From the Arizona Kicker.

POOR SHOOTING.—As we were coming across the sand lots the other evening, after spending a couple of very agreeable hours at the adobe residence of the Widow Jackson, some would be assassin, who was in hiding, fired six bullets at us from a revolver. We think it was Tom Bigelow. We think so because Tom has shot at everybody in town and never hit any one. He didn't hit us. Being armed only with a bowie knife, we lit out as soon as the shooting began, and the last bullet went ten feet above our head.

We did think of hunting Tom up yesterday and splitting his ear with a bullet as a great moral lesson, but on second thought we concluded not to waste the time. He'll keep on blazing away around this town until somebody gets vexed at the noise and then he'll suddenly go hence. We don't want his funeral expenses on our hands.

HE'S A SUBSCRIBER.—Last week, as noticed by our contemporary in a double headed article with three scare heads on it, Jim Benschaw, who owns the cactus ranch out on the Tucson road, refused to take his copy of The Kicker out of the post-office. Jim not only owed us $1.50 on subscription, but refused his paper to hurt our feelings. He's been sore on us ever since we refused to lend him our white shirt—the only one in town—to go on a drunk in.

We want to show an accommodating spirit towards all, and we have the name of being a good fellow, but we want to say right here and now that we believe a common wool shirt is plenty good enough for any man in this town to get drunk in. If it isn't, he'd better stay sober.

When we saw Jim's little game we mounted our mule and rode over to interview him. He was expecting us. One bullet went through our hat and another raked our mule, but after that Jim lay down and we dug the bullet out of his shoulder and helped him into his dugout. He not only paid us all arrears in spot cash, but a dollar on advance subscription, and as soon as able to move about he will personally canvass for subscribers.

WE SHALL GET THERE.—Last Friday evening we were nominated for mayor by acclamation, and this is equivalent to an election. We don't deny that we sought the nomination. We have had our eye on it for a year past. We shall also do our level best to snow our opponent under. We have been moved to this course by a desire to see the town well governed and because we believe the mayor should be the representative man of the town. We are that man. There's no use in filing and backing and talking about modesty and self conceit and all that. We lead this town. We know more than any ten men in it rolled together. We shall make the best mayor the town has ever had, and we shall see that all the city printing is given to The Kicker at legal rates.

What Your Great Grandmother Did.

She hatched the flax and carded the wool, and wove the linen, and spun the tow, and made the clothes for her husband and ten children. She made butter and cheese, she dipped tallow candles, to light the house at night, and she cooked all the food for her household by an open fireplace and a brick oven. Yes; and when she was forty years of age, she was already an old lady whose best days were over. Her shoulders were bent and her joints enlarged by hard work, and she wore spectacles and a cap. Her great grand-daughter with all the modern conveniences for comfort, refinement and luxury, may be as charming at forty-five as at twenty. Especially is this true if she preserves her health and beauty by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which wards off all female ailments and irregularities, cures them if they already exist, keeps the life current healthful and vigorous, and enables the woman of middle age to retain the freshness of girlhood upon brow and cheek, the light of youth in her eyes, and its elasticity in her step. Sold by all druggists.

Concise.

A teacher in a suburban school, not long ago, gave her pupils twelve minutes in which to write an "abstract" A shoe was the subject selected by her, and the boys were to write in the first person. No limit to the number of lines or words was given them.

Most of the boys wrote and erased during the whole time allotted, but the teacher noticed one fellow who sat idle until the time was within two minutes of expiring. As the scholars filed out, she said to him "Brown did you finish your abstract?"

"Yes ma'am," he answered. Curious to see what he could have written in so short a time, she looked over the papers, and found this:

"I am a worn-out old shoe; my coffin is the ash-barrel; my grave, the dump" She says that almost as firmly impressed on her memory as this remarkable composition, is the expression of amazement on the boy's face the next morning when he saw the "100" mark on his paper.

The assessment of Toronto, just completed, shows taxable property to the value of nearly $153,000,000 a gain of $5,000,000. The population in the year has increased over 3,000.

Are Men Growing scarce.

Statistics show that the male population of the civilized world is falling further and further behind the female.

According to the last British census, the excess of women and girls over men and boys in Great Britain is about 900,000 an increase in 10 years of 200,000. The German census of last December places the number of females about 600,000 above that of the males in the kingdom of Prussia, or nearly three times the excess 20 years ago. There are 1,000,000 more females than males in the whole German empire. In Sweden and Norway the "weaker sex" is in the majority by 250,000, and in every European country they outnumber the males.

In the United States, Canada and Australia the males are in the majority, though not largely so, the estimated excess of males in this country being only 1,100,000 or 1,200,000. It is plain that, but for immigration, which furnishes a much greater number of men than women, the latter would be in the majority here. There is a large preponderance now of females in New England, and in some other sections of the United States, and if immigration were to materially decrease, undoubtedly the surplus of males would soon disappear in the whole country.

In less civilized countries, where women are lightly esteemed, it is otherwise, India having about 6,000,000 more men than women, while the males preponderate in China. The obvious deduction is that the higher civilization is more favorable to the increase of the female sex, and this suggests the interesting question whether civilization is doing the best thing in the world in producing this result.

A fact of hardly less interest brought out by the British census is the marked decline in the marriage rate, which has been almost steadily tending downwards for nearly two decades. Meantime there has been an even more decided decline in the birth rate, so that not only is marriage decreasing, but marriages are becoming less prolific on the average. There is the same tendency in this country, prevailing chiefly among the better classes.

Husband and Wife.

It is by no means a new theory that a man and woman who have been married a great many years grow to resemble each other, not only in manner and voice, but actually as to features and expression.

A recent number of the Illustrirte Welt has an article on this subject, which states that the photographic association of Geneva has quite lately been investigating the truth of this theory by the aid of the camera.

The photographs of seventy-eight elderly or very old married couples were taken, and an equal number of family groups.

The result proved quite satisfactory to holders of this theory, inasmuch as in twenty-four cases the resemblance between husband and wife was much greater than between brother and sister, and in thirty cases more it was fully as great.

The failure of the other twenty-four old couples to realize the expectations of those interested in the matter is supposedly due to "incompatibility of disposition," which time was apparently unable to combat in its effects.

Diphtheria from Barnyard Fowl.

Dr. Turner states that an epidemic of diphtheria broke out in the village of Braughing, Hertfordshire, England, the first cases occurring on a farm where the fowls were dying of a disease of the throat, and on other farms where the children had diphtheria a similar malady of the fowls prevailed. At Longham a man bought a chicken at a low price, as it was sick with the prevailing disease, and cared for it at home. His children soon sickened with diphtheria, which extended from his family through the village. Dr. Turner mentions similar instances showing that the feathered tribe, the common barnyard fowl, turkeys, pigeons and in one locality pheasants, died of a disease attended by a pseudo-membranous exudation which was probably diphtheritic.—Dr. J. Lewis Smith in Babyhood.

A Clam That Pearl Divers Fear.

The pearl fisheries of Ceylon belong to England, the natives being employed to gather them on a basis of shares in the result. All sorts of superstitions prevail among them and a large business is done by sorcerers who sell charms to restrain the appetite of the sharks and to drive away the diabolical stingrays. Another pearl which the diver dreads more than either stingray or shark is the giant clam, that weighs nearly half a ton when full grown. It will snap off a man's legs like a pipe stem if the victim chances to thrust a limb between his jaws, or at all events will hold him till he drowns miserably.—Washington Star.

Aunt's Advice.

"My brother had severe summer complaint about a year ago and no remedies seemed to relieve him. At last my aunt advised us to try Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and before he had taken one bottle he was entirely cured."—Adeleide Crittenden, Baldwin, Ont.
