PEACE.

It will not be a town or of any size whatever about the whole British which will not celebrate Day, which, by proclamation of the King, will be Saturday. This celebration the most momentous event centuries.

It was a very close thing that story did not go the other way, which case we would be dancing the goose-step to the tune played by German bands. Probably it will not be known for some time to come how near we were to this. Canada's part in the Great War was sublime, and 50,000 young men lie under the blood soaked soil of France and Flanders in order that we at home may have the opportunity of celebrating Peace Day. The heroes of the day will, of course, be the returned men, who did the fighting while the stay-at-homes grumbled about the little inconveniences they had to put up with. However, it is well ended now and any man who has a spark of the spirit of thankfulness in him, will offer thanksgiving for the great peril that is past.

CARVELL AND FIELDING.

(St. John Globe.)

Discussing cabinet resignations, and speculating on possible cabinet changes, the Toronto Globe says: Rumor is again busy with the name of the Hon. F. B. Carvell, Minister of Public Works. Mr. Carvell is said to be restless and disposed to retire from the government on the ground that a permanent blending of Liberalism and Conservatism with Conservatism much the larger ingredient, is impossible. Were it not that the Oppositionists—or rather, some men who arrogate to themselves authority to speak for Liberalism—have formally banned all the Liberal Unionist leaders, Mr. Carvell might speedily find himself back in the old fold. He is not disposed to plead guilty and ask the mercy of the court for supporting the Military Service Act, and unless he does the way back is not likely to prove a path of roses. Mr. Carvell will probably return to his law practice should he decide that he cannot accept the Unionist party as a permanent political abiding place.

The announcement put forward in to-day's despatches of the launching of a leadership boom for Hon. W. S. Fielding naturally rises speculation as to how Liberals who, as the Globe says, "arrogate to themselves 'authority to speak for Liberalism,'" will regard the former Finance Minister.

JULY 12TH
FITTINGLY OBSERVED

Carleton County L. O. L. held a picnic at Island Park, July 12th. A very large number were present from nearby towns and spent an enjoyable day. Speeches were made by prominent members of the order.

A procession through the principal streets was held in the following order:

Sir Knight Watson, Houlton, (guard of honor)

Houlton Sir Knights
Houlton L. O. L., No. 211
Arroostook Co. L. O. L.

Richmond L. O. L.
Alexander L. O. L.
Benton L. O. L.
Woodstock L. O. L.

Bros. A. W. Clark and Osborn
Toms, acted as director of ceremonies.

Leap Year.

Leap year is a year which leaps over, as it were, one day more than an ordinary year; a year which contains 366 days, as distinguished from an ordinary year, which includes only 365 days. Every year the number of which is divisible by four is a leap year, except when it happens to be any number of hundreds not divisible by four. Thus 1894 was a leap year, but not 1900, this omission of leap years in such centuries being necessary to correct the error which arises from the excess of the addition of one day in four years (i. e., six hours) to the year over the true length of the year, i. e., 365 days 5 hours 48 minutes.

"Say It With Cake."

Mrs. Gadabout—Are you still bothered with the awful Boreum family coming to dine with you every few evenings?

Mrs. Babalot—Oh, no; they finally took the hint.

Mrs. Gadabout—What did you say to them?

Mrs. Babalot—Oh, nothing was said. But we served sponge cake every time they came.

Early Declines.

If the truth could be discovered probably it would be found that one reason why a woman lives longer than a man is because she doesn't pay any attention to statistics.

PROFESSIONAL TOASTMASTERS.

British Institution Which Is Unknown In Canada.

England has an institution unknown in this country—the professional toastmaster, whose duty it is at all large public dinners and luncheons formally to announce the toasts, as well as to call the guests to order. In fact, he performs the functions of a herald.

The Lord Mayor of London has his own toastmaster as well as his individual liveried servant who attends and serves him when he dines, both at the Mansion House and elsewhere. He stands behind the Lord Mayor's chair, clad in suitable raiment; a dignified, handsome old man, clean-shaven and gray haired.

The present Lord Mayor, Sir Charles Hanson, looks the part. He is jovial and urbane, of a very pleasant visage withal. Clad in his ceremonial robes of office, wearing his chains and star, he is a commanding figure, recalling the best traditions of this place.

A Canadian, of course, thinks of Dick Whittington when he imagines a picture of the Lord Mayor of London, and indeed the present incumbent very pleasantly gratifies this imagination by his appearance and speech. Apart from the picturesque aspect which is in keeping with the office, the present Lord Mayor is an exceedingly efficient executive, and has made a splendid record.

The other evening I was present at a dinner attended by the Lord Mayor. He did not wear his robes, but, of course, he carried the chains about his neck suspending the large, ancient, jeweled badge of office, and wore a glittering star on his left breast. Behind his chair stood his liveried servant, silently attentive to his needs.

When he arose to speak he made a pleasant picture, to which his special remarks added piquant zest. In concluding them he raised his glass and said: "Here's to our next merry meeting." "Merry meeting" was just what the Lord Mayor of London ought to have said. It recalled fairy-story books, and was most gratifying.

There are probably many professional toastmasters in London, but the one I happened to hear frequently is a solemn-faced individual, clad in black, with weary eyes and a heavy, drooping black moustache. He is perfectly impassive; lacking the faintest sense of humor, he takes himself and his office most seriously, and is never seen to smile. He has a wonderfully penetrating, sonorous, magnetic voice, which he uses to magnificent effect.

Preceding the dinner or luncheon, he stands with sepulchral dignity at the entrance to the reception room, announcing the guests as they arrive. It is "the Voice of London" heralding the advent of the individual who approaches "Lord Loves!" "The Right Hon. William Brown!" "The Earl of Pawtucket!" "Col. Jones!" "Admiral Smith!" "Sir Thomas Robinson!" "Mr. Nobody!"

After the menu has been disposed of, he, meanwhile, standing back of the chairman, mallet in hand, raps smartly on the table, and says in a commanding voice something like this: "Your excellency, my lords and gentlemen, pray silence for the chairman, who desires to offer a toast." The toast being proposed, he again raps. "Mr. Chairman, your excellency, my lords and gentlemen, the toast is the King." Thereupon the toast is drunk standing, after which he says: "Your excellency, your excellency, my lords and gentlemen, you may now smoke."

After the chairman has spoken, calling upon some one present to respond, the toastmaster pounds with his mallet on the table and says: "Mr. Chairman, your excellency, my lords and gentlemen, the toast is—whatever it may happen to be, and after it is drunk, to the invariable preliminary he adds: "Pray silence for Sir Thomas Brown," enumerating his office and titles in minute detail.—Wm. C. Egan in the Bellman.

Beneath the Flowers.

That was a beautiful and moving conception of Sir John Fraser's spoken at the Pilgrims' luncheon that the burial lands of the war in France should be made gardens of flowers. In his eloquent words:

"I would like to see—and I do see sometimes in my vision—the flowers of America growing over where lie so many of your gallant sons."

"I know there will be mighty stretches of fleur-de-lis marking the sleeping place of 1,500,000 brave Frenchmen. I would like to see the blooms of Belgium nodding over the graves where brave Belgians sleep, and I know that out there I would like to see a mighty avenue of maple trees, all glorious with their crimson and with their gold, telling the place where the Canadians rest, and there will be mighty masses of the wonderful Australian wattle showing where the Australians are sleeping; yes, and I know that there will be roses everywhere, the white rose, the red rose, the roses of Old England, of Lancaster and of York, telling where 500,000 brave Englishmen lie."

"Perhaps out in that Garden of the Brave I would come across stretches of heather, beautiful gold-purple heather. I would know there were Scotsmen buried there. There would be playing—I would hear the sound of the pipes, for the pipes always play where dead Scottish soldiers lie; that is the vision that comes to me."

Pigeons as Beer Hunters.

At Brampton, near Chesterfield, England, homing pigeons are extensively used in the detection of that rare beverage which one time was known under the name of beer. The thirsty souls have formed a committee, who send out to the neighboring villages a scout to find out which saloon has beer on sale.

He reports by homing pigeon, and the arrival of the bird sees an exodus in the direction of the fortunate hostel.

Two Million Dollar Monument.
