STRANGELY TREED BY A BEAR

The Man Inside the Tree Trunk and Able to Make a Winning Fight.

[Philadelphia Times.]

Some forty years ago, shortly after the Mexican war, while yet in my teens, I was badly afflicted with pulmonary trouble. It was decided that I should have a warmer climate. Everything was arranged for my departure, and I left my comfortable home in Kentucky for Victoria, Tex., in the early fall, arriving there about the middle of November.

It was just in the height of the pecan gathering season, and companies were forming for that purpose and leaving that section for the frontier every day. This was my opportunity, and I accepted an invitation to accompany a party of some twenty-five persons and four wagons to the Upper Guadalupe River section to gather pecans, kill deer, turkey, bear, etc., and perhaps a "red devil" of a Comanche. We did not come in contact with the Indian, but we had fine sport all the way out, shooting the common red deer, which were as thick there at day as common house flies around a molasses barrel in summer.

After a journey of a fortnight we arrived at our destination in fine trim for the harvest of nuts, and enthusiastic for the chase, as game, pecans, and wild honey were going to waste for the want of human care. We were having splendid success gathering nuts and killing deer and turkey, the party dividing up into squads of from two to four, some nutting and some prospecting and killing game and gathering wild honey.

On the third day a party of four, including myself, had reached a point some ten miles up the river on a prospecting tour, when we were confronted at close quarters by a monster in the shape of a bear. The whole party fired simultaneously into the savage beast, which only caused him to face about and rear upon his hind legs and roar like a maddened demon. Fortunately we were in the timber, and all but myself proved to be expert climbers. Hastening up the nearest trees like frightened gray squirrels. My first thought was to dodge behind a large tree near at hand and reload. It so happened that the tree behind which I had taken refuge was nothing more than a shell being about three feet through and perfectly hollow, accessible by a narrow slit into which I squeezed myself. My youth and smallness of stature stood me well in hand at this juncture, for I had barely time to get safely in before the monster was upon me. I could not use my rifle in such close quarters, but my belt knife was a good one and proved a formidable weapon, as the bear could only get his nose through the aperture and reach me with one of his forepaws. He was glad enough to withdraw after coming in contact with the furious and desperate thrusts of a huge knife in the hands of a now thoroughly aroused and alarmed boy.

This method of warfare was kept up for several minutes when, to my great relief, the bear concluded he would rest on his arms a while, and limping off at a distance of some twenty yards, would rub his lacerated and backed up nose and lick his wounded forepaws, watching the slit in the tree with eyes like huge balls of fire, and roar like a mad elephant, he was so enraged.

The unexpected maneuver of the bear gave me time to think, and I soon put a double charge to my old-fashioned hampered barrel deer rifle, with which at that distance I had great advantage, and, poking the barrel of my gun through the aperture, I fired with deliberation, aiming just behind the shoulder blade as he turned a fair broadside to me. A loud hurrah from my companions from the tops of the adjacent trees told me plainly enough that I had done my work well and they were soon upon the ground and at the side of the dead bear. As for myself I felt secure where I was, and stayed there until I was doubly sure that all danger was passed before I could be induced to leave my fortress.

This incident raised my spirits to the highest degree, and I felt myself quite a hero, but when I learned, to my great surprise, that I had killed the monarch of the wilderness, a monster grizzly and one of the largest of its species, my enthusiasm knew no bounds. We soon relieved bruise of his hide, and, taking off some of the tenderest hindquarter steaks, started for the camp, feeling as proud as though we had conquered an empire.

Killed by a Burglar.

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 27. Mrs. Lizzie Hicks, a widow living in the suburbs of this city, shot and killed her 16-year-old daughter, a beautiful girl, under painful circumstances Tuesday night. The vicinity has been terrorized by burglars, and the widow kept a loaded revolver. She heard a noise and seized the pistol and crept to the back window to listen. While there she heard a light step behind her, and turning quickly and greatly excited, saw a figure standing close beside her. She fired and an awful scream followed as her daughter Carrie cried: "Oh, mamma, you've killed me." She fell in her mother's arms and died. When the mother ascertained that it was her daughter she attempted to kill herself.

The only radical cure for rheumatism is to eliminate from the blood the acid that causes the disease. This is thoroughly effected by the persevering use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Persist until cured. The process may be slow but the result is sure.

Bazaar, Picnic, Concert, Exhibition 27th and 28th September, at Rogersville.

The Roman Catholic congregation of Rogersville, desiring to complete their new church and decorate the interior, have decided to hold festivities on the days above mentioned for the purpose of raising the necessary funds. This new parish deserves credit for progress attained and for its beautiful and tasty parish buildings. Their claim on public patronage is strong and well deserved, and no doubt their organization will be a success. The Rogersville and Acadieville Agricultural Society will hold their fine annual exhibition on the 27th, near the picnic grounds, which will further interest the visitors. Reduced fares will be given to the patrons of this praiseworthy object. An efficient committee will have everything prepared to make these days an occasion of profitable enjoyment. The programme will be published later.

There is a peculiar case in northern New Hampshire, where husband and wife are both preachers of the gospel, and each is settled over a parish in that region. Their parishes are about ten miles apart. The pastors frequently exchange with each other, and it is a very convenient family arrangement.

To the Electors of the County of Kent.

Gentlemen:—A vacancy having occurred in the representation of the County in the death of Dr. Legere, I beg to announce myself as a candidate to fill said vacancy. The interests of this County, of this Province, and of the Dominion at large, have been and will be subservient to the present dominant party. I oppose monopolists, and all appertaining thereto; I claim, irrespective of nationality or creed, to be in a position to represent all. I feel that it is in duty bound for some one of our young men to present himself before this, his native County, and for this purpose, I, as a native of the County, having a large stake in its interests and welfare, place my name before you.

The electors of Kent, my interests are your interests, any increase in your taxes caused by the present dominant party are an increase in mine. In supporting me during this contest, you are supporting your friend, let him be rich or poor.

Previous to election, I purpose addressing you in French and English throughout the different parishes.

Relying on that true support that one Christian should give to another.
I am,
Your obedient servant,
J. WARREN McDERMOTT.
