Duke of Connaught Inspects 55th Batt. For Third Time

Maintains Its Fine Standard—Wishes Overseas Forces Good-bye and Good Luck

Valcartier Camp, Oct. 16.—The weather conditions today were ideal for the inspection of the troops in camp by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught. In the case of the 55th battalion, this was the third occasion upon which it had been the honor of being inspected by the duke, once in Sussex and twice here. His royal highness arrived on a special train early in the morning and at 9 o'clock sharp he arrived on the parade grounds, where the different units in camp were drawn up in review order in command of Colonel John Hughes.

As the royal party arrived the Royal Standard was unfurled and a royal salute was presented. The duke and his staff accompanied by the camp commandant, all mounted, then inspected the files.

When this was completed the troops marched past in open column order and returned in closed column. The units in their marching order were: 35th battery; 7th brigade including 40th, 41st and 55th regiments, in command of Brigadier H. H. McLean; 60th, 69th, 73rd, 2nd Field Ambulance Corp.

The 55th was in command of Colonel Kirkpatrick and maintained the fine standard to which it has attained in its stay here. It has come from an authoritative source that when the troops marched past in close column that the duke singled out the 55th and made special inquiries regarding the regiment which had done so well.

When the officers had been called out they were addressed by his royal highness, who expressed the general satisfaction he had in the inspection, which has been made, especially with the improvement made by the regiments from the maritime provinces. At times the drill may have seemed irksome, but it would pay well in the end. He had visited every camp from Halifax to Victoria, and was glad to report that the work done was excellent; the discipline was good and the officers keen.

Under our institutions it was the privilege of officers to lead men not to press them forward as in some other countries, and the influence of an officer upon the men was far-reaching. Those who were going overseas he wished goodbye and good luck.

Cheers were then given for the king and for the duke. An interesting feature of the review was the music by the bands, which were massed.

Of course he is impossible to give a detailed description, but mention might be made of a few. Especially interesting were some pieces—the work of mothers and grandmothers of Institute members. Among them a sampler, beautifully worked by the late Hon. L. P. Fisher's mother, and exhibited by Mrs. F. H. J. Diblee; another was the wedding dress of Mrs. T. D. Sprague's mother. It was of broad silk with shawl of black Spanish lace.

Berlin wool work was exhibited by Miss L. Colpitts, Mrs. George Gabel, Mrs. George Saunders and others. Also most interesting were three pieces of work done by Mrs. W. W. Hay, her mother and grandmother respectively. The collection of modern work was most varied and beautiful, and consisted of pieces from most of the Institute members, a number showing good sized collections.

Some handsome oil paintings were also exhibited, the work of Mrs. Charles Comben, Miss Gallagher, and others. Tea was served in an adjoining room; the ladies in charge being Mrs. F. B. Carvell, Mrs. Frank Foster, Mrs. S. L. Lynott, Mrs. Williamson Fisher and Mrs. A. P. Allingham. The sum of thirty-three dollars and sixty-five cents was realized and will be used for "Soldiers Comforts."

Charles Smith and Stephen Darrah On Trial for Murder

Jury Secured After Many of Panel are Challenged—Court Room Crowded—Many Women Present—Judge Landry In His Remarks Said He Favored Conscription—Has Two Sons at Front

The circuit court met Tuesday, Chief Justice Landry presiding. There were no civil cases entered. The case of the King vs. Charles Smith and Stephen Darrah, charged with the murder of Fred Green at Florenceville on the night of May 7th last was taken up. The judge charged the grand jury, reviewing the facts as contained in the depositions and intimating that in his opinion there were grounds upon which the jury might find a true bill against each of these men. At 5 o'clock the jury returned finding a true bill in each case.

In his address to the jury, the learned judge, in referring to Mr. J. A. Lindsay, foreman of the grand jury, said he was a member of the legislature at the time, Hon. Wm. Lindsay, his father, represented Carleton.

FAVORS CONSCRIPTION.

The chief justice referred briefly but earnestly to the subject most strongly in the minds of all, the war. While what he had to say to them was purely his own opinion, and while he spoke as representing no one but himself, he felt that on an occasion like this it was his duty to tell them that according to his view, the most effective and the fairest means both to the front and to the young men yet unenlisted, after recruiting was conscription. Also he believed that public opinion was rapidly coming around to this view. He, himself, was a man of peace and had not favored conscription in the past, but after giving the subject the most careful attention and thought, of which he was capable, he had changed his mind, and was confident that in a great world struggle like this, when it was no use to go at it in a half hearted way, every resource in men and other means capable of being drawn out, should be at the service of the state. For himself, he said it in no boasting spirit, he had two sons at the front. If a third was needed he would rather that the authorities said, "we have come for him," than that they should ask him to use his persuasion to get him to go.

The apt and timely remarks of the chief justice were listened to most attentively and made a strong impression on the representative body of grand jurors and others present in the court house.

Court met at 2 p.m. Wednesday, when the trial of Smith and Darrah, charged with murder, was continued. The Courtroom was crowded with a very large number among the spectators being women. The proceedings today furnished nothing of a sensational nature, the evidence adduced being along the same lines as that of the preliminary examination.

The prisoners were brought into court at two o'clock and seemed absolutely free from any nervousness and confident of acquittal. Both showed to a certain extent by their appearance the effects of their long confinement in the county gaol, having been incarcerated since the middle of June, an application by their counsel for bail having been refused. Upon being arraigned each pleaded not guilty of the crime. Hon. J. B. M. Baxter, K.C., attorney general, represents the Crown, assisted by J. C. Hartley, K.C. Hon. W. P. Jones, K.C., appeared for the prisoner Smith and C. J. Jones appeared for the prisoner Darrah. After a large number of the panel had been challenged or stood aside the following jury was secured: Woodbury McIntyre, Herbert Anderson, T. C. Baker, John P. Pickel, Wilmont Watson, Alexander Bell, Chas. H. Gough, Coster Wetmore, Alfred Ball, A.

Donald Nicholson and Newman Griffiths. The attorney general opened the case for the prosecution, and called as the first witness Aaron Green, the father of the deceased, who testified that he had identified a body found in the St. John River seven miles above Fredericton, as that of his son, Frederick, whom he had last seen alive on the 6th of May. The body was unmarked except for a bruise on the head. He also identified a coat and boot found on the bridge at Florenceville as having belonged to his son. In the course of his cross-examination he finally admitted that he was not sure that it was his son's coat, and expressed a doubt that it was the coat. He also said that he had identified his son chiefly from a bunch of gray hair behind his ear.

Chas. R. Green, a brother of the deceased, who went to Fredericton with his father to identify the body corroborated his father to a certain extent, but had never noticed the bunch of gray hair referred to by his father.

The evidence of Mrs. Stiles and Jack Schriber was to the effect that the prisoners and the deceased were intoxicated and quarreling on the bridge, but produced nothing of any importance. The evidence of Wilbur Smith, a hotel keeper of East Florenceville, went to show that the parties had been intoxicated and had visited his premises on the night in question, and that he and Charles Smith, one of the prisoners, had had some words. He further testified that shortly before closing for the night Green had come there alone and had asked to be allowed to remain for the night, which request he refused. Mr. Smith, who showed a tendency towards flippancy, was put through a grueling cross-examination by Mr. Jones. His evidence did not materially add to the strength of the case for the prosecution. All the evidence adduced so far shows Darrah, one of the prisoners, to have been helplessly drunk throughout. The court adjourned at six o'clock.

Court resumed Thursday morning with the usual large number of spectators present. George Kinney was the first witness. He said he lived near the bridge; Smith called at 11.30 alone and borrowed a lantern to find his hat. About the time he returned with lantern Fred Green came in. He and Smith wrangled over a previous quarrel. Green left first, Smith a few minutes later. Kinney never saw Green after that. Smith and Darrah came back to borrow a hat for Darrah and stayed a few minutes.

Cross examined he said he looked at the clock when Green went out. He asked Green to stay all night but he declined saying he was going to the hotel. The freshet was very high and it was possible for Green to walk out of his home across the road into the river.

Mrs. Mabel Kinney corroborated her husband's testimony. Alfred Adams who found the coat and boot on the bridge in the early morning gave evidence as to the construction of the bridge. Mr. Jones made application for a view of the bridge.

Wm. Hopkins found the coat and shoe on the bridge and took them home. He also gave evidence about the construction of the bridge. He said he saw blood on the railing but he afterwards found it was bicycle grease. This closed the case for the prosecution with the exception of Dr. Mullin, the coroner.

The defence will call Mrs. Stephen Darrah and L. H. Noble. The prisoners will not take the stand. The case will go to the jury this afternoon and a verdict will probably be reached tonight (Thursday).
