FARMERS AS RULERS

In its issue of March 1, Canadian Finance said:—

"Alberta has a Farmer government; Ontario has a Farmer government; Manitoba will have a Farmer government for its next administration and Saskachewan already has one waiting round the corner."

The Winnipeg financial journal does not look for continued strength in the Farmer movement. It says:—

There are many reasons why a Farmer political party could not be permanently successful. The first is that when those who control governments use their power for the particular benefit of one class of the people the rank and file outside of that class and the fair minded individuals within the class eventually combine and overthrow the autocracy. Perhaps the most apparent objection to the purely farmer political movement today is the fact that under present conditions our rural populations get more than their fair share of parliamentary representation on a population basis. Ontario has a concrete example of this. The Farmer Labor government of that province has 56 supporters in a total of 111 members, but these 56 supporters represent just about one-third of the people of Ontario and the opposition represents two-thirds of the people. Coming a little farther west and closer home we find a somewhat similar situation in the Manitoba legislature. Winnipeg is represented by ten members out of a total of 55, although the population of Winnipeg is about one-third of that of the entire province. Under the old two party system this inequality was not a very serious matter because each party represented a cross section in our national life. The Liberal party included in its ranks, capitalists, farmers, wage-earners, doctors and every other class and the Conservatives also obtained support from all classes. But now that we are going to have class lined up against class and the country marshalled against the cities and towns then the unequal representation becomes a menace and demands attention. If the farmers political parties in the provincial arenas drop the purely class doctrine and make their platform wide enough to appeal to other than the farming communities then there is some good in the movement, but if it is to be guided by selfish motives, it will succeed temporarily, but eventually fail."

Better devote a day this week or next to figuring out what your income amounted to last year, and send ing the information to the Inspector of Taxation. That is if you are a single man (or woman) with an income of over $1,000, or a married man with an income of more than $2,000. If you fail to send the information in, it is apt to get you into trouble, and prove expensive. The necessary forms can be procured at the Post Office.

Society now seems to be divided chiefly into two classes—those who have no work at all, and those who are worked to death.

Two kinds of people who won't feel a thrill when the first dandelion peeps forth are the girl who has a fur coat and nothing else and the man who always helps his wife clean house.

RUM RUNNER DISGUISED AS STORK

The Best Border Story To Date

We who live on the border of good old U S A. and Canada see many funny things in the efforts to evade the Volstead act.

One of the most adroit to date, which almost worked, occurred at Derby Line, Vt. Derby Line is the Vermont end of Three Villages, but a short distance from the Canadian office, with which it is connected by private wire, and ordinarily, what gets by one office is passed with merely perfunctory examination at the other office, as perfect harmony and honest intentions prevail at both offices.

Early one morning an immense high-powered, luxurious car tore up to the Vermont office almost before the phone report could be taken, and a fine looking man alighted before the car came to a standstill.

"I am Jones of the firm of Jones & Co., patent attorneys," he exclaimed, "and I am making a record run to St. Johnsbury, Vt., where I want my first boy to be born. My wife is a Vermonter, and as the babe was not expected for two weeks we thought it safe to go to Sherbrooke to see her brother, Colonel Black (at Vimy Ridge, you know,) just invalided home but she became ill this morning and I have broken all speed laws to get our child born in Vermont, the best state of all, f possible to her old home." Meanwhile Mr. Jones had opened a suitcase and tenderly displayed an exquisite layette to the three officers standing at atttenion, interluding his remarks with "Don't cry, Dollie." "In just a second, darling," to the little gasps and moans proceeding from a recumbent elegantly attired little figure streched out on still more suit cases.

Without waiting for a reply from an evidently sympathetic audience, Mr. Jones continued "If any of you have been married five years and then expected your first born, you would understand my feelings. I will make any deposit you wish for the car, only I must get as far as Orleans hospital quick, but St. Johnsbury is possible."

The new man in charge had gone to the opposite side of the car fully impressed with the urgency of the case, Mr. Jones closed the case of the layette, told the chauffeur to start, as the officer raised his hand and said, "I fully appreciate the situation and most certainly hope your wishes may be fulfilled," and was about to add "pass," when he fancied he intercepted a slight glance between Mr. and Mrs. Jones and continued instead, "As a matter of form I must detain you a moment and open the other suitcase if Madame will kindly rise."

"I can't, Oh! Oh" sobbed Mrs. Jones and convulsive tremors ran through her slight dainty figure.

"Don't stir," thundered Mr Jones, recognizing his slip, added, "You are not much of a gentleman to ask her to rise to risk having the child born here in the street."

Dollie impatiently tossed her head away and the watchful officer saw one bewitching blond ear bun rise sidewise disclosing short clipped dark hair.

On the instant several things happened: The officer jumped on the running board and with one hand grasped Dollie's arm and the other reached for his hip pocket.

Mr. Jones again ordered the chauffeur to start "d—n quick," and covered the officer with his revolver. The other two officers sent two shots into two great tires, which screechingly went flat.

Dollie was jerked out, flowing duced firearms and curses, which were found unavailing, as they were literally in the hands of the law.

Dollie was perked out, flowing silk coat rudely and roughly yanked off likewise a lovely kimono, disclosing a well clad sinewy young man adorned around the middle with a sort of John Browne belt affair ingeniously hung with bottles of choice liquors in such a manner as to stimulate the figure a prospective mother demanded.

Dollie meanwhile pitchied the charming motor bonnet and fascinating hair into the street with profane remarks.

Not only the suitcases were filled with high grade liquors, but ruthless knives slashed upon the fine upholstering, disclosing literally thousands of dollars' worth of high grade wines in the intricate interior.

But for that faintest almost imperceptible glance between loving, affectionate almost parents, the American as well as the Canadian officers would have fallen for the slickest ruse to date.

Moral: Don't flick an eyelash till the officer says "Pass."

GLEANER DON'T APPROVE

(Geaner)

The Conservative Convention held yesterday, transferred the leadership of the party in provincial politics to Mr. J. D. Palmer of this city. Mr. Palmer has been active in politics for some time and ambitious. He may turn out to be a good leader; he should be a capable organizer and as such do some useful work. The Convention did not appear to have any purpose in getting together other than to name a leader. There was no disposition to give an expression of opinion on the important questions which will be presented at this session of the Legislature. We have the budget of the year, the worrying Health Act, the school book exactions the Liquor Act amendments or it may be a new Act, the highways and all such subjects in which the people are interested, but the inopportune question of party leadership seemed to out-measure in importance all questions in which the people were directly interested. In this respect the Convention was disappointing if not absurd.

Mr. C. D. Richards, who, until yesterday, was leader of the party, making admirable progress in the House and in the country, was unanimously and heartily endorsed by the Opposition members of the Legislature, but apparently it was not the intention, nor the purpose of the Convention that the representatives of the people should elect their own leader; or that the views or opinions of those who are the responsible and elected representatives should be regarded as having any value. The responsibility for the change must rest upon the shoulders of those who for other than broad party purposes decided "to swap horses while crossing the stream."

IDENTIFIED

The bank manager in a snippy way said: "But I don't know you, madam"

The woman was red-headed, and she got "Red-headed" in a minute. She said, "Oh, yes, you do. I don't need anyone to identify me. I'm the 'red headed hen' next door to you whose 'mps of boys' are always running across your garden. When you started to town this morning your wife said: 'Now, Henry, if you want a dinner fit to eat this evening, you'll have to leave me a little money. I can't keep this house on Christian Science."

"Here is your money," interrupted the manager very faintly.

Advertisers, Attention, Please

Changes of advertisements should be sent in not later than noon on Tuesday. Failure to observe this rule causes a great deal of inconvenience, and makes it very difficult to get the SENTINEL out on time. It would be a great help if advertisers would get copy in when possible, on Monday. Correspondents also would help by sending in their contributions early. Week after week, the mechanical department is swamped with copy on Wednesday, whereas on Monday the difficulty is to find copy to keep the machines going. It is absolutely impossible to set the whole paper in a day and a half, and for this reason good matter and advertisements often have to be held over because they cannot be got into type.

Your co-operation in this respect will greatly oblige.

WHEN THE PAPER DOESN'T COME

My father says the paper he reads
ain't put up right,
He finds a lot of fault, he does, perusin' it all night.
He says there ain't a single thing in
it worth while to read,
And that it doesn't print the kind of stuff the people need.
He tosses it aside and says it's strictly on the bum—
But you ought to hear him holler
when the paper doesnt' come.

He reads about the weddin's and he
snorts like all get out,
He reads the social doin's with a
most derisive shout.
He says they make the papers for the women folks alone.
He'll read about the parties, and he'll
fume and fret and groan;
He says of information it doesn't have a crumb—
But you ought to hear him holler
when the paper doesnt' come.

He's always first to grab it and he reads it plumb clean through.
He doesn't miss an item or a want ad
—that is true.
He says they don't know what we want, the darn newspaper guys,
I'm going to take a day sometimes
an' go an' put 'em wise;
Sometimes it seems as though they must be deaf and blind and dumb,
But you ought to hear him holler
when the paper doesnt' come.

SKIFF LAKE, CANTERBURY

The men of Skiff Lake are busy storing ice for the coming hot season. Peter Donovan and sons were engaged in ice hauling Saturday. Some squares they cut tipped the scales at 450 lbs.

Hugh Smith's woods crew, who were engaged in a Lumber concern on the Miramichi near Juniper, returned home last week.

There being 30 scholars attending the Skiff Lake School, and this season the very muddiest, the teacher thought it advisable to have the floor scrubbed so the larger girls volunteered to meet one Saturday, and they certainly made things shine.

Although the roads are not the very best, North Lake men are hauling logs to Hugh Hamilton's Mill.
