STEAMING FISH IN PARCHMENT PAPER

Chatting the other day about different methods of cooking fish foods, Mrs. Eveleen Spencer, cookery specialist of the Dominion Department of Fisheries, pointed out that the body juices give each variety of fish its own distinctive flavor and that any method which allows these juices to be lost must mean a less flavorful dish. "That is one reason," she said, "why I like to steam fish in parchment paper rather than simply to steam it over an open kettle. As they steam out of the fish the juices are held within the parchment sheet and they may then be poured over the fish when it is put on the platter for serving and the flavor which they give may thus be retained. Or, instead of pouring them over the fish itself, they may be added to some desired sauce which is to be served with the meal. In some of the smaller communities," Mrs. Spencer went on, "it may not always be possible to obtain parchment paper but where it is available the housewives will find it very handy for fish steaming."

Just then Mrs. Spencer's companion broke in with a confession and a question. "I never tried using parchment paper in just the way you suggest. How should I go about it?"

Simple but Effective

"It's really very easy," Mrs. Spencer replied. "Suppose you have two pounds of fresh fillets. Cut them into serving portions, allowing about three to a pound, and then get your steamer ready by lining the bottom and sides with a sheet of vegetable parchment paper. A colander with a tight lid will serve very well for a steamer, by the way. Having put in the paper, place the fillets on it, one layer deep, sprinkle them with plenty of salt, some pepper, and two tablespoons of lemon juice, and strew over them four tablespoons of butter broken up into pieces.

"Now pull the ends of the parchment paper together and twist them tightly, so that the paper becomes fashioned into a kind of container which will keep the juices within. Place the steamer over a pot of boiling water and leave it there for ten or fifteen minutes the length of time depending on the thickness of the fillets.

"When the steamer is removed from the pot, the pieces of fish will be found swimming in their own juices which have been held inside the parchment. As I have said, they may be poured over the fish on the platter, or added to a sauce. And I always sprinkle a tablespoonful of parsley over the fish, too. It adds something both to the appearance and the flavor of the dish.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By Edson R. Waite
Shawnee, Oklahoma

It is good for a merchant to look back, after years of service to his community, and say, "All is well," to take stock not only in the merchandise world, but of the confidence of the people—a confidence built on the solid foundation of their belief in his honesty of purpose and judgment of values.

It is said that poor men live longer than rich men and live more happily.

The man who knocks his own home city is a pest. He should either become a home town booster or be boosted out.

Any further reduction of America's defenses will not achieve the end desired by the pacifists any more than would the disbandment of the police force of New York City stop crime in that city.

Every corporation requires an annual or semi-annual audit of its books and sends a copy to its stockholders. Every well managed city should have an audit of its books at least once a year and publish it in local newspapers so the citizens may know the condition of their city.

I note in a Canadian newspaper that Canada's industries are safe and sound; they are expanding rapidly, untrammelled by galling governmental restrictions and free of back-breaking taxation. That is a most happy condition for any country to be in.

Some men wear long suffering faces all the time.

To a man who is seeking a new city in which to live and invest, a lifeless looking city appeals to him in the same encouraging way as would a cemetery.

SHARKEY TO FISH IN N. B.

Fredericton, N. B., Sept. 8—Jack Sharkey, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, plans to come to New Brunswick for some late season Atlantic silver salmon fishing.

Accompanied by Mrs. Sharkey and a second couple, Jack will leave Boston on the night of Thursday, September 13th, and will arrive in Fredericton, New Brunswick, the following morning. From this point the party will go direct to the commodious sporting lodges maintained by Jack Russell at Ludlow on the Southwest Miramichi River. Jack and his party will spend about a week angling for the wily salmon on the famous Porter's Cove section of the River.

Although both a veteran angler and hunter, Sharkey is a newcomer to the Province of New Brunswick. He has spent a number of vacations in the east, but heretofore has always gone to Nova Scotia.

Reports from the Miramichi country indicate that the Sharkey party should be running in the luck when they begin to cast their flies next week. At the present time a copious late season run of salmon makes the Miramichi one of the best fishing spots in the Province.

FIJI AFTER WESTERN CANADA BANANA TRADE

There is a movement on foot in the Fiji Islands, in the Southern Pacific to grow bananas for the Western Canadian market. Fiji is in a position to produce large quantities of bananas, 1,715,766 bunches being exported in 1914, the peak year of production. The Fiji Islands supply Australia and New Zealand but the latter's island territory, including the mandate over Western Samoa, is favorable to the growth of bananas and the growing production by Australia has resulted in falling off in the demand from these two Empire countries. Experimental shipments of bananas have been made from the Fiji Islands to Vancouver and certain plantations have been set aside to insure good quality fruit for the Canadian market. The Fiji Islands also produce and export citrus fruits, oranges and mandarins, and pineapples. The greater quantity of Canada's bananas are at present obtained from the British West Indies, these reaching Canada in specially fitted vessels of the Canadian National Steamships which provide a direct service.
