BASEBALL STARS TO HUNT IN NEW BRUNSWICK

While the Philadelphia Athletics and New York Yankees have been battling for the American League championship and the right to participate in the 1928 world series, something more than baseball has been in the minds of some of the leading figures in the greatest pennant race in years.

Players who have been virtually at death grips with one another on the diamond have been scanning maps after the game were over and studying reports on New Brunswick's big game hunting territory while they considered plans for a hunting trip for moose, deer and bears next month as soon as the world series is over. The result has been the completion of plans for what should be the most enjoyable big game hunting trip the baseball stars have ever had in New Brunswick.

When Bob Shawkey, veteran pitcher and star of a good many world series, left the American League and joined the Montreal Royals of the International League, his place as pilot of the baseball stars' hunting party was assumed by Eddie Collins, greatest of all second basemen and now assistant manager of the Philadelphia Athletics. As a result of negotiations carried on through J. D. Black, Director of the New Brunswick Government Bureau of Information and Tourist Travel who has arranged the several previous hunting trips the baseball stars have made in New Brunswick the six players will spend the last two weeks of October at Hopewell Lodge, located twelve miles south of Doaktown on Cain's River, which has been placed at their exclusive disposal by the members of the club owning the property.

In addition to Collins and Shawkey the other members of the party will be: Benny Bengough, New York Yankees; Sam Bengough, New York Yankees; Sam Jones, Washington Senators; Fred Hofmann, Boston Red Sox; and Joe Bush, Philadelphia Athletics. The Personnel of the party is thus the same, so far as active players go, as that which visited New Brunswick last year and saw more than two hundred moose while they were in the woods, except that Mark Keonig, the New York Yankees' shortstop, will not be included, as he plans to hurry home to the Pacific Coast as soon as his baseball duties for the year have been completed. Present plans call for the baseball hunters to assemble at New York on Sunday, October 14th, and to leave there at noon for Boston, where they will catch a train that evening at 7.40 o'clock which will land them in Fredericton at noon on Monday, October 15th.

Fredericton sportsmen will give the baseball stars a reception that evening and Tuesday morning the party will proceed to Doaktown, where they will be met by Frank Russell, chief guardian of Hopewell Lodge property with a corps of guides and camp attaches. Some light autos and motor trucks have made the trip through the woods from Doaktown to Hopewell Lodge this year and it is likely the last leg of the journey to their hunting camp will be made by the baseball stars by motor truck. Hopewell Lodge is one of the finest privately owned hunting and fishing camps in New Brunswick. It is located on the high banks of Cain's river in the midst of one of the best big game territories in the Province—an open country where deer can be seen at a distance—and deer rather than moose will be the objective of the baseball hunters this year. Hopewell Lodge is equipped as comfortably as a modern hotel, wealthy Boston sportsmen who founded the club installing spring beds with made-to-order mattresses in all of the nine bedrooms, each of which is equipped with a heating stove and up to date furniture. The Lodge is 55 feet in length with an eight foot verandah and some of the best known big game hunters in the United States have taken fine specimens of moose and deer out of the territory in which the baseball stars will hunt this year.

A RECIPE FOR YOUTH

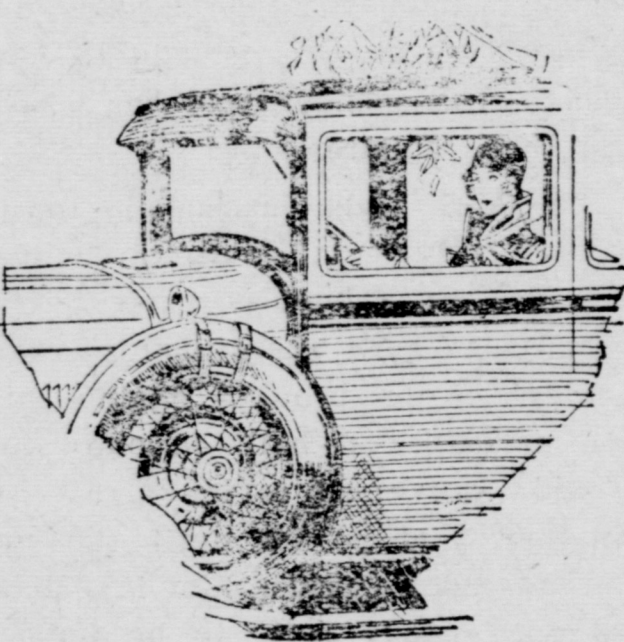

"Being in my eighty-first year and looking (so my friends tell me) and feeling (so I tell myself) about sixty-five or less, I set down a few suggestions as to how to keep young. (1) Associate with young people as far as possible. In my case this was happily, unavoidable, as I was for many years house-master in a famous Public School. (2) Keep in touch with a good dentist; an efficient 'mouth-mill' is a first-class aid to digestion and hence to good health. (3) Follow the Caterpillar's advice to Alice, 'keep your temper'; this, incidentally, is the first of Bishop Middleton's excellent set of maxims. (4) Try not to worry, or as Horace puts it in his old friend, 'aequum memento rebus in arduis servare mentem.' These, then, are the suggestions of an octogenarian, suggestions which those who desire to retain their youth as far as possible might do worse than follow."—A Letter in the London Spectator.
