Mr. Baxter says that he believes the Intoxicating Liquor Act should be enforced SO LONG AS IT IS ON THE STATUTE BOOK. What he means is, according to his public utterances, that he will take the teeth out of the Act by giving a right of appeal and then enforce it, after it becomes practically unenforceable.

RUMORS INCORRECT

Mr. Editor:

Reports have come to my knowledge to the effect that I was seriously considering withdrawing from the Primitive Baptist church, and affiliating myself with another denomination. It goes without saying that these reports are not intended to enhance my standing as a Primitive Baptist minister, and I desire to take this opportunity of setting myself right with the public in general, and with my own people in particular.

I desire to state most positively that I have no such intention, that I am perfectly satisfied with my situation in the Primitive Baptist church, and with the people with whom God has committed to my care. This denomination was founded over fifty years ago on the basis of certain fundamental principles which we believe and still believe to be essentials of Christian faith and practice. Our church has attained its present size in the face of manifold difficulties, still maintains and teaches those principles in their pristine purity, and I, for one, have no desire to forsake the faith once delivered to the saints and the church of my fathers for what might look like fairer fields and greener pastures.

Thanking you for your space, Mr. Editor, I remain,

Yours truly,

H. V. Bragdon,
