"Look Aloft."

In the tempest of life, when the wave and the gale are around and above if thy footing should fail, If thine eye should grow dim and thy caution dog it, "Look aloft," and be firm and fearless of heart.

If the friend who embraced in prosperity's glow, With a smile for each joy and a tear for each woe, Should betray thee when sorrows like clouds are array'd, "Look aloft" to the friendship which never shall fade.

Should the visions which hope spreads in light to thine eye, Like the tints of the rainbow, but brighten to fly, Then turn, and through years of repentant regret, "Look aloft" to the sun that is never to set.

Should they who are dearest—the son of thy heart—The wife of thy bosom in sorrow depart, "Look aloft" from the darkness and dust of the tomb To that soil were affection is ever in bloom.

And oh! when death comes in his terrors, to cast His fears on the future, his pall on the past, In that moment of darkness, with hope in thy heart, And a smile in thine eye, "look aloft" and depart!

Society Etiquette.

From the Harper's Bazar are gleaned the following useful answers to sundry questions on everyday matters:

Of course you should send your card if you do not attend a reception to which you are invited. The costume with a bonnet which you wear at a church wedding is suitable for a reception following.

You should not send at home cards while you are in mourning.

Write "With sincere sympathy" on the card sent with flowers to a friend in affliction. Married ladies' calling cards measure 3½ by 2½ inches.

In leaving cards leave two of your husband's and one of your own. You do not pay a call upon the man.

A man paying a call upon a girl who is a guest should send a card to her hostess; the latter if clever, will probably not appear until late, or will in some way arrange not to interfere with your chat with your old friend.

If you must send for a "second helping" leave your knife and fork upon the plate.

When unable to attend an afternoon reception or tea, send your visiting card during the hours of reception. Do not hand a card to a member of the family where you are calling leave it on the table.

Cards p. p. c. may be left in person, or sent by mail. You may send one card to Mr. or Mrs., one to the misses and one to the son of the family. Inclose the cards each in a single envelope.

Don't be economical with your invitation cards. Send one to Mr. and Mrs. Smith, and another to Mr. William Henry Smith; or, if there be two sons, you may send to the Messrs Smith, although separate cards are better style.

Address the woman as "My dear Mrs. Brown," or in the third person, as "Mrs. Smith asks that Mrs. Brown will kindly," etc. Say, "How is your mamma?" to an intimate; "How is Mrs. Brown," to an acquaintance. It is necessary to leave cards at a tea reception.

Yes, a young woman should give her hand to a man caller.

Have your tea from four until six o'clock. Your cards will read, Mrs. John Smith, the Misses Smith." Serve light refreshment—tea, chocolate, small cakes and ices.

Number of bridesmaids is a matter entirely of option. The brides family make all arrangements for church and other matters connected with the wedding.

"When your heart is bad, and your head is bad, and you are bad clean through, what is needed?" asked a Sun-school teacher of her class. "I know—Ayer's Sarsaparilla," answered a little girl, whose sick mother had recently been restored to health by that medicine.

Willie Could Stay.

"Miss Laura," began the youth with a flushed face and a tremor in his voice, "I came this evening to ask you—"

"One moment, please, Mr. Hankinson. Willie you are making too much noise with those blocks. You'd better take them into the other room."

"To ask you," resumed the young man mopping his brow with a trembling hand, "if you—"

"Willie take those blocks instantly, and go."

"If you have tried that new headache remedy you said the other evening you were going to take, and if it did you any good! I am nearly wild with a headache to-night."

"I have forgotten the circumstances to which you allude, Mr. Hankinson," said Miss Kajones, coldly. "Willie, you may remain if you wish."

Ayer's Pills promptly remove the causes of sick and nervous headaches. These Pills speedily correct irregularities of the stomach, liver and bowels, and are the mildest and most reliable cathartic in use. No one should be without them.

How It Affects Them.

"What are the alcoholic characteristics of the different nationalities?"

The sergeant behind the station desk placed his finger upon his mansard brow and pondered. "Alcoholic characteristics" was a new one on him, and he was evidently making a mental excursion through the pages of Webster in search of a synonym.

"In other words, how do they behave themselves after a seance with the wine that is red and the whisky that is redolent of nitric acid."

"Ah," sighed the sergeant, "now I begin to grasp. The Irishman, first, last, and at all times wants to fight, and the more he drinks after this yearning is first awakened, greater grows his desire to have somebody's gore.

"When he reaches a certain stage—I'm speaking of longshoremen—he'll run amuck like a Malay who's crazy with arrack.

"When a German gets full he grows morose and bad tempered and develops suicidal tendencies.

"An Italian who has filled up on three-cent whisky broods over every little wrong real or imaginary, that has been inflicted upon him, and then starts out to get square on the author of it. Revenge is his ruling passion when the rum gets working on him.

"The Scotchman and Englishman relieve their enthusiasm by singing, while an inebriated Chinese is in the depths of despair unless he can gamble.

"The American is the quietest of the lot and, after he realizes that he has gone and done it, gives himself up to considering schemes as to how he's going to square things on the next day.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Famous Ship's Old Age.

It is not generally known that the Chesapeake, famous for her historic encounter with the British ship Shannon, in 1813 is in existence to-day, as sound and staunch as the day she was launched, but is used in the inglorious capacity of a flour mill, and is making money for a hearty Hampshire miller in the little parish of Wickham.

After her capture by Sir Philip P. V. Broke, she was taken to England in 1814, and in 1820 her timbers were sold to John Prior, miller of Wickham, Hants. Mr. Prior pulled down his old mill at Wickham and erected a new one from the Chesapeake's timbers, which were found admirably adapted for the purpose.

The deck beams are thirty-two feet long and eighteen inches square, and were placed unaltered, horizontally in the mill. The prulins of the deck are about twelve feet long, and served without alteration for joists.

Many of these timbers yet have the marks of the Shannon's grapeshot, and in some places the shots are still to be seen deeply embedded in the pitch pine. The metamorphosis of a sanguinary man-of-war into a peaceful, life-sustaining flour mill, is another evidence of the progress of civilization, and the general amity and increasing good-will between the two nations.

It is, perhaps, as near an approach to the scriptural prophecy that spears and swords shall be beaten into plows and pruning-hooks as the conditions of modern civilization will allow.—Boston Globe.

It's sometimes said that patent medicines are for the ignorant. The doctors foster this idea. "The people," we're told, "are mostly ignorant when it comes to medical science." Suppose they are! What a sick man needs is not knowledge, but a cure, and the medicine that cures is medicine for the sick. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures the "do be-lieves" and the "don't be-lieves." There's no hesitation about it, no "if" nor "possibly." It says—"I can cure you, only do as I direct." Perhaps it fails occasionally. The makers hear of it when it does, because they never keep the money where the medicine fails to do good. Suppose the doctors went on that principle. (We beg the doctors' pardon. It wouldn't do!)

Choking, sneezing and every other form of Catarrh in the head, is radically cured by Dr. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Fifty cents. By druggists everywhere.

An Editor's Duties.

We apologize for mistakes made in all our former issues and say that they were inexcusable, as all the editor has to do is to hunt news, and clean the rollers, and set type, and sweep the floor, and pen short items, and fold papers, and write wrappers, and make the paste, and mail the papers, and talk to visitors, and distribute type, carry water and saw wood, and read the proofs and correct the mistakes, and hunt the shears to write editorials, and dodge the bills, and dun delinquents, and take cussings from the whole force, and tell subscribers that we need money. We say we've no business to make mistakes while attending to the little matters, and getting our living on gopher-tail soup flavored with imagination, and wearing old shoes and no collar and a patch on our pants, obliged to turn a smiling countenance to the man who tells us our paper isn't worth $1 anyhow, and he could make a better one with his eyes shut.—Sank Rapids Sentinel.
