

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Thursday, July 1st, is a public holiday. The stores in town will be closed on that day.

Recent purchasers of Ford Automobiles include: Hon. J. K. Flemming, Woodstock; Howard Reid, Centreville; H. P. Birmingham, Victoria; Alfred Roxborough, Bear Island.

Perley Brackett of Danforth, Me., and Lella Howard of Houlton, Me., were united in marriage at the Reformed Baptist Parsonage, at Woodstock, N. B., June 16th, 1915, by Rev. H. S. Dow.

Word was received here this week by friends of the death, at Malden, Mass., of Mr. Murray Scribner. No details of his death were given. Mr. Scribner was a former Woodstock boy.

Several complaints have been received by the Chief of Police relative to the excessive speed of automobiles going through town. The Chief has warned some of the drivers that it is a violation of the town bye-law and prosecution will be made if it continues.

Inspector A. J. Brooks has been granted a year's leave of absence by the New Brunswick Board of Education. Mr. Brooks has enlisted for overseas service. His place will be filled by Mr. F. A. Dixon, who has been acting in place of Inspector Meagher. The latter will resume his duties in the counties of Carleton and Victoria, in September.

Mr. Robert Newton, director of agricultural schools in New Brunswick, has been granted leave of absence. Mr. Newton is gazetted a provincial lieutenant in the 10th Field Battery, and will take a course at Kingston to be in readiness for service with the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

On information furnished by the residents of one of the country districts, Chief Kelly, with other officers and an interpreter, went after a German spy, Tuesday. The "spy" turned out to be a well known agent who is on a trip through the territory. It would be a difficult matter to figure out what particular business would bring a German spy to this out of the way locality.

A sneak thief entered the home of Mrs. John Troy, Tuesday afternoon, and stole a valuable watch and ten dollars in cash. He was seen leaving the house and the police have a good description of the man. It is likely that an arrest will be made as suspicion points strongly to a certain party as the perpetrator of the mean act.

Three barns belonging to Alonzo Taylor of Florenceville, were totally destroyed by fire Tuesday. The fire is supposed to have been started by some small children who were playing about the premises. The loss is about $2,000 with only a small amount of insurance.

Chas. E. F. Stetson of Houlton dropped dead Wednesday of last week, at Debec, where he went with a crowd to fish. Mr. Stetson was head engineer for the B & A and is well known throughout the county and state as a man of fine habits. Many friends sympathize with the wife and children and other relatives.—Houlton Pioneer.

A young colored girl named Hudlin was arrested by the police on a serious charge and was given a three months suspended sentence by Magistrate Limerick in the police court this morning and ordered to leave the city before 4 o'clock this afternoon. The young colored man who was in company with the girl last night escaped the police. The girl formerly resided in Woodstock, but has been making her home in this city for the past few months.—Gleaner.

Spurgeon Tompkins was given a pleasing ovation at the station just before his departure to join the 55th Battalion at Sussex, last Friday, when Mr. Guy Porter, on behalf of the boys and girls of the Perth Athletic Association, presented him with a wrist watch and the assurance of their good will and regret of his departure. The school children marched to the station in a body and gave the young man three rousing cheers as the train left.—Victoria County News.

"OUR CHIEF WORRIES"

Continued from first page.) up so, well that the other night we were putting in stakes to mark out a new trench and the fellow who was giving us a line was able to direct us from a distance of 300 yards, which is quite a distance to see in the moonlight. In places you can easily see the German lines from ours. You can imagine how active the snipers must be and also how active the artillery observers in the front trenches. If they see a bunch of us about their telephone range, back to their battery, and in a second or so all you can see of us is heels scrambling into the nearest ditch or shell crater to get cover. The area we work in is so full of old abandoned trenches, both British and German, and shell craters that we can always find cover whenever we hear a shrapnel burst. But of course the only warning we have is the whistling of the shell and that is only an instant previous to the burst. The consequence is that we attain the remarkable ability of jumping into these covered places as quickly as a wild animal ever sprang away from the grasp of its would-be captor. It is amusing at times to see a bunch of us crawl under cover. The other night six of us were able to get into a single shell hole. Of course in order to get absolute protection from shrapnel you have to have overhead cover.

May 31st, 1915. I was not able to finish this letter yesterday so I will continue it today. I was out to the firing line or rather to the place where the firing line will be soon—last night, and had a fairly exciting time of it. We were digging a line of entrenchments in a gap in the lines. The Germans have had their eye on this gap for some time and have been constantly trying either to rush through it or to get up real close to it and entrench themselves. But the British have so far kept them back by their fire coming from each side of the gap. The idea was for us to fill this gap up with a line of entrenchments. We had marked the trench out the night before and had a lot of infantry doing the digging last night. The only thing between us and the Germans was a small patrol of three men who were to warn us if the Germans attacked. We all had our rifles laid down and the infantrymen were all at work inside the trench with shovels, while I and the other engineers there were superintending the work. All at once we saw the Germans send up their usual red and green signals which is a sign that they are going to attack. Then their artillery began. Before we had time to get into the trenches a dozen or so shells had burst right around our trench and a machine gun had started raking the road across which we were building a barricade. It is a miracle that all our fellows had time to get into the trench before being hit, but we all managed to. But even then we were almost as badly off as ever because here we were—almost 200 men and only a dozen of whom had their rifles with them. The parapet of our trench was being clipped by bells and bullets and we could not crawl out to get our rifles. I glanced around the part of the trench I was in. There were about a dozen men there, all infantrymen excepting myself. Some of them had shovels but others who had been placing sandbags had none. I discovered five extra shovels in the bottom of the trench and I took one and gave the other four to fellows who had none. You may laugh at this if you like but we did this because we knew that if it came to bayonet charge by the Germans we would have a better chance armed with shovels than we would unarmed. So we settled down to wait. We had every reason to expect an attack. The Germans got up so close that their star shells dropped in behind our trench and lit the whole place up. I figure that they must have been within 100 yards of us. But our guns gave them plenty of shrapnel and we could hear our patrol out in front firing steadily. Although out in the open field they were safer than we were for the tall grass hid them and even the crack of their rifles would not betray them. After a while we received orders from the officer present to make our way back to the nearest occupied trench. This was a risky movement but, by lying down flat in the grass whenever a star shell went up we succeeded in concealing our presence. Finally we got back to the trench and I called the roll of the engineer party finding no one was missing. I was mighty thankful as I was afraid that some of the fellows who were at a different part of the trench from me did not get inside in time. The paths leading home were being shelled but we decided that we had better get home before daylight came. We had no mishaps on the way home however.

I forgot to tell you that on the way up there last evening Sands Gillespie got wounded. He got a bad shrapnel wound in his arm. I heard that his arm was broken. He was behind me in another party. He is really a driver and only comes out to the trenches for the interest and excitement attached to it. He went out with me one night, and since then has been going out whenever he can. He may be out of the service for a long time and will possibly be sent back to Canada to recuperate.

I happened to find the 8th Battery by chance about a week ago. Saw Arthur Kelly, Norman Bull, George Niles, Joe Price and Howe Jacques. They are all as well as ever. The next day I passed Harold Rimes on the road but just merely had time to shake hands. But most surprising of all was what happened yesterday. I was up to the Headquarters of the 1st Brigade on duty and who should I see but Clara Kirkpatrick. I was very much surprised to see him. Had time to have a long talk with him. He enlisted in a Saskatchewan Regt. and was sent here among reinforcements for the 2nd Battalion. He said he had seen all the Woodstock fellows of the 2nd Contingent in Shorncliffe.

Received some Sentinels and Telegrams yesterday.

They say the division is going to be relieved soon. I hope it is true for the ranks in some of the battalions are getting fearfully depleted. The Germans are commencing to use phosphorous on their bullets and that makes a wound almost unbearable. They are commencing to poison the watercourses very extensively also. They must be getting pretty nearly up against it or they would not do these things. Their shells are certainly inferior to the British. We can see this ourselves. Nevertheless they still do quite a lot of damage don't they?

I guess I will have to close now. Will write again soon. Love to all. Your son, ROBERT.
