SELL WATER AT MC-ADAM AT $1 A BARREL

A condition almost unprecedented in New Brunswick exists at McAdam, where water is being sold to the people at $1 a barrel. A man named Little hauls it from a lake some distance from town. McAdam is dependent largely upon springs and wells for the supply. Wells and springs have gone dry.

DEANERY MEETING

A deanery meeting was held in Richmond on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Those present were Rural Dean J. E. Flewelling; secretary, L. A. Foster, Rev. H. F. Rigby, Woodstock; N. Franchitti, Edmundston; E. C. Budd, Pinder, Jas. Bennett, Richmond; W. Haigh, Hartland; and Mr. Sherlock, layreader at Gordon and Lorne. Evensong was held at St. John's church, on Tuesday evening, preacher, L. A. Foster. The service was attended by Mr. Haigh. On Wednesday, at 7:30, Holy Communion was celebrated, celebrant Rev. H. F. Rigby. Two meetings were held during the gathering at which business affairs concerning the deanery were discussed and the usual Greek reading took place and was discussed. Rev. J. E. Flewelling tendered his resignation as rural dean and a successor will be appointed at an early date. Many expressions of regret were expressed at Mr. Flewelling's retirement.

MARCELLA E. MILLER
BRIDE OF D. McLEOD

(Glendale Evening News)

A very simple but pretty wedding took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the parsonage of Rev. C. M. Calderwood of the Congregational church at 370 Salem street, when Miss Marcella Edith Miller, daughter of Mrs. Ella Miller, of 114 West Broadway, became the bride of Donald K. McLeod, son of Mr. and Mrs. George McLeod, of 1345 East Colorado street. The ring service was used by Rev. Calderwood. The bride was gowned in white silk crepe de chene and carried a beautiful bouquet of pink and white sweet peas. Miss Martha Ray played Cadman's "Love Song" just prior to the ceremony.

Mrs. McLeod graduated from Glendale Union High school in 1919 and for the past two years has been attending the University of California, Southern branch. Mr. McLeod is connected with Bartlett & French, Cleveland and Chandler motor car agency. He has been a resident of Glendale for two years, having come here from Kansas City.

Mr. and Mrs. McLeod left today on a honeymoon trip to San Francisco, going by boat. They will be at home to their friends after August 10 at 338 West California Avenue.

The groom, the son of Mr. George McLeod, formerly of Farmerston, this county, was a graduate of the U. N. B. in civil engineering, 1914.

Eastern friends extend congratulations.

SEEKS INCREASE CAPITAL STOCKS

Orders granting two public utilities permission to increase rates were issued Wednesday morning by the New Brunswick Public Utilities Commission in session in St. John. The board also heard the application of the New Brunswick Telephone Co. for permission to issue $880,000 additional capital stock.

ROBERT SAUNDERSON

Of this town, who was one of the Huns victims in the sinking of the hospital ship Llandorvey Castle. At one of the so called trials in Lepsic two officers of the submarine, that sent the ship to the bottom and ordered the life boats fired upon, were sentenced to prison for two years.

JUSTICE FOR THE MARITIMES

By HON. W. E. FOSTER
Premier of New Brunswick
(IN MACLEAN'S MAGAZINE)

The relations between the Maritime and other provinces of the Dominion is too important a subject to be dealt with hurriedly. The founders of Confederation attempted to deal with all matters affecting the interest of the four original provinces, Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, but even their vision was not keen enough to look ahead fifty years and see nine provinces instead of four, and a Dominion alive to every commercial possibility, each section insisting upon its rights and jealous of encroachment by provincial neighbors or the central government.

HON. W. E. FOSTER

The widening of Confederation and the inclusion of Prince Edward Island and British Columbia followed later by the entrance of Manitoba and ultimately Alberta and Saskatchewan, have created new conditions which must be considered in the light of the original compact; and so considered that justice will be rendered to each and all. The political partnership formed in 1867 and enlarged in later years, must continue satisfactory to all the members.

For some years signs have not been lacking that the provincial partnership is not as satisfactory as was hoped. From the time that the prairie provinces were created, Ontario and Quebec began to present their claims. The former, with large virgin areas unoccupied in the north, had its boundaries extended and New Ontario with untold wealth in minerals and forests and natural resources added to the old province, Quebec, not to be outdone by its partner in old Canada, had Ungava added to its large provincial area and these two—the largest and most important members of the original Confederation group—were apparently satisfied for the time being with the additional opportunities for expansion and with rich territory and resources which meant largely increased resources to their provincial coffers.

Their two Maritime partners, however, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, were not so fortunate. Their geographical position prevented either from acquiring more territory. With the State of Maine on the west and Quebec on the north, New Brunswick could not reach out. Nova Scotia, almost surrounded by the Atlantic Ocean, was in an even more awkward position with regard to increased territory.

The Maritime Protest

But, if the people of Canada outside of the Maritimes thought that the undivided and rich areas of the western and northern portions of the Dominion could be given away without protest from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, they were mistaken. The formation of three great western provinces came about in due time. Large tracts of splendid land were given to the Canadian Pacific and other railways to promote the construction of transportation routes and the encouragement of settlement. Again other large areas within the boundaries of the new provinces were reserved by the Federal Government to be controlled and administered from Ottawa. Because of this, the prairie provinces were given federal subsidies every year much in excess and out of all proportion to those paid to the Maritime Provinces. Ontario and Quebec could not object because of the increased territory they expected and apparently New Brunswick and Nova Scotia did not have influence enough to be listened to.

The western provinces are again insisting that all the Dominion lands within their borders shall be handed over to them, and I regret to note that some of their citizens, prominent in politics and business, feel that the eastern provinces have no claims for consideration or increased subsidies when these lands are handed over to them.

If this Dominion expects to remain a harmonious group of federal provinces, prospering through mutual co-operation, the rights of the original maritime members of Confederation must be respected. When lands in the prairie provinces were withheld from the western provinces when they entered the union, they obtained annually large sums of money instead. Now if these lands are handed over to them, they must surrender their claims to the increase in the subsidies and let New Brunswick and Nova Scotia be reimbursed for their interest in those lands.

There is no spirit of antipathy to the West in the East. On the contrary, many of the ties binding the Maritime provinces to the West are stronger than the bonds of Confederacy. Thousands, yes, tens of thousands of our sons and daughters have lent their energies to populating and building up the West. Many of the leading public men and broad-minded women in the West look back with love and often longing to the eastern hillside where they were born. Census after census the Maritimes have been simply marking time in population because our sons and daughters who that pioneer and adventure spirit, which has spread the British Empire over the Globe, have gone to the prairie provinces and enabled their new Canadian Dominion to retain its Canadianism, keeping alive and uppermost the spirit of the Empire, loyalty to the Crown and the institutions of free government which mean so much to every native subject, and which might have found difficulty in surviving and expanding if the large foreign immigration had been left to guide western destinies.

Grievances Deep-Rooted

There it is not possible for us to have any thing but the kindest feelings for the west, but our friendship must rest upon the sure foundation of esteem which is the offspring of justice and fair dealing and just as the Maritimes were glad to speed the new provinces on their way and to assist them by the loan of their share of the resources of Confederation, as well as the cream of its youth, armed with ability, capital and the spirit which conquers all obstacles, so the people of the Maritime Provinces expect prompt recognition of fair claims not based upon sentiment, but upon the conditions of the partnership pact called Confederation.

Careful readers of the newspapers and particularly that portion of the press which gives prominence to the proceedings in Parliament at Ottawa, as well as what takes place when important delegations wait upon the government there, must have noticed that one of the notable events at the close of the last session was the presence in Ottawa of a large number of business men from the Maritime Provinces protesting against the present freight tariff between this portion of the Dominion and the western provinces.

No such delegation, composed of the most prominent business men and representatives from many commercial bodies and Boards of Trade, would have waited upon the government with regard to this matter unless there was a genuine grievance.

THE FISHER MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

Institution Filled to Overflowing—Many Proposed Changes—Officials Recently Elected—Diet Kitchen a New Feature—Nurses Home Nearly Ready for Occupancy—Miss Bessie Budd is the Efficient Superintendent.

The Carleton County Fisher Memorial Hospital is at the present time, one of the most important and necessary public institutions. It is now overcrowded which is something unusual for this season of the year. The whole administration has undergone almost a complete re-organization and the affairs of the hospital are being conducted on a basis that works for efficiency in all departments.

The officials are:

F. O. Creighton, Chairman, Board of Trustees.

Miss M. Clark, Secretary Treasurer

John H. Lee, Chairman House Committee.

E. W. Mair, Chairman, Finance Committee.

Miss Bessie Budd, Superintendent.

Miss McFarlane, Supt. of Nurses.

In the general renovation of the hospital, carried on through the untiring efforts of Miss Budd, a diet kitchen has been added and courses in dietetics will be given the student nurses by Miss Inch of the Vocational staff. This will be an added feature with every facility for preparing food under proper hygienic conditions. Among the many other improvements that have been decided upon will be converting the whole of the top floor into an operating room with other accessories. This floor is now used by the nurses for sleeping rooms and the establishment of a home for the nurses will leave this for the purposes mentioned.

It will be remembered that the Hume residence has been bought and is being put in order for a home for the nursing staff. Some rooms have already been furnished by the efforts of the Women's Institute and the I. O. D. E. Some of the town's societies have expressed a wish to furnish other rooms which kindly offer has been accepted by the energetic ladies who are in charge of the work. It is the intention to organize a ladies' auxiliary composed of members from the different churches in town who will carry on the necessary work of such an organization and relieve in a measure the few ladies who are now carrying the responsibilities of this important work.

Beyond any questioning the town and county are the possessors of a remarkable institution and it is the bounden duty to maintain it on a high standard and to increase its efficiency to meet the demands that may come upon it. We can never justify having anything but the best and whatever financial, or other aid, is needed should be forthcoming.

There is every prospect that the hospital, barring the unexpected, will be run without further deficits. In a later issue we hope to have a description of the nurses' home and its formal opening. The young nurses are very anxious to move into their new home and it is hoped that the generous benefactors who have expressed a desire to help equip the rooms will realize the importance of carrying out the good work at a very early date.

Might Have Been Fatal

E. Neal, Manager of the Vogue Theatre, coming around the Queen street corner in his automobile, a few days ago, had a proposition before him that required quick action. It he continued on the street he would probably kill a young lady who was either bewildered or did not hear the horn, or he could run into a team which was hitched to a telephone post. He very properly crashed into the team, when the horse promptly started and made record time through the streets leaving pieces of wagon and harness at various points on the way to its home in Grafton. The auto was also badly damaged but Mr. Neal discounts any pecuniary loss so long as his efforts saved a human life.

Many Years of Faithful Service

Mr. John H. Watt, who has been for over forty years in the postal service, in early years in the town post office and a longer and later period on the railway, has retired on superannuation allowance. His many friends will congratulate him and trust that after such a long period of active and creditable public service he may enjoy many years of leisure and voluntary employment. Mr. Watt is one of our very best citizens and everyone who knows him is his friend. With his knowledge of amateur gardening and his literary tastes particularly his familiarity with Scotland's national poetry, he will find many congenial ways of enjoying the rest he has so honorably earned.
