A "Funny" Occupation.
 "What lots of fun a newspaper man must have!" remarked a gushing damsel to the Beacon, a short time since.
 Oh, yes! we can conceive of nothing "funnier" than a newspaper man's existence. If he is the proprietor of a paper he has no end of "fun" in getting the million and one things in proper shape for working at the start of his venture.
 Then he has more "fun" in getting subscribers, and still more "fun" in trying to hold them. Securing advertisers is a "funny" occupation, and the way the aforesaid advertisers monopolize the "tops of columns next to reading matter," is also provocative of a good deal of "fun."
 Newsgetting is "funny" and its publication oftentimes produces a good deal more "fun" for the news-getter.
 If the editor should happen to make a mistake and be honest enough to admit it, the amount of "fun" that he has in trying to persuade a section of his readers that he is not a double-dyed rogue would fill a hogs-head.

If he publishes an item concerning a dog fight, the owner of the "pugs" pounce upon him at the first opportunity, and would fain rend him limb from limb. More "fun."
 If he finds fault with the drinking habits of the community, somebody who is afraid his bitters will be stopped, accuses him of being a temperance crank. He stops his paper. More "fun."
 Again the fun-loving editor recommends that a liquor license inspector be appointed. Some other crank rises up and yells at the top of his voice, "Stop my paper. You're siding with the rum party." Another pile of "fun."
 A story is pilfered, and palmed off on the editor as an original effort. The identity of its authorship is discovered after a little, and more "fun" follows for the editor.
 A man is found dead with a suspicion of foul play. The editor speaks out his mind freely, as all editors should, and forthwith the relatives of the suspected man proceed to exterminate him. But they can't, and the editor gets more "fun."
 A petty election is run, some remark is dropped in the newspaper which offends an individual. He proceeds to get his revenge out of the editor, causing another addition to his stock of "fun."
 And so the editor's life goes on, chunk after chunk of "fun" being hurled at him day after day, and week after week, until finally he becomes buried beneath the "funny" mass and is lost to sight forever.

Oh, yes! a newspaper man's life is one prolonged joke!—St. Andrews Beacon.
Receipts.
RISOTTO.—Chop up an onion, and fry it in two ounces of butter until of a gold color add a quarter of a pound of rice previously blanched and drained, and stir it with the onion for a few minutes over the fire. Do not let it burn. Add one pint of good gravy and a couple of sliced tomatoes, or a little conserve of tomatoes, simmer gently till the rice is tender. Just before it is taken from the fire add some grated cheese and two ounces of butter.
TO STUFF A HAM.—Select a nice ham and boil it; when done, let it cool before you skin and trim it. Prepare a stuffing of bread crumbs, butter, pepper, parsley, thyme, and celery. Begin at the hook and make incisions with a sharp knife, about an inch apart, put in the stuffing as you draw out the knife. Rub in a bowl the yolks of two hard-boiled eggs, and brandy sufficient to make a paste; spread it on the ham smoothly, and grate over it bread-crumbs; stick in cloves ornament. Put it in the stove and let it brown gently. Eaten cold.
CHICKEN PIE.—Put into a saucepan one quart of water, an onion a little chopped parsley, a little celery-seed, with pepper and salt; simmer for an hour; then put in a chicken, cut into convenient pieces, and stew until thoroughly cooked. Line a dish with good pie crust, then put in the chicken in layers, with slices of hard-boiled egg between each layer; add to the gravy a small piece of butter rolled in flour and a quarter of a pint of milk; let it just boil, and pour over the chicken. Put on a top crust, and bake until the pastry is done.

A BAG OF MILK.—"Here you are, two pounds of chops, good scant weight," said the merry Cranston street grocer to the young man of family who had brought in an order from his wife, "and now for your milk; where's your can?" The young man of family protested that he hadn't read the order, and had not been equipped with a can. "Never mind," said the grocer; "here, hold on to it," and he dexterously slipped one paper sugar bag inside of another and flipped the corners into place. The two quarts of milk were poured into the inner bag. "The grease in the milk prevents it from going through the paper, as water would," explained the grocer. "I had hard work to get people to believe they could carry milk in a bag at first, and had to let it go at my own risk. I've sent it so half a mile by slow transit; still I'd advise you not to stop to tell any long stories on the way home."
Rabid transit. The career of a mad dog. The one-fourth owner of a vessel is like a certain ship's officer, in that he is a quarter-master.

Worth Knowing.
 Keep yeast in wood or glass.
 Keep salt in a dry place.
 Keep fresh lard in tin vessels.
 Keep preserves and jellies in glass.
 Keep meal and flour in a cool dry place.
 Keep vinegar in wood, glass, or stone-ware.
 Sugar is an admirable ingredient in curing meat or fish.
 Crusts and pieces of bread should be kept in an earthen jar, closely covered, in a dry cool place.
 Lard for pastry should be used as hard as it can be cut with a knife. It should be cut through the flour, and not rubbed.
 In boiling meat for soup, use cold water to extract the juices. If the meat is wanted for itself alone, plunge it into boiling water at once.
 To prevent meat from scorching during roasting, place a basin of water in the oven. The steam generated prevents scorching and makes the meat cock better.
 Broil steak without salting. Salt draws the juices in cooking. It is desirable to keep these in, if possible. Cook over a hot fire; turning frequently, searing on both sides. Place on a platter; salt and pepper to taste.
 Beef that has a tendency to be tough can be made very palatable by stewing gently for two hours, with pepper and salt taking out about a pint of liquor when half done and letting the rest boil into the meat. Brown the meat in the pot. After taking up, make a gravy of the pint of liquor saved.
Murder will Out.
 The last act of a horrible tragedy has just been played at Switzerland. The body of a young girl, Anna Hachinger, was recently discovered in the woods, near Berne, it was shockingly mutilated, and the authorities spared neither time nor money in trying to discover who had killed her. Their efforts however were in vain, and the foul deed would probably have remained a mystery forever had not a mere chance revealed the guilty person.
 A young medical student of the University of Berne entered the dissecting room one day and prepared for work by taking off his overcoat and putting on a light office jacket. As he did so one of his shirt buttons fell on the floor and his companions noticed a strange wound on his arm—evidently the result of a bite. They questioned him eagerly, but he turned his back on them abruptly and, going to his room, shot himself through the head.
 At the inquest which followed it was made clear beyond the shadow of a doubt that the wound had been made by Anna Hachinger in her death struggle. Tightly clinched between the dead girl's teeth was found a piece of skin, and this piece of skin corresponded exactly with the wound on the student's arm.
A Curious Custom.
 It was the custom in Babylon, five hundred years before the Christian era, to have an annual auction of the unmarried ladies. In every year, on a certain stated day, each district assembled all its virgins of marriageable age. The most beautiful were put up first, and the man who paid the highest gained possession of her. The second in personal charms followed her, and so on, that the bidders might gratify themselves with handsome wives, according to the length of their purses. There may yet remain in Babylon some for whom no money was offered, but the provident Babylonians managed that. When all the comely ones are sold, the criers order the most deformed one to stand up, and, after demanding who will marry her for a small sum, she is adjudged to him who is satisfied with the least; and in this manner the money raised from the sale of the handsome, serves as a portion for those who are either of disagreeable looks, or that have any other imperfection.
HOME MADE SUPERPHOSPHATES.—A late bulletin of the Maryland Agricultural Experimental Station gives a plan for making domestic superphosphates from the animal bones that accumulate about the farm. It is as follows:
 Crush the bones as thoroughly as possible and provide a barrel of fresh burned lime and three barrels of strong, unleached hardwood ashes, for every barrel of crushed bone. Use as a base or mixing hearth, a tight floor, or a level layer of loamy soil about six inches thick. Upon this spread a barrel of ashes in a similar layer. Then, in a thinner layer, half a barrel of bone; scatter through the bone to fill the spaces, and spread upon it a half barrel of lime, pulverized but not slacked. On this spread a second barrel of ashes. Wet this pile gradually with a sprinkler, using about 10 gallons of water, or enough to moisten all but have none to run out. Add, in like manner, a half barrel of bone, a half barrel of lime, a barrel of ashes and 10 gallons more of water. Over all scatter about one bushel of land plaster, and cover the entire pile with dry loam. Examine the pile once a week and add water, if needed to keep all moist, but not wet. In four or five weeks shovel over and thoroughly mix, moisten and pile again, cover with soil and a little more plaster, and leave two or three weeks longer. If pieces of bone then remain undecomposed sift them out to use in next compost, or add more quicklime and ashes and give further time.
