

INTERESTING WILD LIFE

A bald headed eagle was outstanding among the feathered folk. Of the game birds, there were flocks of mallard ducks, Canada geese and Woodcock. In addition to those already named, specimens of Mongolian pheasants, both fully grown birds and chicks, were on exhibition.

The fishery exhibit comprised four pools, two large and two smaller ones. One of the large pools was occupied by fully grown Atlantic silver salmon and grise, secured from Hartt's Island Pool on the St. John River only a few miles above Fredericton. The second of the large pools contained specimens of three-and-four-pound rainbow trout.

To Exhibition patrons who know and enjoy angling, the small pools held a particular interest. The first showed trout fry of a size commonly used in stocking New Brunswick sporting waters. The other contained trout of a size to which they are raised in the rearing ponds sponsored by the New Brunswick Fish and Game Protective Association.

Erection of this extensive exhibit was begun as far back as six weeks ago. During the intervening time a cabin has been erected of logs in the round and tightly chinked with mosses. All cages and pens have been constructed of native cedar, left in the round and unpeeled and the exhibit is now being dressed up with a generous overlay of evergreen boughs. By way of contrast, all railings have been built of unpeeled white birch. Installation of a line of rustic settees will enable the public to view the exhibit as they rest a bit.

A natural atmosphere pervaded the exhibit throughout its entirety. In addition to the use of unpeeled woods in the construction of cages and the use of evergreens for decorative purposes, all four of the fish ponds appeared like little sections of woodland streams taken from some cool green forest glade. All the tanks have natural pebbly bottoms over which the water really flows and the pools are edged about with mossy banks. Intake is from a rocky eight-foot waterfall immediately to the rear of the fishery exhibit.

A general lighting scheme was worked out in red and green flood lights and each of the separate cages will be individually lighted with amber shaded floods. The rear of the entire exhibit hedged in with evergreen trees and beyond these was a back drop representative of a star-studded sky.

The forestry booth conducted in connection with the main exhibit, graphically illustrated the value of green woodlands as a factor in the preservation of our wild game life. The two sections into which the booth has been divided are being used for erection of two miniature landscapes. In the background of the first an imitation of a wooded knoll, and toward the foreground a lake a-

Start of 10,000-Mile Maritime Economy Run

Here's the Ford V-8 car, now engaged in an Economy Run of approximately 10,000 miles around New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, at the official ceremony which marked its departure from Saint John, N. B. Mayor James W. Britain, of Saint John, is shown at the left, just before he fired the gun that sent the car away on its famous run five times around the two Provinces. Other officials in the photo, left to right, are T. P. Regan, president of the New Brunswick Automobile Association; F. W. Annand, secretary of the Nova Scotia Motor League, and G. W. Berry, manager of the Saint John Branch of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd. Watson Jamer is at the wheel of the car, and beside him is I. B. Moore, official observer for the New Brunswick Automobile Association. Hundreds massed the streets to watch the departure of the car from Saint John.

The Car a Deluxe Fordor, will travel continuously for two weeks, day and night, in all kinds of weather. At the conclusion of the run, official observers from the two motor leagues will announce the number of miles covered in the trip, the amount of oil required over and above the regular changes every thousand miles, and the number of miles for each gallon of gasoline consumed on the entire trip. The car will end its famous run on Saturday, September 22, in Saint John.

round which nestled snug little log cabins and birch bark wigwams. The remaining section of the booth represented the same scene as is created in the first miniature, only after it has been ravaged by a forest fire—ash-encrusted hill, blackened stumps and a deserted lake.

On the wall at the back of the forestry booth a screen was set up. Scenes depicting New Brunswick's forest wealth and also the way in which this wealth can be depleted by forest fires were shown here daily. These reels were interspersed with some excellent camera hunters' shots of wild game animals and game birds taken in the forests of New Brunswick.

MANAGER AND MAYOR SENT

Present at the meeting were Mayor Jones, Councillors Hay, Smalley, Craig, Turner, True and Calkin, G. Y. Jones, acting town clerk, A. Gordon Bailey, town manager and Warden Brown.

The meeting was a special one called when the regular meeting on Friday of last week had to be postponed owing to lack of a quorum. At the hour appointed for the meeting Mayor Jones, Councillors True and Craig, the town clerk and the town manager were present, leaving one more councillor needed for a quorum. Telephones were kept busy, messengers despatched and even police aid invoked in an attempt to locate one of the missing ones, but to no avail. An adjournment was then suggested, but the town clerk advised that he was doubtful as to its legality without a quorum. After waiting for the top. Its construction was decided on after the approach had twice been badly damaged in the last three years by floating logs and ice at freshet time.

The work on the new dam across the Meduxnakeag has now ended. The dam was completed last week, but a crew was kept busy for several days taking down forms and rip-rapping the southern end of the work where the dam is anchored into the southern bank of the stream. A rip-rap of broken stone about twenty feet long by fifteen high was constructed about the end of the dam to prevent seepage at high water.

The coffer dams used during the construction of the dam will not be removed, but will be left to the stream to destroy, as it is expected that the current will soon wear them away. The fishway and the gate at the northern end of the dam will be left open for a few days until the concrete has a chance to set properly after which they will be closed, and opened only at certain seasons as required by the regulations of the fisheries Department.

It is expected that a head of water will be developed which will raise the stream to a height of six feet under the Main street bridge, where there is now at low water a depth varying from a few inches to about two feet.
