Death of Dr. Maclaren.

Dr. Lawrence Maclaren died at his residence, Charlotte street, on Thursday, morning. He was one of the oldest, best known and most successful surgeons of New Brunswick and his death will be heard with general regret. Dr. Maclaren was a native of Prince Edward Island. He studied medicine in Charlottetown with Dr. Mackinnon and afterwards in Edinburgh, Scotland, at the Royal College of Surgeons. There he was under the tuition of Legais and other celebrated teachers. After completing his studies in Edinburgh he returned to Charlottetown and practised for a short time on the island. He then came to Richibucto, N. B., and for a number of years was medical king of the North Shore his practice extending in all directions. He performed successfully many very difficult operations or feats, they might almost be termed in surgery, and so became favorably known as a most skillful surgeon. He is credited with performing the first successful lithotomy in this province and was also successful in the very difficult operation of tying the carotid for secondary hemorrhage. In 1865 he came to St. John and ever since has stood high in the ranks of his profession. Here he was at one time senior surgeon of the staff of the General Public Hospital. He practised actively up to about two years ago, when his health began to fail him so that his son Dr. Murray Maclaren, who is now a well known physician, took some of the burden off his shoulders by rendering him assistance and taking part of his practice. Dr. Maclaren, st., has not practised very actively for a year, but he has been able to get about up to a week ago, when he became seriously ill. He has since been quite a sufferer till death relieved him. He was about 75 years of age and leaves a wife, five daughters and four sons. One of his daughters is married and living in Toronto, Ont. His sons are Mr. John S. Maclaren, Inspector of Customs, David and Lawrence Maclaren, of the firm of Farnsworth & Jardine, Liverpool, Eng., and Dr. Murray Maclaren.

The deceased was very quiet and reserved, though kindly and genial and was generally respected.

In addition to his skill and great success as a medical practitioner he was in every respect a worthy and valuable citizen. He took a deep and leading interest in the agricultural advancement of the county of Kent, and was an active promoter of every enterprise calculated to improve the condition of the people among whom he was so universal a favorite. The news of his death will be received with very general regret, although many years have elapsed since his removal from Kent, yet the remembrance of his many good qualities will remain long after he himself has passed away from earth. Mrs. Maclaren and family will have the sincere sympathy of the people of Kent of all classes in their bereavement.
