THE ADVANCE'S ANNUAL OFFERING.

The editor of the Advance has thought it necessary to again publish his certificates of character. It may not be generally known to our readers that these certificates are very old documents. They have been in the possession of the editor of the Advance for a number of years. He has thought it necessary to keep them on hand, and, lest people should think he is what his paper indicates him to be, he takes care to publish them frequently. Indeed, he makes them a yearly offering to the public. They may well be termed 'relics of old decency.'

It is true the parties who wrote them have long since passed away, and there are people skeptical enough to doubt their authenticity, but, under an old rule of law, ancient documents are admissible in evidence without proof. People are thus forced to accept them for what they are worth without inquiry. Not only does the Advance's editor make them an annual offering to his readers, but he takes care that the country at large shall be informed that he is a little better than appearances would indicate. In order to give the public generally this piece of information, copies of his paper containing these pretentious documents are distributed free to non-subscribers. The North Shore is flooded with them. We would suggest to the editor of the Advance that there is a much better way of accomplishing the object he appears to have in view. Why not improve the character of his paper? Why not try and make it respectable? As long as he continues to throw mud and deal in personal abuse and vilification, as long as he tries by cowardly insinuations to destroy the good name of women who are fortunate enough not to number him among their acquaintances, he cannot expect people to rank him much above the common blackguard. As we have said before, we deemed it our duty to show up the unsavory record of the Advance. We urged it to endeavor to secure a place among respectable newspapers. It replies by attacking the character of one of our employes, and by making brutal, false and slanderous insinuations against a lady in no way connected with THE REVIEW. We should have remembered the proverb that it is impossible to come in contact with an unclean object without getting somewhat soiled. There is not another journal in the province but would seem to attempt to injure the reputation of a lady who never in her life knew or harmed him. Mr. Smith has, however, no such manly sentiments. He revels in slander and abuse, and, coward-like, he prefers to make war against the weaker sex. Happily, the lady in question is too well known here, and the editor of the Advance is too well known elsewhere, to allow the Advance's cowardly insinuations to have any effect.

THE CARON CHARGES.

The charges preferred by Mr. Edgar, M. P., against Sir Adolphe Caron, may or may not be true. We would rejoice to know that they are unfounded, but we require something more than the unsupported denial of Mr. Caron before arriving at that conclusion. Mr. Mercier in Quebec denied most emphatically the charges made against him, yet an investigation showed that he had been systematically robbing the Quebec treasury, and he and his associates are now under criminal arrest for their misdeeds. Sir Hector Langevin denied that there existed any irregularities in his department. We all know the result of the investigation into that matter. Mr. Blair has denied some very serious charges made against him and his administration. Yet there is a strong feeling throughout the province that his hands are not clean. Since the revelations at Quebec and Ottawa within the past year, people are inclined to put very little confidence in the simple denial of a charge of corruption. If the charges are unfounded, there can be no harm done in having a thorough investigation before an impartial tribunal. But where there appears an evil desire to shirk an honest inquiry, people are very apt to draw an unfavorable conclusion. We cannot understand how an innocent person can stand calmly by and allow a technical objection to be raised against the investigation of a charge preferred against him. Such a course is inconsistent with innocence. Mr. Blair's government stands to-day charged with some of the very worst offences that any government could be accused of. Yet he announces his determination to be tried by a tribunal appointed by himself, or not at all. Sir Adolphe, against whom there are similar charges, refuses to consent to any investigation. We can only say to both these gentlemen that we would like to believe them innocent, but their evident desire to avoid an honest investigation is a sign of guilt.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS.

In many of the new Western States a limited suffrage has been extended to women. The State of Wyoming was the first to allow them a voice in state affairs. In several other states women have been accorded the right to vote at school and municipal elections. The legislature of the State of New York, the largest, wealthiest and most intelligent state in the Union, has recently, by a large majority, pronounced in favor of female suffrage in state and national elections. Canadians, whether wisely or unwisely, appear to be following the example set them by their American neighbors in this respect. It is not many years since our provincial colleges and universities were first opened to women. Now fully one-half the graduates of these institutions are young ladies. The legislature of Ontario a few days ago took a very decided step towards opening the doors of the learned professions to women. A young lady, a graduate of one of the Ontario colleges applied for admission to the bar of that province. In Ontario as in New Brunswick such an application must be made to the provincial barristers society. The members took the application under consideration and after carefully looking into the matter rejected it on the ground that they had no authority to admit women to the practice of the law. A bill was at once introduced in the legislature to confer this authority upon them. The bill passed by a vote of forty-one to forty and women are now entitled to practice at the Ontario bar. We do not know whether the act makes a female lawyer eligible for a seat on the bench, but we presume it goes that far. None of the other provinces have as yet been called upon to consider this important question and it is difficult to say what would be the result if such a bill were brought before the New Brunswick legislature. In a number of the American States women have been admitted to the legal profession but there are very few instances where women have appeared in the courts in active practice though not a few of them are engaged in the collecting business. It remains to be seen what will be the result of the admission of women to the bar in Ontario.

INCREASING JUDGES' SALARIES.

The Dominion government has introduced in the Commons a bill to increase the salaries of the Supreme Court judges. It would seem to one who has not given the matter much consideration that $4000 and travelling expenses is a pretty good salary and ought to satisfy our judges. There appears to be quite a number of our best lawyers who are anxious to accept a seat on the bench at that salary if we may judge from the large number of applicants for the last vacant judgeship in this province. It has been pointed out that the salary of a leading lawyer is far beyond that amount and it is only the second rate men who are willing to accept the position of judge. This argument may apply to some of the larger provinces but it is certainly not the case in New Brunswick. If any of our leading lawyers receive a salary upward of $4,000 they appear very willing to relinquish it for a seat on the bench at that figure. But if the salaries of judges are to be increased why not increase the salaries of County Court judges as well. In this province County Court judges do fully as much work as the Supreme Court judges. Probably no judge on the Supreme Court Bench of this province does as much work as the County Court judge of Westmorland and Kent Counties. The late Judge Botsford used to complain that he was overworked and Judge Landry has fully as much to do. Yet his salary is only $2,400 and there is no mention made of an increase. The County Court judges are clearly as much entitled to an increase of salary as are the Judges of the Supreme Court.

The Advance Feels Sore.

The Chatham Advance seems to be still writhing under the lash applied to its editor by Mr. Phinney, M. P., in the last Kent County contest. It would have Mr. Phinney resign his seat in the legislature; it would then have the electors of Kent cast him aside by an overwhelming majority; and finally it would drive him from the province altogether. Before the Advance can succeed in accomplishing its purpose, or wrecking its revenge, there is one thing which must undergo a very great change, viz: the character of the Advance. The Advance has not, we regret to say, any recognized standard of principle, and it seems never to have had any. It is known not to enjoy the confidence of any of the political parties, nor to have the good will of any person whose good will is worth having. It has generally been looked upon as doing more harm than good to the party it happened to support. It is a difficult task—we should say insuperable—for one so situated to carry out any such designs as the Advance appears to have in regard to Mr. Phinney. We would say to the Advance that Mr. Phinney does not intend to resign his seat in the assembly, as he is under neither moral nor legal obligation to do so. Mr. Phinney will continue to represent Kent in the assembly for some years to come, unless he can be induced to accept nomination for York. He has been one of the most consistent, conscientious and honorable representatives this province has had for many years, and as such is one of the most highly respected members of the assembly. He is undoubtedly one of the best friends Kent County has had on the floors of the house. He has emphasized Kent's rights as no other member of that county has done. It was his powerful opposition to the government that forced Mr. Blair to come down from his lofty pinnacle and profess to do something for Kent which he had previously refused to do. Mr. Phinney's hand held the whip, and what little his county had received of the public appropriations is due to the course he has pursued in the legislature. Messrs. Blair and Pugsley are not to be coaxed. They must be driven; and there is no man in the legislature of this province better calculated to do this successfully than Mr. Phinney. As long as he enjoys its confidence Kent County will not submit to the indignity of bowing the knee to Messrs. Blair and Pugsley to secure its rights in public appropriations, and few know this better than the Advance and the members of the government. Could they get rid of Mr. Phinney the government feel they could afford to ignore Kent and lavish the funds on other places that would profit them more. Mr. Phinney will stay where he is, however, and his object will be to protect Kent's interests, as he is well able to do.

Death of Mr. John Jardine Sr.

We have this week to chronicle the death of one of our oldest and most esteemed citizens, Mr. John Jardine sr., who died at his residence in Jardineville, on the evening of the 23rd instant. Mr. Jardine was born at Gateside, Wamphray, Dumfrireshire, Scotland, in 1812, and came to Richibucto in 1832, in the brig Isabella—the first vessel built in this county. The Isabella was built by his uncle, John Jardine, father of David Jardine, head of the important firm of Farnworth & Jardine, of Liverpool, England. Deceased landed at the point, where in 1749, he and his brother established the ship yard now known as Jardineville. He served his time as a ship carpenter in his uncle's yard in Kingston. In 1842 he entered into a shipbuilding partnership with his brother Thomas, and the firm continued building until 1884, when the shipbuilding industry declined in this province. During this period they constructed no less than seventy thousand tons of shipping—many of these vessels being regarded as the finest specimens of naval architecture afloat. The firm of J. & T. Jardine was one of the few that escaped the financial disaster which overtook so many shipbuilders on the north shore of this province. For many years they sailed their own vessels having at one time over 10,000 tons of their own shipping. The character of the firm of J. & T. Jardine, for business integrity, straightforwardness and honest dealing, it is safe to say, stands unsurpassed by that of any firm of business men in Canada. Deceased always regarded his word as sacred, and any party who had his promise asked no further assurance that the promise would be strictly fulfilled. He was a man of excellent moral character, of a generous nature, and he will ever be remembered in this community as a warm friend to all who needed his assistance. The immense concourse of people of all classes who followed his remains to their last resting place, sufficiently attested to the universal esteem in which he was held. He was unmarried. He always lived with his brother Thomas Jardine and his family, who have the sincere sympathy of this community in their bereavement.

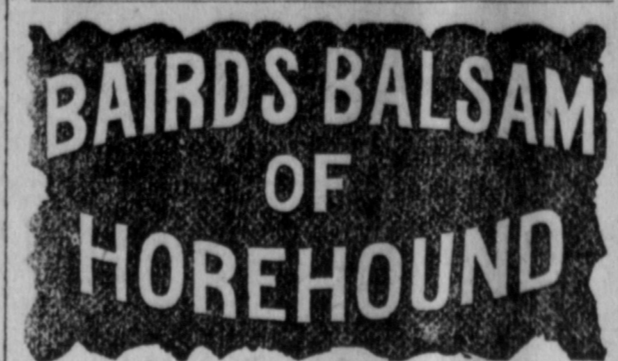

Curiosities of Geography.

Buccaneering romances teem with references to the "Spanish Main," yet probably few people nowadays know what or where the Spanish Main was. The Detroit Free Press explains that main is a contraction of mainland, and was applied to the part of the north coast of South America washed by the Caribbean sea. The name is a relic of the time when that part of the continent belonged to Spain, and was used to distinguish it from the West Indian Islands, which also then belonged to that country.

Where is El Dorado? This was a question which acutely exercised the conquerors of Mexico and Peru. Not content with the spoils of these unfortunate countries, the Spaniards argued that there must be another and richer country in the interior, supposed to be somewhere to the north or west of Peru. They called it, in prospective, "the Golden Land." Sir Walter Raleigh tried to find it in Guiana. It has not yet been discovered however. The Spaniards very likely found their El Dorado when they plundered Mexico and Peru, and the English buccaneers—of whom Sir Walter Raleigh was by no means an insignificant specimen—found their El Dorado in plundering the plunderers.
