Empire simply could not conceive it possible that England and Germany could ever engage in war."

An expectant province and indeed an expectant Dominion and empire are waiting to hear The Standard in its usual super-loyalty, denounce the Standard which traitorously in the light of current events expressed the sentiment above quoted.—Transcript.

Under a heading "Misleading Information," the Press this week has an editorial effusion in reference to a communication that appeared in the last issue of the Sentinel, concerning SHOES for the members of the 55th Battalion. Realizing the fact that the criticism of the letter all comes from the usual source, we would remind these eminent patriots that when these boys offer their lives in defence of the empire they should at least be given proper clothing.

It is not a question of what pay they get when they arrive at "mobilization quarters"—it is not a question of "a tendency to hurt recruiting" and above all it is not a question of the putrid politics that prompts such criticism of the complaint made—it is simply a matter of decent treatment of the young soldiers who will soon leave for the front. Show some gratitude, at least, for the sacrifices they are making and give them equipment if they need it.

This week the boys were the recipients of 50 pairs of socks from the Red Cross Society for which they are most grateful.

It is a very exceptional council which does not try, in some degree or other, to arrange a "sure" collection of taxes. Try as the council may, it seems beyond its reach to determine on a method that gives general satisfaction. When such an must mean—one of two things; either the council is not of sufficient mental calibre to work out an acceptable system of collection, or the whole method of taxation is unworkable. That council after council will attempt to apply a new, "sure", system of collection is simply an example of the triumph of hope over experience. Change the whole system.

WOODSTOCK BOY A HERO. Sapper McLeod of the Canadian Engineers in a letter to the Fredericton Gleaner says:

"Our first casualty happened last night, when the captain of the second company was killed. I cannot speak too highly of our section commander (name deleted by censor) a former Woodstock boy. He certainly has acted the part of a hero, and one feels more like working when they are behind a chap who has some spunk. Last night he stuck it out when he was feeling very sick, and he rose a whole lot in the estimation of the fellows for doing it as to intimate that those who ex-

Speaking with the full authority of the then premier, Hon. Mr. Clarke assured the House last session that there was not one word of truth in the charges preferred by Mr. L. A. Dugal against Hon. J. K. Flemming. How comes it then, that Mr. Dugal is still a member of the legislature, while Mr. Flemming is sojourning in the political bone heap?—Mail.

If Woodstock money that has been invested in wild-cat securities had been put into substantial enterprises at home there would be fewer sorrowful investors and the town would be the gainer thereby.

Announcement is made of a party convention at Andover, N. B., on March 22nd. F. B. Carvell, the strong man of New Brunswick, will be there, as also Hon. Mr. Lemieux and Dr. Clarke of Red Deer. Those who attend will doubtless hear a trio of orators that it would be difficult to surpass.—New Freeman.

Miss Helen Hand entertained at three tables of auction bridge on Monday evening. The guests were the Misses Mary Sprague, Alice Neill, Alice Boyer, Grace Jones, Mildred Carvell, Mabel Lister and Messrs. Ernest Ross, Henry Wisdom, Ernest Mosher, Hayward Dansereau, Walter Daley and Gordon Bailey.

Mass., and second daughter of Charles Carter, Kirkland, N. B., who died in the morning of March 10, 1915, aged about 42 years, with paralysis. She leaves her father, mother, three sisters—Mrs. George Dickson of Kirkland, Mrs. W. Colby of Pasadena, Cal., and Miss Myrtle, who lives in Lawrence; three brothers—Richard, Edgar and Murray, and numerous other relatives to mourn her early demise. In religion she was a Presbyterian. She kept hotel in Lawrence for a number of years until the last year of her life, when she was not very well. To know her was to love her. We can truly say a good woman has gone from our midst. The remains were brought to the home of her childhood days. Rev. R. Miller attended the services. Mrs. John Dickinson was organist. The pall bearers were Leslie Kennedy, Samuel Nicholson, Albert and John Dickinson. The floral tributes were very pretty. We extend our sympathy.

St. Patrick's evening, Miss Kathleen Lynette was the hostess at an auction party of four tables. The decorations were in the national color, green. Pretty little score cards in the form of shamrocks, bearing a harp and tied with green ribbon were used. The favors were won by Miss Mildred Carvell and have sounded sarcastic to some, but that was evidently not Mr. Smith's intention. He was eulogistic of Premier Clarke and Attorney-General Carter and made no particularly unkind references to his political opponents. His reference to the result of the Carleton county by-election and to the opposition press was quite moderate, and while a little miss in regard to having the largest majority ever polled over an opponent in Carleton county under the circumstances, there was ample excuse for this error. He exulted some what over the fact that government five per cent. bonds (exempt from taxation) sell at par and seemed to think it proof of the belief of the people in the integrity of the government.

Mr. Hayward Dansereau. The guests were the Misses Caroline Munro, Cassie Hay, Mildred Carvell, Mildred Balmann, Helen Hand, Kathleen Hand, Mabel Lister, Grace Jones, and Messrs. Walter Daley, Hayward Dansereau, George Diblee, Allan Poole, Harold Ferguson, Kenneth McLean, Ewart Ellis and Gordon Bailey.

LOCAL LEGISLATURE

The royal commission's work and the patriotic purchase of potatoes were two subjects Mr. Smith did not allude to but the Valley Railway, its present and future prospects, seemed bright and rosy. The speaker was particularly happy to do in his patriotic references and drew much applause from his associates in the chamber. Increased production and the chance of the farmers to grow more hay, oats, grain, beef and pork were enlarged upon. He did not mention potatoes. The remarks of Mr. Culligan in seconding his motion were quite in keeping with the occasion.

MARRIED

FLEMMING-MCINTYRE

At the home of the bride's mother Mrs. Thos. McIntyre, Richmond, on Wednesday, March 3rd, Alice Marian, was united in marriage to Mr. Chas. Flemming, by the Rev. W. T. Haig.

The bride was becomingly dressed in blue silk with lace trimmings and was given away by her brother, W. B. McIntyre. The room was prettily decorated with an evergreen arch and potted plants.

The presents were numerous and costly, showing the high esteem by which both are held. All joining in wishing them a long and happy wedded life.—Press please copy.
