

or nectar-tipped words, neither is given to blandishments. There are those who toss off words gracefully as doth yon fern toss golden pollen from its tasselled flowers. There are those who, to look at, move even me, Zell."

"No more, Shem: thou art cruel. Thou wouldst not have me love a tasselled, fern like man, wouldst thou? Terry speaks as doth yon mountain. I lay my hand on it and I know it is strong. I lay my hand on Terry and I know his strength. Then, he speaks to me in every touch. When he takes my hand, without a word he tells his love for me and I feel my language weak compared with his. Oh, Terry! thou art my strength."

Zell sought the support of Terry's strong arms, and Shem turned partly away. He stood like a pine tree, sombre and alone. "Zell and Zanea both gone," was all he said, and it rained like the sighing pines more than a human voice. A moment he stood thus, then he said, lightly:

"I bantered thee, my little one. I thinkest thou lovest thy Terry as he ought to be loved. I, too, find him a strength, and his very silence is eloquent. May he long be spared to thee that thou canst more fully understand and appreciate that same silent eloquence. Now, Zell, hie thee to thy room, I would talk of weighty affairs with thy Terry."

"Shem, do you not think Zell might hear the weighty affairs discussed with profit to herself and us. She is no longer a child. She is to stand by my side through life. If joy or pleasure comes she will be by me to receive her share. If sorrow and trials come our united strength will be greater than if we meet it alone. We will stand together, Shem."

"Thou art a worthy pair, and in sorrow wilt thou find thyself a joy. When art thou going out beyond Terry Denver? Before Zell goes an outfit more in unison with the times, will have to be procured for her. She will inherit all her father's wealth, which is in the millions. It is all in gold, stored in the remotest cave, gold and gems, principally diamonds. Ishmael made me guardian. You will be as soon as Zell is your wife. The cave is sealed up and quite safe if you feel like leaving it so until some future time; there will be no danger of it being discovered."

"We will leave it as it is until it can be removed safely."

"I think it would be better so. At day-break I visited the victims. Judith still sleeps, but is alive, the other four are resting the eternal rest. They will have to be buried. It almost seems as if Ishmael had power over them still, and had made their spirits seek his greater spirit in the life beyond."

"We will bury them to-day. We will then shut up the cave and all go home to Montreal. As soon as I settle you in a house, I will finish the journey my coming here interrupted. At Buckhorn we can get Zell clothes that will enable her to reach home without comment."

"What journey, Terry! You never told me why you came here."

Terry told of the will, and his trip as far as the cave.

"And I will have to stay alone in Montreal all that time."

"No, Shem will be with you, and you will meet many friends. We will have my friend Jack Boyd live with you to take care of you. He is a splendid fellow. One of the kind Shem means when he said there are those who to look at moves even him. He is a good talker too."

"Shem, where is Father Ambrose? Does he know we are going away. If he should come and no one here."

Shem drew his hand over his eyes, then looked to Terry for help.

"Tell her all, Shem."

Then Shem repeated what he had told Terry while Zell had been preparing Zanea for burial. At the close Terry said to her:

"So you see, Zell, you had a father, and a sister, near you all that time."

"I cannot realize Father Ambrose and Ishmael were one. That is a great loss to me, the loss of Father Ambrose. He was with me always, and yet he was only Ishmael, whom you call my father. I cannot think of saying Father Ishmael. It was Father Ambrose who was my father, and I will never see him again, never hear him speak in his kind, gentle voice. Terry, you seem to think I ought to be glad that I had a father and Ford's Mills.

Oct. 31st.—We do not hear so much about politics lately. It seems to be a thing of the past.

The blessing of good health seems to attend our community this fall.

Mrs. Thomas McWilliam, who has been attending the S. J. S. convention held in St. John, has returned home. This lady is the superintendent of our Sabbath school, and is much beloved and respected.

Mr. McWilliam is having the cook house plastered. The work is being done by the Messrs. Welwood.

Mr. Thomas Beers is having his house repaired and renovated, which adds greatly to its appearance.

Miss Janie Ford and Miss Minnie Curran late of this place, are now in Manchester, N. H. We understand they are much pleased with their new home. We miss you very much, girls, and hope to see you back to the old home before long. Our good wishes attend you.

Mr. George Biggs and family, of Buctouche, are visiting their friends, Mr. and Mrs. McFaron. One of the party is a young lady who has lately returned from the U. S. Some of our young men seem to be deeply interested in that quarter, and we feel sorry for them, as the young lady purposes leaving for home to-day.

Miss Sadie McFaron will make Harcourt her home for a while in the future. It is quite a long drive to Harcourt—but distance lends enchantment, etc., and 'twill make the meeting all the more pleasant.

Now, good-bye, dear old REVIEW. I trust these notes will be in time for this week's issue. Yours, CELIA.

Harcourt.
Councillors election passed off quietly last week, and resulted in the election of L. J. Wathen and Silas Smallwood to the municipal board. Mr. Wathen has already proved himself to be a worthy man in the two years which he has served the parish and county, and no doubt Mr. Smallwood has the like qualities. It is a fact, however, that either moral or political reformers are always on hand when no reform is needed, while true reformers are scarce. On this principle many feel that so worthy a representative as Mr. Atkinson should not be lost to the council and especially to the parish. It is said that a "stall fed" ballot box from Salmon River is what militated against Mr. Atkinson. "The dead spake, and the live said so."

The harvest supper and bazaar held by the Methodists on the 27th ult. was a grand success, both to those who attended and to the promoters of the Methodist church here. About a hundred dollars were added to the finances of the building fund.

Mrs. F. A. Wightman has been quite ill for the past week; the result of a fall on a dilapidated sidewalk. The sidewalk has since been repaired.

Farming in the Celestial Empire.
The tools of the average Chinese farmer are a basket, a tea kettle, and a four-tined hoe. This hoe is very heavy, and is used for spading as well as hoeing. He raises it in the air as a blacksmith raises his sledge, imbeds it in the earth, and pulls it forward. The food of 400,000,000 people is cultivated by this one implement. A thrashing machine or a reaper in never seen in China. The Chinese put as much labor on an acre as an American farmer would on twenty acres. A Chinaman will raise enough on an acre to support a family of seven and pay his dollar and a half in taxes. The size of a Chinese farm is from a hundred feet square to three acres. A quarter of an acre will keep a man busy, but he will raise three crops a year on it. First he raises barley or wheat in the winter. When the wheat is heading, cotton in sown broadcast. After reaping the barley and wheat in June the little cotton is seen coming up. Then the barley roots are pulled up and the cotton comes on. It is in beds and is all hoed by hand. It grows low and has a short stubble. Chinese cotton yields about 200 pounds to the acre. Men and women draw the crops to market on two-wheeled carts. Cotton is not baled but crowded into sacks like wool. Horses are seldom seen on a farm in China; men and women do the work of the horse. A Chinese farm laborer gets about four or five cents a day and his rice.

"THOU ART A WORTHY PAIR."
a sister in Ishmael and Zanea, but Father Ambrose was both to me for twenty years. Shem and he were more to me than Ishmael and Zanea; they were my father, sister, mother. Oh, Shem, I love you! I am so glad you were left me rather than Ishmael and Zanea."
Large days had passed, and the three were standing on the shore by the yellow canoe. Judith had died, causing a delay, but all were ready now for departure. Terry, with most charming carefulness, helped Zell into the large boat that lay alongside the yellow canoe. This boat had been supplied with wraps and pillows for Zell's com-
