Mr. McInerney having received the largest number of votes, was declared duly elected.

The candidates then proceeded to address the electors present.

on rising was greeted with ringing cheers. He said it was certainly a novel position he then found himself in, and he scarcely knew how to begin or what to say. It had been his privilege to contest six previous elections, but this was the first time he had ever been called upon to return thanks to the electors as a successful candidate. He scarcely knew how to find words to express thanks to the electors for the great honor they had done him. He had received a splendid vote and it had come from all parts of the county. At nearly every poll, English as well as French, he had polled a good vote. In the English parishes he had polled a very large vote. In the French districts he had also done well—so well that the Moniteur Acadian, of Shediac, was lamenting the fact that no fewer than 400 Acadian votes had been cast for him. He was pleased with the vote he had received every where but he was especially proud of the almost solid vote cast for him in North Welford, Harcourt and the town of Richibucto. He was more than pleased with the vote in Lower St. Louis—Mr. Johnson's home district—where there was only one English voter and where he had only a few votes less than Mr. Johnson. In Point St. Ignace where there was but one English voter he had taken 42 votes, while his two opponents together had only received 6 votes. The people of Kent had by electing him killed, he hoped forever, the outside influences which had for a long time past been ruling this county. He thought he was correct in saying that Kent had for the past few years been ruled altogether by a few Westmorland politicians who had used the county merely to advance their own political ends. He was glad that the people of this county had at last risen and thrown off the rule of a few carpet baggers from the neighboring county. They had lost their hold on Kent and he trusted those who had been so long making political capital for themselves through their appeals to the race prejudices of our people would never again regain their hold on the county. His election would also kill out these evil prophets who were continually asserting that the interests of the Acadians of Kent would suffer at the hands of an English speaking representative. He would strive to prove to the Acadians of Kent that their interests were as safe, and perhaps safer, in his hands than in the hands of either Mr. Johnson or Mr. LeBlanc. It has been charged that he had changed his politics simply to gain a seat in the Commons. He distinctly denied that statement. He had never believed in unrestricted reciprocity as now advocated by the Liberal party of Canada. He was and had always been in favor of extended trade relations with the United States. He had at one time believed that the Conservative government had not done all they could do to secure the same. Recent events had, however, proved to him that the government at Ottawa had gone as far as it was justified in going to extend our trade relations with our neighbors. When Sir John A. McDonald stated that he was in favor of an extension of our trade relations with the United States, he was not believed by the Liberals. They charged that he was trying to deceive the electors of Canada. He called attention to the president's latest manifesto which proved conclusively that the government had negotiated with the United States government with a view of entering into extended trade relations with that country, but that it had received a reply that only on the condition that Canada would agree to discriminate against the mother country in framing her tariff would the United States undertake to consider the proposal. This the government at Ottawa had refused to do, and its course in refusing to discriminate against British trade ought to be commended by every Canadian. As long as we are a part of the British Empire we have no right to place Great Britain at a disadvantage in framing our tariff. Such a course would be next door to treason. His great aim would be to press on the government the desirability of extended trade relations with the United States but not at the expense of the mother country.

This was the first time he had met Johnson. That gentleman had experienced his first defeat but he had polled a vote that no man need be ashamed of. Mr. LeBlanc was an old campaigner and was used to both victory and defeat. He (McInerney) had experienced six successive defeats he had been one of the most gloriously abused men in the county, but his perseverance had at last led him to victory. His six defeats had not hurt him but had on the contrary helped him on to ultimate victory. (Applause.)

was received with applause. He said it was not customary for a defeated candidate to say much at declaration. He thanked his friends very sincerely for their aid in the fight. He had had to fight an uphill battle. Senator Poirier, Dr. DeBertram, and the Moniteur, had all worked in the French districts against him. Hon. Mr. Costigan had also come into the county; yet he had received a good support. In his native parish he received a magnificent vote. At some of the polls proceedings had taken place which were not a credit to the county. He again thanked his friends and said that on a future occasion he might again ask their support.

MR. JOHNSON

said that as he had received the fewest votes he would take up less time than the two who had preceded him. For a young man, under the circumstances, he had received a good vote. He had nearly swept St. Ignace, the place of his birth and at Richibucto Village, where he had spent his boyhood, he had taken a magnificent vote. He thanked those who had voted for him, and said that he might again at some future day ask them for their support. (Applause.)

to his feet. He was received with loud applause. He said he was gratified at the result almost as much as if it had been his own election. The county had done itself honor. Mr. McInerney would work for the best interests of Kent; for Kent's interests were his interests. He had before opposed Mr. McInerney but he felt that he was justified in the course he had pursued in this contest. This one election, he had no doubt, would more than counterbalance his (McInerney's) six previous defeats. Johnson was a personal friend of his. LeBlanc had been his political friend until he saw fit to cast him (Phinney) aside. The result proved that Mr. LeBlanc's party was not a very important factor in the politics of the county. Hon. Mr. Costigan had not come into the county to fight LeBlanc, and had not attempted to do so. He thanked his friends for the generous support they had given Mr. McInerney.

After a vote of thanks had been tendered the returning officer for the fair and impartial manner in which he conducted the election, the meeting broke up.

This is to certify that I have been crippled with Rheumatism in my hands and have used several kinds of liniment without any relief until I got a bottle of SCOTT'S CURE and it has made a complete cure of me. I can recommend it to anyone who has Rheumatism, as a sure cure.

The Royal Remedy Co. at Harcourt.

The Royal Remedy Co. has been giving entertainments to crowded houses in the Temperance Hall, Chatham, and all along the North Shore. They opened up in the hall at Harcourt Station on Monday night, when Dr. Julian B. Ayer was on the platform. He was greeted with a crowded house, composed of the leading ladies and gentlemen. The doctor's opening remarks in which he spoke of the future for Harcourt and the hospitality of the people were highly appreciated, while his interesting and instructive remarks generally pleased all. After the doctor's remarks the different lines of medicines were passed around, and from the large quantity sold one could not but observe that the doctor's remarks were fully appreciated. The music rendered by Dr. J. A. Bontellier was of a high order, and at once captivated the audience.

Other members of the company gave a balancing act, and the comedian was very funny and caused much laughter.

The entertainment closed with a comic farce, entitled the Book Agent, which brought down the house with roars of laughter.

The people of Harcourt seldom have a company in their midst that give them a free entertainment, where they can enjoy so pleasant an evening, and your correspondent bespeaks for the Royal Remedy Company a good share of public patronage in any town they may visit on their tour through the province.

The company remain in Harcourt for 10 days giving free entertainments every night at 8 m. The sick people should not miss the opportunity of going to Harcourt and consulting with Dr. Ayer while they have the chance, as it is not likely so favorable an opportunity of seeing Dr. Ayer will occur again soon.

New Hampshire.

This is to certify that I have suffered with Rheumatism for three years. I tried all kinds of medicines, but of no use. I purchased one bottle of SCOTT'S CURE FOR RHEUMATISM, and it cured me. I am pleased to recommend it to the public as a sure cure for Rheumatism.
