EQUITY SALE.

There will be sold at Public Auction in front of Dwyer's Hotel, in Cocagne, in the Parish of Dundas in the County of Kent, on FRIDAY, the thirteenth day of February, next, at the hour of two in the afternoon, pursuant to the directions of a decretal order of the Supreme Court in Equity made on the first day of November, A. D. 1890 in a cause therein pending wherein Edward J. Smith is plaintiff and Raphael Casey, Richard Casey, Philip Casey, Adele Casey, Alvina Casey, Marie Rose Casey, Marguerite Casey, Clifton Casey, Maximilien also called Myan Casey, Maximilien Maillet and Eugene his wife, George Le-ger and Euphémie his wife, Philippe LeBlanc and Esther his wife, Jacques Poirier, Bazelle Poirier and Adeline Casey are defendants with the application of the undersigned Referee in Equity and the mortgaged premises described in the said decretal order as follows:—All that parcel of land situated at Casey Cape in the County of Kent and bounded on the north by lands formerly owned by Belony White, on the south and west by lands formerly occupied by Anthony Casey, on the east by the sea shore, containing about thirty acres, being all the land said Francis Casey purchased from Thomas E. Smith and Belony Casey. Second piece being on the east side of the Grand Digue road and adjoining the marsh, being about eight acres, which was deeded to said Francis Casey by his late father Joseph Casey and the heirs of the late Placide Poirier. Also a third piece or parcel of land situated as above stated in said County of Kent and being the southern half from front to rear of lot of land on which the said Francis Casey formerly resided being deeded to him by his late father Jo Casey containing fifty acres, together with the buildings, erections and improvements thereon.
Terms of sale cash.
For other particulars apply to the plaintiff's solicitor.
Dated the 17th day of November A. D. 1890.

The Devil's Tower.

The new State of Wyoming has become famous already for its natural scenery. The greater portion of Wyoming is a rolling tableland, with here and there a short, abrupt range of mountains, or a group of hills rather, rising up out of an illimitable and treeless plain. The eastern portion slopes away to the Black Hills of South Dakota, which forms a black wall against the south half of the eastern boundary between Wyoming and South Dakota. If you stand on some one of the highest peaks of the Black Hills, Mount Harney, for instance, you can see half way across the State, and the only obstruction which meets your vision as you gaze to the north and westward is the Devil's Tower, or Bear Lodge, in the direction of the Belle Fourche river. The Devil's Tower is 100 miles northwest from Mount Harney and 50 miles west of the Dakota line. It is in Crook County. Wyoming, 20 miles west of Sundance and about half a mile from the Belle Fourche. Except the remarkable phenomenon found in the Yellowstone Park, northwestern Wyoming, there are none that will compare for grandeur with this awe inspiring monument of nature's handiwork in eastern Wyoming. The Devil's Tower or Bear Lodge, is said by geologists to be without a precedent in basaltic crystallization. It is a natural obelisk rising sheer 1,200 feet above the bank of the Belle Fourche. It is 800 feet in diameter at the base, tapering gracefully to a diameter of 375 feet at the top. It is composed of thousands of prisms that extend unbroken from base to summit. This continuity of the crystals is the remarkable feature of the mass, the tendency of the trappa rock being to fracture transversely in crystallization, and weather away to the appearance of stairs, as in the Giants' Causeway, Ireland. Prof. Newton says: "Bear Lodge or Devil's Tower, in its shape and structure appears not to have been repeated elsewhere by nature, but stands alone, unique and mysterious. It occupies the place of a chimney to some subterranean furnace which overflowed with molten rock and, cooling, crystallized, downward. The surrounding walls of the chimney eroded and left this mighty monument to the work of crystallization—that power scarcely less mysterious than the force of life itself." The land in the vicinity of the Devil's Tower is arid and fit only for grazing. Some wheat is grown in the neighborhood, oats and timothy and other small grain, but crops are uncertain and rarely ever amount to more than a half crop. In view of this fact, the people of Crook County were surprised by the announcement that an English lady, one Miss Carlisle Kent, had filed a pre-emption on the 160 acres on which Devil's Tower stands, in the land office at Douglas, Wy. The citizens are determined that this tower shall become the private property of no one. Letters have been written to the Land Department at Washington on the subject, and resolutions and letters addressed to Senator Moody, of South Dakota, asking him to use his influence to defeat Miss Kent's application, and to have Devil's Tower set apart as a national park. Miss Kent's idea, it is alleged, was to secure this ground and convert it into a magnificent private park, rivaling the Yellowstone, and charge visitors an admittance fee. Now that this is a matter before the public, it is probable that a strong effort will be made to have Congress set apart a tract of land, including that on which the Devil's Tower stands as a national park, similar to that on the Yellowstone. An area of two miles in width by five miles in length would include Bear Lodge and the Twin Buttes, on the Little Missouri river, and the intervening landscape, which combined, forms a natural park without a rival for grandeur and beauty on the face of the earth.

Judges of good portraiture are warm in their praises of the picture, in pastel, of John Boyle O'Reilly, lately done for the Rev. Arthur J. Teeling, of Newburyport, Mass., by Mr. Arthur Lionel Swann, of St. John, N. B. It is not only a fine picture, but a faithful likeness, the artist having seized that expression of blended strength and tenderness characteristic of the lamented dead. The coloring of the flesh and the lustre of the eyes are marvellously fine. Mr. Swann is well known in England and Ireland, having been for many years with Sarony of Scarborough, Eng.; he has also been with Brady of New York, and has made a reputation in Boston through the success of his portrait work for some of the best known families of this city. Mr. Swann's studio is at 23 Carleton street, St. John, N. B., and looks quite like a Boston interior, on account of the amount of work for Boston constantly on hand.—Boston Pilot.

Laughter is healthful to the body as gladness is to the mind, and there is no more beautiful spectacle than a smiling face, when you know it is the true index of the soul within. We do not speak of that species of idiotic laughter which is sure to follow the exhibition of any low trick, or the utterance of a coarse jest, but that genial outburst that enlivens the social circle when men, like true philosophers, forget their past cares, and put off till tomorrow all apprehensions regarding the future.

Indulge always in a benevolent forgetfulness of self.

STYLES IN STATIONERY.

The Proper Thing in Note Paper and in Visiting Cards.

Styles in stationery have not materially changed from last season, though some of the distinctions are a little more marked. New varieties of note paper, with florid decorations, eccentric dimensions, and conspicuous tintings are produced, but fail to become standard. The most elegant as well as genteel paper sold is a heavy cream white sheet folding once into a square envelope. This sheet may have a rough finish and the curiously mottled appearance of coarse wrapping paper, by the irregular arrangement of water lines, when it is known as Grecian antique. It may be smoothly finished, with no gloss, and very heavy and silky in texture, when it is called "kid finished." It may have a rough cloth finish, or a peculiar rough effect known as "parchment vellum." Quite the latest paper used is a so-called "etching paper," which has a rough surface with various irregular depressions, and rougher still, almost like Bristol board, is the so-called hand made parchment. A new variety of paper has broad water lines stamped across the paper horizontally, and diagonally applied to the envelope.

In notes of invitations or regret and formal correspondence the heavier varieties are employed. The one new tint produced this year is a very delicate violet shade, which is sometimes used by aesthetic people. Another shade known as azure, which is in reality a dull soft blue, is also somewhat popular; dull stone color and chocolate are also sometimes seen, but the conservative woman of good taste selects always a plain cream-tinted paper. At the top of the page, and in the center instead of the corner, is her address stamped in colored letters, surmounted by her monogram or coat of arms if she has one. The monograms are much more used this season than they have been previously, and the fancy is to stamp them in embossed letters colored with metallic colors. The three initials in script are sometimes used instead of the monogram. For ordinary use the letters and accompanying monograms are of a clear scarlet or blue, printed smoothly upon the paper.

Gentlemen's visiting cards are a trifle longer and quite as narrow as those of last year, and have the address in the lower left hand corner. The lady's visiting card is large, square, and imposing, and engraved in large script, especially if the name is a short one.

Wedding invitations are in every respect the same, engraved on a she t, note size, which folds once, to be included in the envelope. This envelope contains sometimes three cards besides the invitation proper—the card to be presented at the church door, another for the reception at the house, and a third which may give the future at home day of the bride. A card is sometimes used for church weddings indicating the hour and place at which the bridal party take the train, and which is practically an invitation to see them off on the wedding journey.—N. The Human Pin-cushion.
William Melcomb was a visitor at the Pennsylvania Hospital yesterday. He wanted to have his arm dressed again. He declares he was doing finely, and didn't seem to think that having a needle cut out of his forearm was anything to talk about. He is used to being stuck full of needles and pins, as he is better known by the name of the Human Pin-cushion.

On Tuesday night Melcomb, who is 35 years old and lives at No. 1002 Race Street, walked into the receiving ward and when Dr. Leidy came in, told him that he had a needle broken off in his right forearm.

"What were you doing with a needle in your arm?"

"Oh, that's my business. I'm the Human Pin-cushion."

The man said that at the performance that day he had stuck his arm full of pins and needles. He accidentally struck one of the latter against a table and the little instrument broke off in his arm. He bared his arm for the doctor to examine it. The limb looked like a pepper-box, so full was it of little punctures. The needle had got down between the two bones of the forearm, and a large incision would have to be made to get at it. He refused to take ether, and coolly watched Dr. Leidy make the cut. He never even winced, and chatted sociably about the operation, as though it was being performed on someone else.

"Now, if I could have this done on the stage it would make quite a hit," he said, as Dr. Leidy drew the fragments of steel out.

Melcomb said he had been making a living in this curious way for the last five years.—Philadelphia Press

The Woman of Culture.

"A woman of culture." Is the phrase a vague one, without special significance, or does it denote the possession of certain well-defined and positive qualities that distinguished the possessor from other women? Who is the woman of culture, and why do we name her so?

She is the woman on whom "none of the finer flavors of life are lost."

She is not the one who constantly asks if you have read the latest book or seen the newest picture.

She is the woman who responds most quickly and helpfully to the suggestions of those about her.

She is the woman who makes each of us wiser and wittier in her presence than we ever are out of it.

She is the one who shuns newness and ostentation in thought as in every thing else.

She is not the woman who keeps you continually marveling at her cleverness.

She is not the woman who follows a "fad" of any kind simply because everyone else does.

She is the woman who never parades her learning or her possession of her convictions.

She is the woman who rather shuns the society of the modern writers and loves to dwell among the saints.

She is the woman who makes you feel stronger and wiser and better for every hour you spend in her presence.
