Farm Topics.

Root crops are hardy and economical for fall and early winter feeding. Turnips, mangels, sugar-beets and carrots may all be used to advantage.

The small grains or shrunken kernels screened out by a trifle of extra care in winnowing and passing over the sieves of the fanning mill properly adjusted are always valuable either to sell or use as chicken feed.

Fall pigs are a nuisance unless care is taken to provide comfortable quarters in advance, so that a good, steady growth can be maintained. To have a lot of fall pigs and then attempt to winter without shelter and only feeding sufficiently to keep alive will prove a losing work.

In fattening poultry the prime rules are, sound and varied foods, warmth and cleanliness. There is nothing that a fattening hen is so fastidious about as water. Best not to give entire grain except Indian corn. Ground oats, beans or barley mixed with milk to a paste is best.

As a rule, orchards should not be plowed in the fall, and especially if they are in grass. The injury to roots at this time would be repaired by the tree if it were not for freezing of the soil often below where the root was shortened. In such cases roots freeze injuriously, when they would not be harmed if they had not been pruned. It is, perhaps, in minor degree like the greater coldness to a cut finger from cold weather as compared with one that has not been injured.

It was a Bride's Trunk.

Two trunks arrived at the Union Depot yesterday morning which were curiosities. They came in on the Burlington from St. Joseph. One bore the address "J. B. Rowe, 3,936 Washington Avenue, St. Louis," and the other had the same address and the word "Bride" painted on it in large letters. Wrapped about the trunks were sixty yards of white ribbon, while here and there was a dainty bow, which indicated plainly that one or more women had helped to perpetrate the joke.

It seems that Mr. Rowe, who is a clerk in the Burlington's St. Louis offices, was married in St. Joseph Tuesday to a beautiful girl. They left for St. Louis via Kansas City and bid their many friends good by at the St. Joseph depot. But the friends wanted some fun, and took the Burlington's "Eli" for Cameron, where they met the Kansas City train. Part of the delegation, which consisted of nearly fifty people, entered the Pullman car and pelted Mr. and Mrs. Rowe with rice and old shoes to the delight of the passengers and to the chagrin of the young couple. The other half of the delegation spotted the trunks as they were being transferred, and in addition to putting on the sixty yards of ribbon, nailed on four horseshoes and a dozen old shoes. They attracted the attention of thousands at the depot yesterday.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Sponge Grafted Into a Boy's Leg.

Halifax Echo.—Early last spring Willie Hopgood, a little ten-year-old son of W. J. Hopgood, hurt his ankle while coasting. Nothing was thought of it at the time but shortly after an abscess formed, and it was found necessary to remove it. Drs. Slayter and Parker performing the operation. This did not overcome the difficulty, however, and later Dr. Slayter removed about three inches of the ankle bone, which has become affected, and afterwards the marrow of the bone. The wound healed with the exception of a deep hole about an inch long, and repeated efforts failed to accomplish the desired end. But Dr. Slayter has effected a complete cure by grafting a piece of sponge into the wound. The sponge was prepared and placed into the hole and soon the graft "took," the wound gradually healing up. The little fellow now runs about with his companions as bright and happy as ever; a slight limp yet is the only indication of this clever surgical operation, but this, it is expected, will in time pass away.

Misplaced Bragging.

He was a very tired looking man. Dejection was written on every line of his face, and as I was a stranger in the village with nothing to do and no one to talk to, I relieved my own pent up spirits by expressing my sympathy with him in his troubles, whatever they were. "Thanks," he said. "My chief trouble seems to be that I am an idiot from Idiotville, and that is incurable. I just got into a bragging match with a stranger up in the postoffice. He bet he was richer than I was, and I took him up, just for a bluff. I told him everything I had and more too and after a while he gave in, saying as how he wouldn't have thought it. Then I said I would swear to it, and he said all right and I did, and, by thunder, who do you suppose he was?" "I don't know," I answered. "Who?" "The tax-assessor!" he moaned. It certainly was a case of hard luck.—Harper's Drawer.

HARRISONVILLE, Mich., Sept. 15.—Alfred Henshaw a prominent and wealthy citizen here last night confessed he murdered a man named Richard Drake, in Stratford, Ont., ten years ago. Drake was Henshaw's partner in the lumber business.

A Relic of the Big Fight.

St. Louis, Sept. 15.—J. T. Quigley of Memphis, Tenn., is a relic of the Sullivan-Corbett fight. Last Tuesday he sat in front of Hurst's hotel wearing a neatly fitting suit of clothes and money enough on his person to pay a month's hotel bill. To-day he worked the crowd for a sandwich. He was walking with a crutch and a cane, having but one leg, and was attired in anything but a stylish suit of clothes. "I never had to get down to this before," said Quigley, "but I was so confident that Sullivan would win that I pawned my cork leg, that I paid $200 for in this city, put my clothes in a sack, and bet my roll, and, as a consequence I am on the town to-day with one leg, an old suit of clothes, and not a cent in my pocket. Sullivan was a chump, and so was John Quigley of Memphis."

"A Hair of the Dog that Bit You."

The following remarks are copied from the recent issue of a local newspaper:—"This phrase, though now confined to a symbolic and alcoholic interpretation, has an accurately canine origin. In the Caucasus it is still common for any one who is bitten by a dog to lay a handful of hair taken from the same animal's coat upon the wound before cauterizing and bandaging it. In some mystic way the hair is supposed to prevent untoward consequences."

The efficacy of this usage is referred to by Pliny ("Nat. Hist.," xxix., c. v., sub init.) Holland's translation has:

"And there be some again, who burne the haire of the said mad dogges taile, and conveigh theire ashes handsomely in some tent of lint into the wound."—Tome ii., page 362, 1601.—Notes and Queries.

Story of a Scottish Minister.

In the old times when life moved slowly and peacefully, there lived an old minister in the north-east of Scotland, about whom many a story lingers in the district. On one occasion, during the heat of a general election, a well-known Scottish nobleman, not very particular about the observance of the Sabbath, rode over to L— to consult the minister on certain matters affecting the success of the party to which he belonged. Riding up to the church door he rapped loudly with the butt-end of his riding-whip. The beadle answered his call, and carried to the minister, who was then engaged in preaching his sermon, his lordship's message. The minister immediately stopped, and, addressing his congregation, who were in no wise put about, said—"Ma fien's, sing at the first verse of the 119th Psalm, till I gang oot an' hae a crack wi' the lord."—Scottish American.

Portuguese Currency.

The depreciation of the Portuguese currency has resulted in the abandonment of the Lisbon harbor works and the ruin of the unfortunate contractor, who has been obliged to sacrifice a deposit of £110,000 and to leave his plant, for some time, at the disposal of the Portuguese government. The immediate cause of the collapse was a refusal of the authorities to pay in anything but Portuguese paper money, with which the contractor found it impossible to meet the demands of the foreign engineers, mechanics and divers he employed, and to pay for the cement and other materials which he was obliged to order from abroad. Nearly 1,000 men have been discharged, many of whom sailed for Austria and Italy. The government declares that it will continue the work soon, but the difficulties of carrying out the original designs are said to be insurmountable. Meanwhile the banks of the Tagus bordering the city for several miles are covered with a thick deposit formed by the discharge from all the drains of the city, and the smell of low tide is horrible. The whole city, indeed, is exposed to the danger of an epidemic of fever.

Canadian Pacific Withdraws.

CHICAGO, Ill., Sept. 7.—The Transcontinental Association has begun to go to pieces. The Canadian Pacific gave notice to-day of its intention to withdraw from the organization, taking effect Jan. 1.

The reason for taking this step all hinges on the quarrel between the company and the Southern Pacific. The Canadian Pacific management asserts that the Southern Pacific has placed the other railroads in the anomalous position of charging a higher rate on domestic shipments between Pacific and Atlantic coasts than are charged on shipments from European ports to the same destinations. It also charges that the Southern Pacific has persistently refused to agree to any plan looking to an equitable adjustment of passenger rates.

The Canadian Pacific will advise its patrons on the Pacific coast that hereafter they will be assured as favorable rates on domestic shipments as are allowed on import traffic. The Canadian Pacific's action has caused a sensation.

A movement is on foot to form a volunteer battalion of bicycle cavalry in Toronto, and has progressed so far that the government has been applied to for permission to raise a six company battalion.
