MENTAL TELEGRAPHY.

A Strange Story of the Influence of Mind on Mind.

(Mark Twain in Harper's Magazine.)

Now I come to the oddest thing that ever happened to me. Two or three years ago I was lying in bed, idly musing, one morning—it was the 2nd of March—when suddenly a red hot new idea came whistling down into my camp, and exploded with such comprehensive effectiveness as to sweep the vicinity clean of rubbishy reflections, and fill the air with their dust and flying fragments. This idea, stated in simple phrase, was that the time was ripe and the market ready for a certain book; a book which ought to be written at once; a book which must command attention and be of peculiar interest —to wit, a book about the Nevada silver mines.

The "Great Bonanza" was a new wonder then, and everybody was talking about it. It seemed to me that the person best qualified to write this book was Mr. William H. Wright, a journalist of Virginia, Nevada, by whose side I had scribbled many months when I was a reporter there 10 or 12 years before. He might be alive still; he might be dead; I could not tell; but I would write him, anyway. I began by merely and modestly suggesting that he make such a book; but my interest grew as I went on, and I ventured to map out what I thought ought to be the plan of the work, he being an old friend, and not given to taking good intentions for ill. I even dealt with details, and suggested the order and sequence which they should follow.

I was about to put the manuscript in an envelope, when the thought occurred to me that if this book should be written at my suggestion, and then no publisher should happen to want it, I should feel uncomfortable; so I concluded to keep my letter back until I should have secured a publisher. I pigeon-holed my document, and dropped a note to my own publisher, asking him to name a day for a business consultation. He was out of town on a far journey. My note remained unanswered, and at the end of three or four days the whole matter passed out of my mind. On the 9th of March the postman brought three or four letters, and among them a thick one whose superscription was in a hand that seemed dimly familiar to me. I could not "place" it at first, but presently I succeeded. Then I said to a visiting relative who was present:— "Now I will do a miracle. I will tell you everything this letter contains—date, signature, and all—without breaking the seal. It is from Mr. Wright, of Virginia, Nevada, and it is dated the 2nd of March—seven days ago. Mr. Wright proposes to make a book about the silver mines and the Great Bonanza, and asks what I, as a friend, think of the idea. He says his subjects are to be so, their order and sequence so and so, and he will close with a history of the chief feature of the book, the Great Bonanza."

I opened the letter and showed that I had stated the date and the contents correctly. Mr. Wright's letter simply contained what my own letter, written on the same date, contained, and mine still lay in its pigeon-hole, where it had been lying during the seven days since it was written.
There was no clairvoyance about this, if I rightly comprehend what clairvoyance is. I think the clairvoyant professes to actually see concealed writing and read it off word for word. This was not my case.
I only seemed to know, and to know absolutely, the contents of the letter in detail and due order, but I had to word them myself. I translated them, so to speak, out of Wright's language into my own.

Wright's letter and the one which I had written to him but never sent were in substance the same.
Necessarily this could not come by accident; such elaborate accidents cannot happen. Chance might have duplicated one or two of the details, but she would have broken down on the rest. I could not doubt—there was no tenable reason for doubting—that Mr. Wright's mind and mine had been in close crystal-clear communication with each other across 3,000 miles of mountain and desert on the morning of the 2nd of March. I did not consider that both minds originated that succession of ideas, but that one mind originated them, and simply telegraphed them to the other.

I was curious to know what brain was the telegrapher and which the receiver, so I wrote and asked for particulars. Mr.
Wright's reply showed that his mind had done the originating and telegraphing and mine the receiving. Mark that significant thing, now; consider for a moment how many a splendid "original" idea has been unconsciously stolen from a man 3,000 miles away!

If one should question that this is so, let him look into the cyclopaedia and consider once more that curious thing in the history of inventions which has puzzled everyone so much—that is, the frequency with which the same machine or other contrivance has been invented at the same time by several persons in different quarters of the globe. The world was without an electric telegraph for several thousand years; then Prof. Henry, the American, Wheatstone in England, Morse on the sea, and a German in Munich, all invented it at the same time. The discovery of certain ways of applying steam was made in two or three countries in the same year.

Is it not possible that inventors are constantly and unwittingly stealing each other's ideas whilst they stand thousands of miles asunder?

Strangely Birthmarked.

There is an interesting phenomenon at Millvale. It exists in the form of a girl baby, born perfect in body with the exception of one arm, which terminates abruptly between elbow and wrist. Apparently, there is nothing phenomenal about this fact, for children born with bodily deformity are numerous. But to the medical profession this case is exceedingly interesting. The cause of such freaks of nature was once considered inexplicable. When one occurred it was simply termed a "freak" and allowed to go at that. But now they can be explained.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ginter are the parents of a child. They keep a butcher shop in the north end of Millvale Borough at a little place called Bowerston. Eight other children are in the family, four boys and four girls, all or whom are sound and healthy.

One day, some months ago, the father was called away on business, and, as usual, left the shop in charge of his wife. The shop adjoins the kitchen. Hearing a knock at the kitchen door, Mrs. Ginter proceeded to answer it. Opening the door she found awaiting her an old peddler familiar to that neighborhood. The peddler was a foreigner, by no means a handsome man, and having but one arm.
The other was but the stump of an arm, which the man always exposed to excite the sympathy of the people. Yarn for knitting purposes constituted the wares of the peddler. He was informed that nothing was wanted, but like other representatives of his trade, he insisted that a purchase be made.

The misfortune of the man was emphasized by a special exhibition of his arm. The lady of the house became very much terrified, and finally to get rid of the peddler she made a purchase. The husband learning of the affair became indignant, but as time passed by the incident was forgotten.

It had almost passed out of recollection when on last Saturday it was vigorously brought back to memory. A little daughter was added to the family, and, strange to relate, it had but one arm, the other ending just below the elbow joint. In every other respect the babe was sound and perfect. Still stranger is the fact that the deformed member is on the right side of the body, which corresponds to that of the peddler.

Thawing in the Ground.

During the approach and continuance of winter the earth throws off by radiation each night more heat than it absorbs in the daytime. While this goes on the temperature of the surface of the earth must continue to fall, and the cold of the atmosphere must penetrate deeper and deeper daily into the ground. As spring approaches the condition changes, and each night less heat is radiated than is absorbed during the day. The average temperature of the earth is therefore steadily rising instead of falling, and opportunity is given to the latent heat of the earth to manifest its influence; for, next to the primal source of heat—the sun—a very important source is found in the heat of the globe itself. While the surface is still frozen, therefore, and has not yet absorbed a sufficient surplus of heat to overcome the effect of the nightly loss by radiation, the ground may yet be thawing rapidly and perceptibly from below through the influence of the earth's latent heat.

A Lawyer's Harvest.

It is the man with the idea who develops his opulence to-day. A lawyer of this city not long since in three months persuaded all the manufacturers of a certain staple product in the eastern states to form a combine. He visited all of them and finally got them together and drew the articles of agreement. He joined about twenty-five concerns into a combination, with a capitalization of over a million.
At the outset he claimed two per cent., and his realization for his three months' work was $30,000. This is a fact. Two New Haven concerns are in the combination.—
New Haven Palladium.

A Good Verdict.

Sirs,—I have great reason to speak well of your B. B. Bitters. I have taken 6 bottles for myself and family and find that for loss of appetite and weakness it has no equal. It cures sick headache purifies the blood and will not fail when used. I heartily recommend it to all wanting a pure medicine.

Mrs. Catherine Bogle, of Chatham, N. B., aunt of Mr. Joseph Gaffney, proprietor of the Central House, died very suddenly Wednesday evening. She had been visiting Mr. Gaffney and had started for the train in a hack accompanied by Mrs. Gaffney. They had driven but a short distance when Mrs. Bogle fell into Mrs. Gaffney's arms and died, the cause probably being heart trouble. She was about fifty-five years of age and leaves a family.—Bangor
