Lake Michigan is undergoing a change which, aside from the serious results that may follow it, has a special scientific interest. The water of the lake has been falling for several days, and has finally reached a point fifteen inches below the lowest previous record. No explanations of the phenomenon can be given. The west winds have not been severe or of long duration. It has been expected all along that the water would rise this season. The suggestion is that important geological changes are taking place in the northern lake region as along the coasts.

A big mackerel is reported by a Gloucester paper to have been caught recently in 45 fathoms of water off Seal Island, Nova Scotia. It measured 29 inches from the tip of the nose to the fork of the tail, and was 10 inches in girth. It was caught on a cod hook.

Chicago is said to have the smartest woman collector in the world. Her name is Corse. She always makes a careful toilet, drives in a well-appointed coupe, and makes it a rule to call on bankers and millionaires immediately after they have lunched. She is now collecting funds for the Women's Temperance Union World's Fair fund, and is meeting with extraordinary success. A few years ago the same lady undertook to raise $1,000,000 for the erection of a Temperance Temple now being built in Chicago. She succeeded in getting the money. She rarely works more than three hours a day collecting.

Preserving Autumn Leaves.

A few absolutely perfect leaves are better than the scores of common ones that we are tempted to collect. The leaves of the hard maple are always gorgeous in hue and delicate in outline. Those that wear the deepest tints of crimson or yellow are best for our purpose. Oak leaves are shiny and firm, and easily preserved. Nature has always been prodigal to the beech tree, scattering on her boughs the richest, brightest colors. The sumac glows with vivid crimson, and a clear amber shines through the dainty larch and chestnut leaves. Then there are the dull chocolate and mottled red of the black-berry vines, while the poplar and aspen shine out with a silvery white, all speckled over with touches of green. Gather these wild wood beauties, says Good Housekeeping, with as much care as would be bestowed upon a bouquet of garden blossoms, and hasten home with them before they begin to dry and curl. Upon reaching home let the first care be to have two hot irons ready. Cover the kitchen table with three or four layers of newspapers, over which fasten smoothly a soft cotton cloth. Have at hand a lump of beeswax, tied in a small bag, and a similar package of resin. Now smooth out a leaf with the hand, rub the beeswax lightly over the iron, letting the hot, smooth surface glide quickly over the leaf, first on upper and then on the lower side, pressing a little more firmly a third and fourth time, until the leaf is thoroughly dry. The glowing colors will be firmly fixed, and will never fade, unless exposed to the sunshine. Having treated all the leaves in a similar manner, they are ready for the resin, or "the finishing process." With a moderately hot iron, which must be lightly and rapidly rubbed over the bag of resin, go over every leaf, first on the upper and then on the lower side. This gives them a brilliant, hard, glossy finish that makes them almost indestructible. Many persons complain that the glossy appearance is unnatural. While this is true, to some extent, yet the protection given by the coat of resin could be obtained in no other way. To preserve small branches, and boughs with leaves, one must proceed in the same manner, pressing the limbs and twigs with the iron until dry, being careful to avoid the point where the leaf is attached, as too much heat just there will cause it to drop off instantly. To achieve perfect success, be sure to take the leaves when freshly gathered. When the work has been finished, spread a number of newspapers upon the floor of some unused room, and there place the treasures. Give them plenty of space, so that they will not touch, or stick to each other. Cover them entirely with more papers, and let them remain in this cool, dark seclusion until ready to decorate the rooms, or otherwise use them as things of beauty and joy. Reserve a few of the brightest and more perfect specimens for the holiday times, when they will come out of their darkness so beautiful that they who see them will have no longing for summer flowers, but will revel in the un fading glories of the autumn leaves.—Popular Gardening.

Life in the Mines.

There is a fascination about mining life which, once having possessed a man, cannot easily be shaken off. A miner who has made a good stake by selling his locations at first proposes to himself to travel, then to settle down in his original home; but after a little while he discovers that he himself has changed, that old ties have been broken, and that he is disappointed in his former associations. Things at home seem to have inexplicably dwindled. An almost irresistible impulse, a transferred nostalgia, a longing for the clear, bracing air and the liberal ways of the mines then seizes him, says a writer in the Engineering Magazine. It is difficult to content one's self with the monotonous life of the staid communities after having tasted a more exhilarating one.

The attraction of the mines is not all in the hope of gain, though that of course has much to do with it. The friendship formed, the freedom of thought and custom, the spirit of camaraderie, and the entire absence of commercial competition have their influences as well. So numbers of men, having acquired a competence in mining, make their headquarters still in a mining country as a matter of preference, not necessity. Such men are much in the habit of taking short trips away, and are to be met with all through the highways and byways of travel. To be able to lead this pleasant, independent life is the dream of the less fortunate ones. Miners are very apt to disparage their calling while they are actively engaged in it; they may term it "a dog's life," but let them once be freed, mark how they hanker after it.

Cost of Living and Dying.

It costs something to live and a good deal to die: in fact everything costs. Some one estimates that getting born costs the people of the United States $250,000,000 annually; getting married $300,000,000; and getting buried $75,000,000. It might be added that getting drunk costs the people of the United States more than $900,000,000 annually, or over one and a half times as much as getting born, married and buried put together, and more than all the bread and meat consumed in the nation.

Albert Edward's Stunning Experience.

There are just now stories flying about of the Prince of Wales visiting the "alums" under a rather comical disguise, but though it is known that the Prince, accompanied by Lord Carrington, made himself acquainted with the "seamy" side of life, very little art was required to conceal his identity. Indeed, it is surprising, though Englishmen are as a rule familiar, more or less, with the appearance of their future sovereign, how often his presence in a place where he is not expected passes without recognition. Some years ago, the Prince, quite incognito, travelled down to Folkestone to meet Princess Louise, who was coming over from the Continent, and as there was some time to wait before the arrival of the steamer, he strolled about on the quay and ultimately went out with a boatman of local fame for a short cruise in the channel. When they got safely back the Prince remarked: "Perhaps you would like to know who I am?" "I don't know as I cares; it ain't no odds to me," came the reply. "Well, I'm the Prince of Wales." "The Prince of Wales!" ejaculated the old mariner, giving his customer a playful dig in the ribs, "Get along with yer!"

Church Opening at Moncton.

The Roman Catholics of Moncton opened their new church on Sunday, with imposing services. It is a handsome stone structure, in gothic style. Its extreme length is 140 ft., width 65 ft., with tower 20 ft. square, which is yet to be surmounted by a spire extending to a height of 189 ft. from the ground. It will seat 1000 persons. The church is steam-heated and electric-lighted. The cost, on completion, will be $40,000, and almost the whole expenditure so far has been paid by subscriptions and entertainments. The congregation which in 1887 numbered but 12 families, has been rapidly increasing, first under Fr. Cormier, now of Kent Co., then under Fr. Foley, and since 1882 under the present incumbent, Rev. H. A. Mehan, to whose indomitable work the great progress of the congregation is in a very large measure due. The Daily Times publishes excellent engravings of St. Bernard's church and Rev. Mr. Mehan.—Ex.

An Old Maid's Society.

Thirty years ago and more fifty ladies of Milford, Conn., formed a society of old maids, every one of whom vowed that she would never marry. Each member paid $5 on admission, the interest on the principal thus raised to be expended in annual dinners, while the principal itself was to go to the member who remained unmarried the longest. In the three decades which have succeeded, all but fifteen of the original fifty have married, and the storms of sixty winters have whitened the hair of the faithful; it looks as if they would stick. It is a question who will outlive all the others and receive the reward, which now amounts to nearly $1,000.

Minard's Liniment for Rheumatism.

Nature Bleaches Their Hair.
Ladies who want white hair should go to and live awhile in New Mexico or Colorado. Why a residence in either should bleach the hair is a mystery, but it does, and many a black-haired man who has gone out there to settle comes back in three or four years with a poll as white as snow. Some say it is the altitude, though what an altitude of 5,000 or 6,000 feet has to do with a man's hair is a mystery. A more reasonable explanation is the alkali. The alkali dust gets into the hair, and must be washed out with the alkali water, and the hair is thus speedily bleached. Whatever is the cause of Colorado bleached hair it is the prettiest white that ever grew on the human head.

A Sea Voyage.

A sea voyage is an expensive and extensive prescription, especially when equally good results as regards health, are to be had by simply taking Burdock Blood Bitters according to directions. It is a specific for dyspepsia, cleanses the blood, regulates the liver, bowels and kidneys and removes all impure matter from the system.

It Takes a Woman.

To make a little go a great way.
To make a man of a foolish boy.
To understand a baby's prattling.
To make a wise man turn foolish.
To buy a dear little cup and saucer when she really meant to buy a pair of gloves.
To entertain a crowd of people smilingly when her head feels as if a hundred little demons were hammering it.
To make a bonnet out of last year's hat and to hunt in her old hats for the name of a well-known importer to sew it in her bonnet and wear it as the latest importation.

Edison promises to run a railway train between Milwaukee and Chicago during the World's Fair at a speed of one hundred miles an hour by his new electric motor. By his invention two pounds of coal will do the work of six with the present appliances. He says the plant will cost as much as the cable system.
