

"It's in the Pocket"

It's the "losing hazard" to pay a big price for an ordinary Suit or Overcoat, when you can buy genuine Semi-ready Tailoring with the label in the pocket.

That "price in the pocket" means that the Semi-ready Company must uphold their standard values in days of stress. They have a reputation.

Seek the sign in the pocket. When found you're sound.

B. B. DYKEMAN

Has the Only Genuine Semi-Ready Tailoring

CARLETON COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Prominent Workers Present—Secretary's Report—Election of Officers.

Report of the Annual Convention of the Carleton County S. S. Association at Tracy Mills Sept. 11th and 12th, 1917.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION

The convention met in the United Baptist Church at 2:30. Devotional exercises led by Rev. J. B. Hurlow. The President, C. W. Manzer, then took the chair. An address was given by Rev. W. A. Ross on "Peculiar Needs of Carleton County." Needs, all the people of Carleton County. He advocated having a "Go to S. S. Day" to get all the people you can to attend S. S. Graded lessons are demanded in the modern S. S. Four great thoughts to centre teaching about food, light, exercise, and environment. A Conference on Organized Classes followed.

EVENING SESSION

Devotional exercises led by Rev. G. S. Helps. An address of Welcome was given by Rev. W. J. Hurlow in his usual hearty and inspiring way. C. W. Manzer made a reply. Rev. Samuel Howard gave an address on "S. S. Evangelism." Rev. W. A. Ross from the text: "How shall I go up to My Father and the lad be not with Me?" Three influences on child's life are: home, church, community. Boys and girls learn more in the first 6 or 7 years of their life than in all the rest. If Godlessness, carelessness and indifference are in the home the child just absorbs these ideas and is not to blame for them. All we have got to do to bring back Prussianism is to fail to teach the boys and girls of Carleton Co.

WEDNESDAY A. M.
The Secretary's, Treasurer's and Dept. Supt's, reports were received. As several schools had not sent in reports in some of the parishes, the Secretary was unable to give a report for the whole county. The report of the Treasurer was as follows:

Balance from last year, $99.00. Receipts $247.26. Paid in association $222.41. Balance due $52.59. Cash on hand $77.30.

Committees appointed as follows:
Nominating: Clyde Rideout, S. J. Parsons, John Graham. Mrs. S. S. Miller, C. A. McBride.

Enrollment: Mrs. T. A. Jones, ex. W. J. Hurlow.

Resolutions: Rev. G. S. Helps, Rev. M. H. Manuel, Ernest Carey.

Press: C. A. McBride.

A Parish Conference led by Rev. A. A. Ross followed, in which he explained the Parish Standard according to points. The rank of the parishes was as follows: Aberdeen 30, Peel 40, Simonds, Wakefield and Woodstock 50 each, Richmond, Brighton and Wicklow 70 each, Wilmet and Peel 80 each.

The report of the Nominating Com. was received as follows:

President, Ernest Carey.
Presidents of parishes to be Vice Presidents of county.

Secretary, Clark A. McBride.
Treas., Clyde Rideout.

Rec. Secy., Mrs. S. J. Barker.
Teacher Training, C. W. Manzer.
Secondary, Rev. G. S. Helps.
Elementary, Mrs. C. W. Parlee.
Temperance, Clyde Rideout.
Home, Mrs. S. S. J. Parsons.

THE LATEST METHOD

of grafting skin over a severe burn or scald is by the Zam-Buk process. Zam-Buk contains herbal ingredients that literally grow new skin. How much safer, simpler and cheaper than the old method, which was by surgery!

Mrs. George Currie, of 194 Waterloo Ave., Guelph, Ont., writes: "My baby sustained a very severe burn, and although he received medical attention for eight weeks, he got very little better. Finally the doctor told me that skin would have to be grafted."

"Meantime I had heard of Zam-Buk and decided to try it first. This soothing balm soon drew out the inflammation, and in a short time I could notice a great improvement. New skin began to form, and in three weeks' time the burn was quite healed over, without having to resort to surgery."

Zam-Buk is equally good for cuts and bruises, as well as for eczema, old sores, blood-poisoning and piles. All dealers or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, 50c. box, 3 for $1.25.

Zam-Buk

Adult, Rev. J. B. Hurlow on I. B. R. A., S. J. Parsons. Missions, Mrs. S. S. Miller.

Delegates to Provincial Convention: Thomas Graham, Mrs. J. R. Kirkpatrick, Mrs. T. A. Jones, Ernest Carey and C. W. Manzer.

AFTERNOON SESSION

Devotional exercises led by Rev. F. A. Wightman. Installation of officers by Rev. W. A. Ross. New President takes the chair. Teacher Training Conference by Rev. W. A. Ross. All depositions have agreed to wipe off the slate of the I. T. courses. The new plan is for a 3 years' course in 120 lessons diploma given at end of course. Examinations every 3 months.

S. J. Parsons taught blackboard lesson to children of day school. Mrs. S. F. Miller read paper on Missions. Rev. M. H. Manuel gave an address on Teacher Training.

Four Bees or thoughts, used right will do great good, used wrong will stir: 1. Be Ready. 2. Be Willing. 3. Be There. 4. Be Hopeful.

EVENING SESSION

Devotional exercises led by Rev. W. J. Hurlow. Reports of Resolution and Credentials Committees received. 45 delegates registered, 9 pastors present. Addresses were given by Rev. G. S. Helps, C. W. Manzer and Rev. W. A. Ross.

The Convention closed by singing the National Anthem. Attendance about 200. Some very helpful, inspiring addresses were given.

CLARK A. MCBRIDE, Recording Secy., Pro. tem.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

"To be healthy at seventy prepare at forty" is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that the careless treatment of aches and pains undermines our strength.

Keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to sustain your strength, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No harmful drugs in Scott's. Scott & Borne, Toronto, Ont.

Best for All Preserving!

Lantic pure Cane Sugar is best for preserving because of its purity, high-sweetening power and "fine" granulation.

2 and 5-lb. Cartons
10, 20 and 100-lb. Sacks

Lantic Library of Cook Books, free for Red Ball Trade-mark cut from CARTON or Sack.

ATLANTIC SUGAR REFINERIES Limited, Montreal

"Pure and Uncolored"

Why English Labor Men Offered Strong Support to War Against Germany

WILLIAM HARD tells in The Metropolitan how the British Labor party swung from being an anti-war party to a pro-war party.

The British Labor party is a great force in politics, and in Arthur Henderson, according to Mr. Hard, it has a leader the most highly placed and the most politically powerful in any country in Europe, except Russia. The British Labor party has a paid membership of 2,250,000. The British Labor party falls into two parts. One is the trade union party, the other the intellectualist party, so-called. The first has 2,200,000 members, the second about 42,000, composed of three Socialist groups, joined by middle class people, as well as the working class. These groups are the Independent Labor party, the British Socialist party and the Fabian Society. From the Independent Labor party, having 30,000 members, come the conspicuous pacifists, so-called Labor members of Parliament, like James Ramsey MacDonald and Philip Snowden, so often referred to in the news as Labor members when they do not represent the great party at all. They are not trade union leaders like Henderson, Ben Tillett, and James Sexton. And their presence in Parliament leads to misapprehensions in other countries. Not even John Burns, when signed from the Asquith government at the beginning of the war, as a protest against it, was a Labor member. He was elected as a Liberal. Labor has been thoroughly supporting the war in England. Mr. Hard was at the great meeting of British Labor representatives when the six Labor members of Parliament who had taken office in the new Lloyd George Government were called upon to justify themselves. David Kirkwood, who engineered a strike in Glasgow, was called upon. He told how he was deported by the government of which the Laborites were members. Cries of "Henderson" filled the hall when he had finished. But Kirkwood's strike was an outlaw strike, Henderson showed that he was not a strike leader. He was a member of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. The chairman called Mr. Bevin, dockworker, of Bristol. Could the Labor members sit with Lord Rhonda, coal baron, in the House of Lords, the conditions in the South Wales mine fields, where a strike was imminent? Had not Lord Rhonda refused to reveal his costs? Was he not hourly growing richer? And "if it is treason in war time to see this war through," And when the vote came, the entrance of the Labor members into the government was approved by the British Labor party, through its delegates, by 1,849,000 to 307,000.

On August 1, 1914, Mr. Henderson issued an anti-war manifesto. August 3 Germany presented its ultimatum to Belgium, and the next day invaded that country. August 7 the resignation of James Ramsay MacDonald as leader was accepted by the Parliamentary Labor party. The party had wavered in its opposition to a declaration of war, but MacDonald had not. MacDonald was succeeded by Henderson. He who had issued the anti-war manifesto within a week was leading the Laborites in the direction of unbending war. Henderson is an iron founder by trade. He is a professional politician, who is determined to give a good account of himself. He is a good Englishman, who has not said the same and made it good with their lives: "We have a very difficult task in front of us, but for the honor of our country, we are determined to give a good account of ourselves." They did. On December 27, 1915, the British boats engaged a German gunboat of five times their combined tonnage, and after an action of twelve minutes she was sunk. The gunboat of the British boats must have been excellent, for the third shot from the Mini hit the wireless and brought it down; the fifth shot hit her on the waterline and she fled, "but we were as morally degraded as she after she had been hit." One of them went through the conning tower, killing the captain, a gunlayer, and a seaman. She was also leaking badly, and then she quit. Then the British sailors boarded her and found that twelve of their shells had struck. She was yellow from lyddite, and the dead were unrecognizable. They were buried with military honors.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

The country, which loves the hack politician far less than it did of old," says The Economist, "loves him very much, sees that their Ministers are all good, sound, direct men. The wire-pullers, naturally enough, do not like them at all, and are going about saying that Labor has an excessive representation in the National Government and is getting too much. We do not think anything of the kind. One Englishman is as good as another, and the day is long past when a seat on the front bench was the prerogative of a certain type or class. Far from believing that Labor has supplied too many Cabinet Ministers, we look cheerfully and quite confidently to the day when it will have many more. And if we are told with bated breath that a Labor Cabinet is a possibility of the future, then we reply without hesitation that we are quite ready for it. We are satisfied that whenever it does come, as no doubt it will in due course, it will be as good as any other government we have ever had."

Why leave your money in the bank at 3 per cent when you can get 5 per cent compounded half yearly from WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES?

British Tars Still Peerless

SO earnestly are our eyes, our hearts, fixed on the Western front that we have little thought for the wonderful deeds that have been accomplished by British and Allied troops in other theatres of war. For instance, we hear little and then only at long intervals of what has been done and what is doing in Africa, where at one time there were probably half a dozen fronts, and half a dozen little wars raging simultaneously. To-day there is only one African front, only one German army at large, and this is now being attacked. That there is only one African battlefield to-day is due to the splendid heroism of British, Belgian, and Afrikaander expeditions that gradually rounded up and destroyed the various enemy bodies that were operating in different and widely-separated parts of the great continent. Some incidents that occurred in are reported in the form of a diary by Commander G. Spicer Simson, of the British Naval Reserve, who headed the Tanganyika expedition in the fall and winter of 1915-1916.

His original task was to take two small British gunboats and their crews a distance of some 10,000 miles, place them on Lake Tanganyika and there assist the Belgians in wiping out the enemy, the Belgians apparently not having big enough boats for the job. He mentions that the small size of the British boats excited the jealousy of the Belgians when they first arrived, for it was not believed that they were big enough for the task ahead of them.

It is regrettable that the tonnage of these two boats, Mini and Tontou, was not given by Commander Simson, but he mentions incidentally that of the three German boats that dominated the lake before the arrival of the British expedition one of 600 tons blew herself up to escape being captured. Of the other two one was sunk and the other taken. It is obvious that the Mini and Tontou were 2500 tons each. Nevertheless, after their ocean voyage, they were transported 200 miles through bush and forest, 400 miles by river, and again 100 miles by road. Probably when the history of the war is written this obscure little task performed by a handful of Englishmen assisted by negroes will stand out as one of its most wonderful achievements.

Commander Simson says that the conditions existing on the last stage of the overland trip were simply awful. He and his men had no water to drink; so they drank filthy mud. They had little sleep, and were worn out with dust, flies, and mosquitoes. The dust from the oxen and traction engines, in combination with the merciless sun, did then "sixteen days on the Luabala River in an open boat through a sleeping sickness country, infested with tsetse, was an experience none of us wishes to repeat again."

He says, however, that the journey was worth the hardships, and that the British boats must have been excellent, for the third shot from the Mini hit the wireless and brought it down; the fifth shot hit her on the waterline and she fled, "but we were as morally degraded as she after she had been hit." One of them went through the conning tower, killing the captain, a gunlayer, and a seaman. She was also leaking badly, and then she quit. Then the British sailors boarded her and found that twelve of their shells had struck. She was yellow from lyddite, and the dead were unrecognizable. They were buried with military honors.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-zag course and thus lose time while the larger boat was getting into action. These tactics were successful, and the Phil gradually got the range of the Hedwig and put shell after shell into her. In ten minutes she was on fire and sinking. The British picked up twelve Germans and nine blacks; the others were either killed or drowned. With the suicide of the third vessel, the lake was cleared of German boats, and the British expedition had accomplished its ends. It is a satisfaction to be able to say that in these actions there was not a single casualty, and the surgeon, who had insisted throughout the journey in carving all the joints of fowl in order that he might be in practice, had to return with undressed scalpel.

On January 9 the Hedwig Weissman, a large German armed steamer, was sighted. She was attacked by the Mini and the German boat taken in the first fight, which had been repaired and renamed the Phil. The German boat was fast enough to overhaul the Hedwig, which had steamed up to attack, but had turned tail as soon as she saw the Union Jack, and so the Mini put after her, opening fire which compelled the German to keep a zig-z