

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Save your hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—Also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store. You surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine. Save your hair! Try it!

CAN IT BE?

(Tribune)

The Tory papers are running with great persistence at present a story to the effect that Liberal M. P.'s are refusing to pair off with Conservative officers overseas, and that as a consequence many of those officers may have to return. It is also stated that there are many more Conservative officers on active service than officers of the Liberal party. It is also stated, though not so prominently by government papers, that there are some two hundred useless and honoratory officers lounging about England, who will either have to give up, their rank to get to the front, or return to Canada as civilians. With all respect to those Conservatives—of whom we are glad to think there are many—who are doing their duty nobly on the firing line, can it be the same method had to be devised to cover the return of these other "political colonels," the fruits of patronage, who so outnumber their Liberal brethren, at that consequently this story pairs was trumped up? Can it be?

Sir Edward Carson is First Lord of the Admiralty in the new British Government. His career the past few years has been an extraordinary one. It is a curious lesson to teach to the youth of the Empire that a man may defy King, Parliament, Army and Navy, Constitution, law, and respect for the throne; review troops raised to fight King and Parliament; pose as the maker of a revolutionary government, in part of the king's dominions, and within two or three years be accepted for the highest positions in the British Government. This is the lesson of Sir Edward Carson's career. It is a lesson which bodes no good for the future of this Empire. It has already done immense injury in the country which was the scene of his reprehensible, and even treasonable efforts.—Ex.

Another act of grace on the part of the Borden Government would be to say to all the non-combatant officers in handsome uniforms in the Pay & Records Office, at London, "It's your turn at the front. Fight or go home." The same thing could be said to the stay-at-home brigadiers on this side of the water. There are enough urgers in Canada, husky fellows who keep egging the rest of the people on, to make a couple of regiments. Everybody would be glad to see them get their chance in the fighting line. Another regiment might consist entirely of the honorary colonels, with which Sir Sam has bestrewn this happy country.—H. F. Gadsby.

The Lost Art.
The four-year-old had just been reproved at the table. He continued to talk cheerfully though unanswered, to father. After some minutes of soliloquy he turned to mother and remarked:
"Your husband doesn't talk very much this noon, does he, mother?"

WHO IS BRUSILOFF?

Cousin Declares That He Is Really Sir Hector Macdonald.

"When a man is dead, then he's done for," runs the old ballad, but there are a few who do not come under this generalization. We have had the famous Dauphin of France, titular King Louis XVII., who is said to have escaped from the deadly Temple, and to have lived in America or elsewhere as various people. And two novelists took the idea as bases for interesting novels. We recall news items how Oscar Wilde did not die in France, but was buried in Egypt, and lived to find life anew, hidden away. The mystery of Marshal Ney is an old story. And there was Hector Macdonald, who has reappeared in the person of more than one noted military leader; especially lately, he has been identified with General Brusiloff.

There are, then, men who simply will not stay dead. The story of Brusiloff, while the reverse of probable, is still interesting enough to be reproduced. A writer recently got out an interview with a resident of Gotham who said she was a cousin of the supposedly dead Macdonald. In this the identity with Brusiloff was put forth. We learn:

The legend of Sir Hector Macdonald is one of the strangest and most romantic in modern history. Charged with immoral conduct in Ceylon in 1903, Sir Hector, then a brigadier-general of the British army, a Knight Commander of the Bath, and a member of the Distinguished Service Order, was reported to have committed suicide in a Paris hotel after visiting London and failing to have the charges dismissed.

Officially, General Sir Hector Macdonald is dead and buried in a little cemetery outside of Edinburgh. His wife remarried many years ago. Tradition has it, however, that the suicide in the Paris hotel was not Sir Hector, but a traveler in an adjoining room. Seeing at once the opportunity, Sir Hector, according to the story, changed clothes with the corpse, and, in his new identity, departed unobserved. Like the man in Arnold Bennett's story, Sir Hector went forth into the world with his life to use as he liked.

The legend, which was previously hay and unconfirmed, takes on new life in the words of this Mrs. Taylor, Macdonald's cousin. The reporter asked a number of questions, trying to shake her belief in the identity of the hero of the eastern front but without any success. The account states:

"I am absolutely certain," she said, "that General Brusiloff is really Sir Hector. While I am only a distant relative, cousins of Sir Hector live in London and Canada and Australia, and I know that they have been in communication with him."

"Sir Hector was a small man, stockily built. Gen. Brusiloff is of the same figure. In his character of Russian general, Sir Hector has grown a moustache, but it does not make his features unrecognizable."

"Many people who did not know of Sir Hector have commented on the queer and extraordinary circumstances connected with the rise of the Russian commander. It is odd, to say the least, they point out, that a man in supreme command of one of the greatest offensives of the war should be of a previous history totally unknown. 'Brusiloff' is not a real Russian name, anyway. And the photographs of the general show he does not look like a Russian."

Canning Without Sugar.

Housewives who intended to reduce the amount of canning done this season by reason of the high cost of sugar may abandon that project and put up as much as they wish, is the statement issued by the canning specialists at the Department of Agriculture.

This can be made possible by the use of boiling water when sugar syrup is beyond one's means. Any fruit, they say, may be successfully sterilized and retained in the pack by simply adding boiling water instead of the hot syrup. Most fruits canned alone in water do not retain their flavor, texture, and color as do those canned in sugar, and must be sweetened when used for sauces or desserts.

In order to can without sugar the product must be canned on the same day that it is picked. It should be prepared for canning in the ordinary way. Then the containers should be placed in a sterilizing vat such as a wash boiler with a false bottom, and completely covered with boiling water. The sterilization process may extend from 10 to 30 minutes, according to the process used. After moved, the glass jars should be wrapped in paper to prevent bleaching and stored in a dry, cool place.—Hartford Times.

Queens Sold Almanacs.

The sale of almanacs was once a lucrative monopoly. Queen Elizabeth granted the sole right to publish "almanacs and prognostications" to the Stationers' Company, and James I. extended the privilege to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, but for centuries only these three bodies were permitted to issue printed almanacs. The monopoly ended when the claim of the king to the privilege of granting or withholding permission to issue almanacs—a survival, perhaps, from days when kings asserted their right to regulate all things, including even the times and seasons—was definitely disproved and proclaimed non-existent. Now any body can say who's who anywhere.—London Chronicle.

Sh building in B. C.

The Wallace Shipyards, at Vancouver, have taken contracts for the construction of three steam vessels in addition to the three wooden vessels already in course of construction. Several other propositions are under consideration. In some of the Pacific States shipbuilding has been booming for some time and the activity is now spreading to the Canadian side of the bay.

Household Hints.

Lemon-juice makes a good substitute for shoe polish if a few drops are well rubbed into the leather. If copper pots are not very carefully washed and dried, a danger that they may poison the food cooked in them.

When making salad sauce, add a little brown sugar to the vinegar and the dressing will be much more palatable and more quickly absorbed.

Guelph's Loss by War.

The extent to which recruiting has been carried on in Guelph is well reflected in the returns from the Assessment Department, which were handed out recently. Assessor Hastings places the population of the city at 16,022, a decrease from the previous year of 713. A large number of soldiers' wives and families have returned to the old country until after the war. The total assessment is $11,419,930, an increase of more than $200,000. The city loses the business tax for the hotels of the city, which was included in the estimates at the first of the year. This amounts to $1,800. Only one ward in the city shows an increase in population.

WILLIAMSTOWN.

Mrs. Johnnie Gilliss was a caller at R. D. Smith's recently.

TEBO

'Twas Tebo who sat in the gloaming
With the eyes of a sweetheart so true,
While watching the bend in the river,
For the sight of her lover's canoe.

The whippoorwill sang in the gloaming,
The old song of love and good cheer,
But the oar in the hands of her lover
Brought the welcome sound to her ear.

There was light in her eyes in the gloaming,
When she met his canoe at the bend,
And she met his canoe at the bend,
And she met his canoe at the bend.

And their trysting-time there by the river
They could never have cause to deplore.

Together they sat in the gloaming,
Nor heeding the deepening gloom,
And the truth-plight they gave to each other,
Was sweet as the wild roses bloom.

Then oft times they sat in the gloaming

While planning a future most fair
Till startled were they by the war-drum
And the bugle's shrill notes on the air.

I heard her yestreen in the gloaming,
As her sobbing voice broke into prayer,
Commending her poor wounded lover
To the Father of Infinite care.

She leaves behind many friends to mourn her death.

Deceased is survived by her husband aged 86 years, one of the few survivors of the Crimean war, who is not enjoying good health, one daughter, Elizabeth, and one son, John, all of this town.

The funeral took place from the home to St. Gertrude's church, at nine o'clock on Saturday morning, when Rev. J. J. Ryan offered up a high mass of requiem, after which interment was made in Catholic cemetery. The pall bearers were Jas. S. McMalus, Jas. Brown, Thomas Murphy and Wm. King.

She was the widow of William Balloch, sometime high sheriff of Carleton, The deceased lady, who ever took a prominent part in all good works, and charitable enterprises, was much beloved. Her death cast a gloom over the community, in all the activities of which—religious, patriotic, charitable and social—she was willing and cheerful initiative. She will be greatly missed. Among the many beautiful floral tributes, which testified to the esteem in which she was held by family and friends, were exquisite crosses from St. James parish church, and the Red Cross. The service for the dead was taken by the priest-in-charge, assisted by the choir of St. James' church.
