HEALTH

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

CARING FOR TEETH

Stop, look and read if you are now young and want to preserve the natural, youthful appearance of your face and, at the same time, enjoy the comfort and health which come with a healthy mouth containing sound teeth.

The food you eat builds your teeth. You cannot have well-built teeth unless you use milk, green vegetables and fresh fruits during that period of life when the body is building the teeth out of the foods which are eaten.

Teeth are required to chew food and so prepare it for digestion. Foods which require chewing should be included in the diet, because the act of chewing develops the jaws properly and helps to keep the teeth and gums healthy.

In order that the teeth and gums may be kept healthy, they should be kept clean. It is best to clean them after every meal, but they should at least be cleaned after breakfast and before going to bed, using a little salt and water, or a non-gritty powder or paste. The mouth should be rinsed after the teeth have been brushed.

The dentist should be visited twice a year so that the teeth may be cleaned and to secure the early treatment of any decay. Early treatment stops further decay, preserves the teeth, and prevents the pain and discomfort which would otherwise occur.

Unless the teeth and gums are cared for, they become diseased as the result of germs setting up an infection. What is serious about such infection is not so much the damage that may be caused locally, although that is bad enough, but rather that the infection may spread to other parts of the body and cause serious harm to vital organs.

Many people do not enjoy the degree of health which they should because their health is being sapped by diseased teeth and gums. It may be that the food is not properly chewed and thus digestion is interfered with. The absorption of pus may be poisoning the body. Painful teeth cause lack of sleep, and lead to irritability.

Good teeth are an asset to the personal appearance, but much more important is their influence upon the health of the body. Care of the teeth in early life secures these advantages for the later years. Early neglect cannot be offset by later care. It is better to act now rather than suffer regrets in the years to come.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College Street, Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.
