

A Man in the House.

He was Jim to the boys, Jeems to his grandfather, James to his father, and 'hub' to his sisters.

His father overlooked him, his mother coddled him, his sisters snubbed him, but there came a day when he had his revenge.

The day was like any ordinary day to the rest of the world, but to our James it was the dawning of a new era.

The family were seated at the breakfast table, when James plunged down stairs, opened the door of the breakfast-room, and threw his bomb in among them.

"There's a man in the house!" "Goodness gracious me!" gasped the mother, running to hide in the china closet.

"Where is he?" gasped his sisters, crawling under the table.

"D-o-n't be g-e-e-s-e!" chattered the father. "W-h-o-'s-a-f-r-a-i-d-?" and he seized the carving knife and rose to the occasion.

Meanwhile James had kept on to the kitchen, where he continued shouting: "There's a man in the house!"

"Lawd a massy, we've be all killed dead!" quivered the cook.

Then she rushed out and shouted 'police!' and soon she had the patrol wagon at the door.

"Where is the man?" inquired the minion of the law when he had been informed that there was a man in the house.

"Here," cried James as he winked at his frightened family, I'm 21 years old today, and if I ain't a man I'd like to know who is?"

The Origin of the Side Saddle.

The horrified opposers of the movement for women's riding on a cavalier may be interested in learning that had it not been for an accident of fashion the gentler sex would be striding their horses still, and that the side saddle is not an invention due to the advanced modesty of civilization.

Gents.—My daughter was apparently at the point of death with that terrible disease diphtheria. All remedies had failed, but MINARD'S LINIMENT cured her, and I would earnestly recommend it to all who may be in need of a good family medicine.

JOHN D. BOULIER.

French Village.

CROUP.

Its Proper and Sufficient Treatment Till the Doctor Comes.

To begin with croup, that terror of all parents whose children are subject to this malady. The mother who has once been roused by the hoarse barking cough so unmistakable in its warning is never likely to forget the thrill of terror which seemed to make her very heart stop beating.

Uncomfortable Wedding Ring.

The Bayanzi, who live along the Upper Congo, have a strange custom which makes life a burden to the married woman. Brass rods are welded into great rings around the necks of the wives. Many of these rings worn by the women, whose husbands are well to do, weigh as much as thirty pounds, and this burden must be carried by the poor creatures as long as they live.

Fashion Notes.

A mauve and crystal head bodice is charming. The moderately high Medici collars collared with the fronts are decidedly becoming.

A passermenterie of white tinsel leaves is edged with gold tinsel and gemmed with big pearls.

Pretty collars and cuffs are made of Irish lace edgings by gathering them on ribbon run through the meshes.

Good slippers in fanciful designs are the newest fad, they combine so beautifully with every shade of ball-gown.

Irish guipure, point de gene, and the heavier Russian lace are inexpensive but often extremely pleasing.

Plenty of ribbons are used in trimmings; the most elegant are brocaded or striped, or both, and they should match in color the material of the dress.

Black stockings are apt to assume a greenish look after repeated washings. We are told that a simple way of preserving the color is to wash them in water free of soda, and in the last rinsing water to add a tablespoonful of good vinegar.

Lions in the Way.

Ethel, whose utmost ambition is to attain to good manners and who greatly desires to be considered one of the best-bred of little girls, finds many obstacles in her progress towards that goal.

Knows How It is Himself.

Mr. Labouche, in horror and defiance of the suffrage idea, exclaims: "Women are incomprehensible creatures and capable of anything; by turns angels and demons. And there are men who would see them vote."

She Treed Him.

She—What is that little silver design on your lapel? He—Examine it. She—It's a tiny tree with an axe lying near. He—Exactly. It means that I only need to be axed.
