THE LOST HEIR.

Since our last issue, British subjects throughout the world have been shocked at the death of the eldest son of the Prince of Wales, presumptive heir to the British crown, and Duke of Clarence and Avondale. Under any circumstances, the death of a person occupying such a position, would have elicited much feeling among subjects of that crown. But in the present case, various circumstances combine to render the feeling evoked deep and tender. The young prince was in the very bloom of manhood, having just completed his twenty-eighth year. He had been most carefully educated, first having been well prepared for college and then favored with a university course. He then passed through a special course of naval study, theoretical and practical. That completed, he devoted his energies to the study of military matters, and reached the position of major in a Hussar regiment. Meanwhile, too, he travelled extensively. He seems to have completed serious preparations for the life opening to him. To crown all, his love tale was about closing in a marriage on all sides full of promise. The Queen had solemnly registered her approval of his choice. His father and mother also approved. The nation at large was in a state of pleasurable excitement. The bridesmaids had been selected. The bridal timent was in course of preparation. The wedding day had been fixed upon. People of all sorts in the three kingdoms were vying with each other in the selection of wedding presents, for the whole country felt interested in the auspicious event. Alas! the golden prospect was suddenly darkened. The young Prince, engaged in shooting on his father's estate, took a chill, followed by an affection of the lungs, and in a few days died to the infinite grief of the Queen, his father and mother and, of course, his broken hearted betrothed. The sympathies of the governments of all civilized nations of the world has been expressed. Much feeling has been called forth in all the outer provinces of the British Empire. The story is full of pathos, and the interest manifested has been, one may say, universal. However, the sad event is not likely to entail serious political consequences. There are still many heirs available for succession to the British throne.

THE BYE ELECTIONS.

The Dominion Government has had a shattering luck in recent bye elections. It has lost a seat in Richelieu, Quebec, one of the two won by Sir Hector Langevin in the last general elections. It has retained the seat for the Highland constituency Glengarry in Ontario, represented by McLennan, by an increased majority. Its outlook in the main for the rest of the elections which it has to face, is good. It may lose some other seats in Quebec, but it seems likely to gain several elsewhere.

THE NEW COMMISSION.

It was expected that the new Scandal Commission would be busily at work in Quebec this week. The work awaiting it is large. The facts requiring investigation are numerous, and apparently easy to be reached. The Commission if not impeded in its task, is likely to work fast and to finish early. But rumors of an intention by the Mercier party to secure an injunction from some judge under its influence to prohibit the Commission from acting, have been rife. At the moment of writing it is not publicly known whether there is any truth in these rumors. We should hardly think any Quebec judge would have jurisdiction over the Commission. Still legal devices are numerous and occasionally startling. It has been stated that the Angers government would respond to any injunction movement in this case by arresting Mercier and his compatriots in the boodling business on criminal charges. It is to be hoped, however, that no rash or doubtful devices will be resorted to on either side.

AN ANXIOUS ENQUIRY.

An enquiry anxiously meditated in many minds just now is whether or not the governments of the British West India islands lately forming special trade agreements with the government of the United States, have bound themselves to discriminate against Canadian imports, some fear they have. Others seem confident that they have not. The point in dispute will be settled presently, when the agreements go into operation.

THE CONTEST IN HALIFAX.

The contest for the vacant seats in Halifax grows lively and warm. The Dominion Government party has begun well. It has made a good selection of candidates, Messrs. Stairs and Kenny, former members for Halifax. It has entered on its work with spirit and unanimity. It brought together last Saturday night an immense gathering, which gave Sir John Thompson and the Liberal Conservative candidates, a splendid hearing. The reelection of Messrs. Stairs and Kenny by an overpowering majority is looked for.

MR. FERGUSON OF KENT.

In to-day's paper we publish the Worcester Telegram's version of an interview by one of its reporters with H. M. Ferguson, Esq., of Kingston. It is possible that Mr. Ferguson has been misrepresented and his explanation of the affair would be interesting.

Prince George of Wales.

By the death of his elder brother the late Duke of Clarence and Avondale, H. R. H. Prince George of Wales, becomes the heir-presumptive to the throne of the British Empire. Prince George is in his twenty-seventh year and has only recently recovered from a severe attack of typhoid fever. From early boyhood he had a fondness for ships and the sea, and at the age of 13 joined the trainingship "Britannia" at Dartmouth with his late brother, where he remained two years, passing out as a midship into H. M. S. "Bacchante." With his brother he made the cruise with the flying squadron under Admiral Clanwilliam, to the East Indies, West Indies, Falkland Island, Australia, Cape of Good Hope, and travelled through Egypt and the Holy Land. He remained a sailor, and was soon appointed midshipman to cruiser "Canada" on the North Atlantic station. In her he made his first visit to Canada and Montreal, during the viceregal rule of the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise. He was then a sharp smart youngster and a good seaman, and popular with his shipmates and his men.

A ball was given to the officers of the "Canada," which Prince George and the other young middies greatly enjoyed. He went as far as Toronto and Niagara Falls with his aunt the Princess Louise, and left a good impression wherever he stayed in Canada. On his second visit to Montreal in 1891, as commander of H. M. S. "Thrush," he was received with great honors, as he came this time in a more public and official character. An address was presented to him at the City Hall, and he held a numerous attended levee. He remained a week or so there and then sailed for Halifax and the West Indies. After a year's commission the "Thrush" was ordered home, and Prince George paid his ship's company off. In parting with his comrades, he gave each of the officers and crew a handsome photograph of himself with his autograph. Since then he has been promoted as a commander in the Royal Navy and was spoken of as likely to get the command of one of the new steel cruisers in the Mediterranean squadron. It has also been reported that it is Her Majesty's intention to create him Duke of Kent on his complete recovery from his recent illness. The probabilities are that he will give up the profession, in which his abilities sent him rapidly to the front rank. His popularity in the navy is only exceeded by that of the general public, with whom he is a great favorite. Englishmen have always shown a strong affection for their sailor princes, and when they have shown a manly, frank disposition, it has become all the stronger. The personal character of Prince George has all these admirable traits, besides he is studious, very fond of all his family and relatives, staunch to his friends, and above all is thoroughly British in all his tastes and peculiarities.

Coming Events.

Coming consumption is foreshadowed by a hacking cough, night sweats, pain in the chest, etc. Arrest its progress at once by taking Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which never fails to cure coughs, colds, bronchitis, hoarseness, etc., and even in confirmed consumption affords great relief.

A locomotive has just been constructed at the Crewe works of the London and Northwestern railway which is capable of drawing a train at the rate of 100 miles an hour. The speed attained by this engine in trial runs between Crewe and Chester was ninety miles an hour, but this was shown to be considerably below its full powers.

DEATH OF PRINCE ALBERT VICTOR.

After a Brief Illness of Congestion of the Lungs.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—Prince Albert Victor, eldest son of the Prince of Wales, and heir to the throne of the British empire, died this morning from congestion of the lungs.

The Prince of Wales has sent the following telegram to the Lord Mayor of London: "Our beloved son passed away at nine o'clock to-day."

"ALBERT EDWARD."

On receipt of the news the Lord Mayor at once gave orders to have the great bell in St. Paul's Cathedral tolled, and also sent the following message to the Prince of Wales:

"We are profoundly moved by the sad news, and have communicated to our fellow-citizens. We tender our deep and respectful sympathy with your Royal Highness in this great sorrow and national calamity."

Queen Victoria was immediately notified at Osborne of the death of her grandson. She at once telegraphed the Prince and Princess of Wales her deep grief and heartfelt share in their loss.

Flags on London Tower and public buildings were placed at half-mast and the great bells of St. Paul's, which are rung only on the occasion of the death of an heir to the throne, tolled forth the news to the waiting city.

A despatch from Sandringham says when the last moments came the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Prince and Princess of Teck, and Princess Victoria May, the betrothed of the dying Prince, were grouped at the bedside.

At 1 o'clock this afternoon the following despatch was received from Sandringham:

"After a marked improvement during the early part of the night the strength of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale suddenly failed. About 2 o'clock he began to gradually sink and death occurred at 9.15 a. m."

This despatch was signed by the three physicians who had been in attendance upon His Royal Highness.

The bells in Westminster Abbey were tolled from 12 o'clock until 2.

Telegrams from all parts of the kingdom show that the news of the death of the Duke was received everywhere with tokens of deep respect and sorrow.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Sir Julian Paunceforte informed Secretary Blaine today of the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale. Secretary Blaine, in reply, said he had been directed by the President to express the sorrow with which he learned of this sad bereavement suffered by Her Majesty and the royal family.

The following cable message was sent to Minister Lincoln, London:—

"Express deep regret and sincere condolences of the President by reason of the lamented death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale."

(Signed) BLAINE."

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The reports of Canadian grief and sympathy published here have aroused much interest. Several papers comment upon the loyal colonial sentiment in the present trial of the royal family as betokening the oneness of spirit of the empire. India, Australia, New Zealand and Cape Colony and all of the other colonies are manifesting the same sympathies as are shown in Canada, and touching cable messages of condolence have been received from colonial governments legislatures and Masonic and charitable bodies from Britain's colonies all over the globe. These feeling messages of loyal sympathy and devotion from the colonies have had a very marked effect upon the British people, and have gone a long way towards refuting the oft-made statements that the colonies have very little interest in common with Great Britain.

All the papers dwell upon the event as the saddest that has occurred since the death of the Prince Consort. The greatest sympathy is expressed for the Princess May.

The Times, referring to the death of the Duke of Clarence, says that the heart of the nation goes forth to the grief-bowed parents and the weeping bride. The tragedy, the Times adds, is deepened in intensity by the light shadow which announced its approach.

The Irish newspapers to-day all contain kindly articles on the death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale.

The National Press, organ of the McCarthys, touchingly refers to the idyll of love which has been so painfully ended. It says: "All idea of royalty disappears before the tragedy in human life which will touch every man's heart."

The Freeman's Journal (McCarthyite) says: "The Duke of Clarence and Avondale made no enemies. He will be mourned by all kindly and generous men, with deep sympathy for his parents. The Prince of Wales has faults. He has seldom forgotten that royalty has duties as well as rights; but the Prince has a certain royal generosity and kindness of heart, which are liked by the people. The Princess of Wales has won the love and esteem of all. We believe she has sympathy for the sufferings and wrongs of the people of Ireland."
