sir. I ventured to say something to him about cooling medicine, but he turned on me, sir, with such a look that I don't know how ever I got out of the room."
"I don't think that you have any cause to be uneasy, Mrs. Hudson," I answered. "I have seen him like this before. He has some little matter upon his mind which makes him restless."
I tried to speak lightly to our worthy landlady, but I was myself somewhat uneasy when through the long night I still from time to time heard the dull sound of his tread and knew how his keen spirit was chafing against this involuntary inaction.
At breakfast-time he looked worn and haggard, with a little fleck of feverish color upon either cheek.
"You are knocking yourself up, old man," I remarked. "I heard you marching about in the night."
"No, I could not sleep," he answered. "This infernal problem is consuming me. It is too much to be balked by so petty an obstacle when all else had been overcome. I know the men, the launch, everything; and yet I can get no news. I have set other agencies at work, and used every means at my disposal. The whole river has been searched on either side, but there is no news, nor has Mrs. Smith heard of her husband. I shall come to the conclusion soon that they have scuttled the craft. But there are objections to that."
"Or that Mrs. Smith has put us on a wrong scent."
"No, I think that may be dismissed. I had inquiries made, and there is a launch of that description."
"Could it have gone up the river?"
"I have considered that possibility too, and there is a searching party who will work up as far as Richmond. If no news comes to-day, I shall start off myself tomorrow and go for the men rather than the boat. But surely, surely, we shall hear something."
We did not, however. Not a word came to us either from Wiggins or from the other agencies. There were articles in most of the newspapers upon the Norwood tragedy. They all appeared to be rather hostile to the unfortunate Thaddeus Sholto. No fresh details were to be found, however, in any of them, save that an inquest was to be held upon the following day. I walked over to Camberwell in the evening to report our ill-success to the ladies, and on my return I found Holmes dejected and somewhat morose. He would hardly reply to my questions, and busied himself all the evening in an abstruse chemical analysis which involved much heating of retorts and distilling of vapors, ending at last in a smell which fairly drove me out of the apartment. Up to the small hours of the morning I could hear the clinking of his test tubes which told me that he was still engaged in his malodorous experiment.
In the early dawn I woke with a start, and was surprised to find him standing by my bedside, clad in a rude sailor dress with a pea-jacket, and a coarse red scarf round his neck.
"I am off down the river, Watson," said he. "I have been turning it over in my mind, and I can see only one way out of it. It is worth trying, at all events."
"Surely I can come with you, then?" said I.
"No; you can be much more useful if you will remain here as my representative. I am loath to go, for it is quite on the cards that some message may come during the day, though Wiggins was despondent about it last night. I want you to open all notes and telegrams, and to act on your own judgement if any news should come. Can I rely upon you?"
"Most certainly."
"I am afraid that you will not be able to wire to me, for I can hardly tell yet where I may find myself. If I am in luck, however, I may not be gone so very long. I shall have news of some sort or other before I get back."
I had heard nothing of him by breakfast time. On opening the Standard, however, I found that there was a fresh allusion to the business. "With reference to the Upper Norwood tragedy," it remarked, "we have reason to believe that the matter promises to be even more complex and mysterious than was originally supposed. Fresh evidence has shown that it is quite impossible that Mr. Thaddeus Sholto could have been in any way concerned in the matter. He and the house-keeper, Mrs. Bernstone, were both released yesterday evening. It is believed, however, that the police have a clew as to the real culprits, and that it is being prosecuted by Mr. Athelney Jones, of Scotland Yard, with all his well-known energy and sagacity. Further arrests may be expected at any moment."
"That is satisfactory so far as it goes," thought I. "Friend Sholto is safe, at any rate. I wonder what the fresh clew may be, though it seems to be a stereotyped form whenever the police have made a blunder."
I tossed the paper down upon the table, but at that moment my eye caught an advertisement in the agony column. It ran in this way:
"Lost.—Whereas Mordecai Smith, boatman, and his son Jim, left Smith's Wharf at about three o'clock last Tuesday morning in the steam launch Aurora, black with two red stripes, funnel black with a white band, the sum of five pounds will be paid to anyone who can give information to Mrs. Smith, at Smith's Wharf, or at 221B Baker street, as to the whereabouts of the said Mordecai Smith and the launch Aurora."

This was clearly Holme's doing. The Baker street address was enough to prove that. It struck me as rather ingenious, because it might be read by the fugitives without their seeing in it more than the natural anxiety of a wife for her missing husband.
It was a long day. Every time that a knock came to the door, or a sharp step passed in the street, I imagined that it was either Holmes returning or an answer to his advertisement. I tried to read, but my thoughts would wander off to our strange quest and to the ill-assorted and villainous pair whom we were pursuing. [TO BE CONTINUED.]
"Golden Medical Discovery" cures those diseases which come from blood impurities—scrofula and skin diseases, sores and swellings.
But does it? It's put up by the thousands of gallons, and sold to hundreds of thousands. Can it cure as though it had been compounded just for you?
Its makers say that thousands of people who have had Tetter and Salt-rheum, Eczema and Erysipelas, Carbuncles and Sore Eyes, Thick Neck and Enlarged Glands, are well to-day because they used it.
Suppose that this is so. Suppose that a quick-witted man was far-seeing enough to know that to cleanse the blood was to cleanse the life. Suppose that by many experiments, and after many failures, he discovered this golden key to health and that his faith in it for you is so strong that you can go to your druggist, buy a bottle and if it doesn't help you, you can yet your money refunded—cheerfully. Will you try it?
The remedy to have faith in, is the remedy the makers themselves have faith in.
How Old is the Potato?
The potato was introduced into Europe from the western hemisphere. History has it that Christopher Columbus was the first European who ever tasted a potato. It is doubtful if he ever enjoyed eating our favorite tuber. At all events, the vegetable that he ate at Cuba, in 1492 and brought home to Genoa, was a sweet potato. The first potato grown east of the Atlantic ocean was planted by Claudius in the botanical gardens of Vienna, in 1588. As it is well known Sir Walter Raleigh found the potato in Virginia, and took specimens back to England. The original home of the popular tuber is Chili. It was brought north by Spaniards.
For many years the potato in England was looked upon as being poisonous and unwholesome. This, perhaps, is not to be wondered at, as it was commonly eaten raw, the method of cooking not being known. Gradually its usefulness as a palatable vegetable became known. A committee of the royal society urged, in 1652, that all the fellows who possessed and should "plant potatoes and persuade their friends to do the same, in order to alleviate the distress that would accompany a scarcity of food." In 1783 the first field of potatoes was planted in the lowlands of Scotland.
As soon as the people of Ireland knew how to cook the potato it quickly became one of the leading vegetables in the land. Its cheapness of cultivation, large yields and nutritive qualities made it become immensely popular, and, as it was the chief article of food, it ere long obtained its present common name—Irish potato. It is not only valued as a food. The Irish were the first to discover that whisky could be made from it. Starch is made from it for the laundry and for the manufacture of farina. The dried pulp from which the starch has been extracted is used for making boxes. From the stem and leaves a narcotic is extracted. In some places cakes and puddings are made from the potato flour.
Don't be discouraged about that eczema till you have given Ayer's Sarsaparilla a persistent trial. Six bottles of this medicine cured the complaint of George S. Thomas, of Ada, Ohio, when all other remedies failed to afford any relief.
Andrew Carnegie was a poor boy when he arrived at Pittsburg with his parents from Scotland and began life as a telegraph messenger. When he had earned and saved a little money he bought an interest in a small foundry, and he made his first million by the manufacture of steel rails. To-day he is the largest manufacturer of pig-iron, steel rails and coke in the world. He has a house on Fifty-first street, near Fifth avenue, in New York; a residence in Pittsburg, a summer house in the south, a Highland castle in Scotland, and an English manor near the Ascot race track, where he is living at present. He owns iron furnaces, mines, railroads and a syndicate of English newspapers.
THE BOYS.—Boys should always have some quick and sure remedy for sudden Cramps, Diarrhea, or Dysentery, for a physician is not always near, and delay in cases of this kind often leads to serious results. Therefore parents should have a supply of PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER, which is as efficacious as it is simple and harmless. Directions are with each bottle, and one dose rarely fails to bring relief to a sufferer from any bowel complaint. New Size 25c Bottle full 50c.
