THE STORY HOUR

The story hour for children at the Library has amply justified the efforts that have been made for its success. For ten successive Saturdays a very attentive and appreciative audience of little people has collected at the story room. The attendance has averaged about a hundred with not less than eighty as the minimum.

As the undertaking has been more or less you experiment a wide range of stories has been given by a number of people interested in children's literature. The interest among these children seems to be largely for adventure and nature stories. The method of presenting of course effects the interest but generally speaking the popular stories are those with a definite plot or a series of plots affecting one character, without too much detail. With nature stories the interest is greater if told from the insect or animal's point of view.

With children the long introduction or description is not popular; they prefer to get on to the story.

The attention usually is more easily held in the told than in the read story. Though such stories as Hiawatha and Dickens's Christmas Carol etc. are preferable read.

The experiment of telling a story for the purpose of instruction purely was tried when Dr. G. P. Clarke told the story of Peter Peterkin, the boy who neglected his teeth. It was an admirable story delightfully told and held the attention throughout. The best comment on its efficacy is the fact that many little people sat with tightly closed lips till the story teller had left the room.

Stories of this character would be valuable for introducing health subjects generally.

Most Heat from Fuel

One reason why the Kootenay Range gives the most use of the heat generated from the fuel, is that the grates have ample vents to make perfect combustion in the firebox, which is properly and scientifically proportioned according to the needs of the range.
