HELP OUR BOYS

The Woodstock High School Basketball team who won the Interscholastic Basketball Tournament in Fredericton last year and in 1940 and who are doing brought honour both to themselves and to their native town are again entering the tournament this year.

The boys have been labouring under difficulties during these war years. Although they have been given permission to play in the Woodstock Armouries they are not allowed to charge for their games. Consequently their only source of income is cut off.

Instead they are sponsoring a movie My Favourite Blonde, February 2 and 4, hoping thereby, to realize funds to finance their expenses. Citizens wishing to assist the boys are asked to secure their tickets before Wednesday February 3.

These boys are giving Woodstock the best possible kind of publicity. The least we can do is to buy a ticket.

BOMBS OVER BERLIN

Announcement that Berlin had been heavily bombed has been received with satisfaction throughout all Allied countries. While other German towns and cities have been heavily bombed, Berlin has escaped unscathed, except for an odd raid by the British, for well over a year. There is no reason to suppose that earlier raids over the German capital were particularly successful. Bombing technique had not been really developed in those days, and the bombers were too small either to carry a sufficient load of bombs or to negotiate the great distance between England and Berlin safely. Losses in those days were heavy and results apparently not very great.

The scene is now materially different. We have adequate machines, as many as number and to type, and the crews to man them. It is only human nature to be pleased that Berlin, heart of the Nazi Empire, is at last to receive with interest what London suffered in 1940 and the early part of 1941.

It is all very well for people at a distance to argue that bombing of great cities does not pay, either from standpoint of property damage or lowering of morale. Those who passed through the terrible period when London was bombed nightly know differently. It will be interesting to see whether Berlin can stand up under heavy bombing as London did.

THEY'RE AT IT AGAIN

From overseas the news this week is good. Allied armies are on the offensive again in Africa. The Russians are advancing triumphantly. Berlin has been heavily bombed. The Axis is suffering heavy blows, and there is every indication that these blows will be strongly intensified with the coming of spring.

On the home front the news is good—very good. The Canadian steel industry has been paralyzed by an unauthorized strike in widely spread sections of the country. The American automobile industry has been stalled by another strike, also unauthorized. All industry depends upon steel and coal and the damage to our war effort must have been staggering.

Had the same effect been produced by German bombs we should have been almost in despair. For almost four years we have been told that winning or losing the war depends on production. Now we see production deliberately withheld, not because of enemy action, but by men who see their country's dire peril as a chance, not to help that their country, but to fill their own pockets.

During the last year or more the government has called upon all its citizens to make great sacrifices. These sacrifices have been made cheerfully, but the government owes it to the country to see that the sacrifices are made to produce the very greatest results. If it cannot or will not do that then the government must stand aside for those who can and will.

It is to be sincerely hoped that before these lines appear in print the strikers will be back again at their delayed tasks. As this is written not only is there no sign of settlement, but the government has not taken any adequate steps to bring one about.

Fortunately the winning of the war does not depend entirely upon us or upon the Americans. If it did we should surely lose, but luckily for us there are still the English, the Russians and the Chinese, people who do not tolerate war time strikes.

This country is confronted with a major crisis. Our war effort is being sabotaged from within. The efforts of those who direct the war effort have been discredited. The public demands that the steel strike be settled at once. It also wants to know what steps are being taken to see that these men, or other patriotic men, do not strike again next week or next month. It further wants to know what steps it may be taken to punish those responsible; or if no legislation exists enabling this to be done when will such legislation be passed? The government, in all conscience, has been ready enough to exercise its right to govern by order in council when it suited its purpose to do so.

There has been too much appeasement shown by the government in its handling of war problems. The country is tired of it.

THE LAST STRONGHOLD

The automobile has conquered what was probably the last country from which it was barred by law—Bermuda. Now used largely by American naval and air forces, the little island paradise has been unable longer to exclude the motor car which it so zealously banished from its shores.

Bermuda is a tiny country, and although its roads are excellent its people have always felt that less rapid methods of locomotion would supply their needs. Up to a few years ago its well to do residents drove about in the victorias and landauletts of a generation ago. Less wealthy people used the bicycle or if they had to go on long trips (twenty miles is a long trip in Bermuda) they used stage coach or boat.

A few years ago the government permitted a small railway to be constructed, and this apparently was the thin edge of the wedge. For some time thereafter the government resolutely refused to permit anyone, including the governor, to drive a car. Then came permission for certain key persons to have their cars. But even placid Bermuda was unable to resist the demands of war, and now the automobile is on its roads, without restriction, and doubtless to stay.

Worst of all, the Bermudian Legislature is now considering abolishing the time honored rule of drive to the left, and will probably come into line with Canada and the United States by driving to the right.

We can be sure that generations of sturdy colonial Bermudians are at this moment positively spinning in their graves.
