"Vulgar," said Rosamund, in a low, sad tone; "and it will have been mamma's doing. She showed she thought him so herself,"—drawing a breath, as though the shameful aspersions might have been supposed to have been beyond even Lady Caroline.

Hartland looked straight in front of him, meriting further confidence.

"Aunt Julia would never have found it out—I mean imagined it," proceeded Rosamund, with unconscious truth. "As long as ever she possibly can, Aunt Julia thinks mamma must be right; and it is when mamma is too—severe, that the poor little auntie sits by with a disapproving face on. That was the worst of all on Wednesday; she said one or two kind things, but she had not on her disapproving face."

"That meant a great deal."

"It meant that, on the whole, she was on mamma's side. She always thinks mamma goes too far; but I could tell she was with mamma—at least more with her than with me—and that was, oh, yes, a great deal for Aunt Julia."

"She is generally benevolence itself."

"Yes, indeed."

"You never hear her speak evil of any one."

"No."

"And I believe she makes them better by the mere thinking well of them," continued Hartland. I never see my friends to greater advantage than when they 'pal up' to Aunt Julia. You know what 'pal up' is, don't you, Rosamund? I think you and I 'pal up' very well when——" he stopped short; he could not well say "when we are let alone."

Conversation was thus at a momentary standstill, when, on a sudden, a loud "Halloo!" rang through the fragrant air, causing both to turn their heads and halt on the instant.

It must be reserved for another chapter to tell who they saw advancing swiftly through the young plantations.

CHAPTER XI.

"IN YOUR PLACE I SHOULD NOT HAVE PRESUMED."

Of course it was Gilbert.

"Talk of the——," said Hartland, with a glance of guilt at his companion; and leaving her to apply the quotation or not as she chose, he stepped forward, shook stick in welcome, and hallooed in response.

Neither he nor Rosamund looked at all disturbed. Of the three, Gilbert was the only one who showed himself in anyway put out or uneasy.

"I thought it very likely that I should meet some one," he observed, shaking hands; "my only hope was that it might be some one who would not have me up for trespassing; it would have been rather appalling to have been set upon by all your gardeners, and bundled over the hedge;" and he tried to laugh easily. "The fact is, I came up the side path, by which you were once good enough to show me out,"—to Rosamund.

She coloured, and Hartland understood. It was a pleasant memory and both liked to recall it.

"I had no very clear idea of my whereabouts," continued Gilbert; "but I made sure, from the smoke rising, that I was near the vineries, and supposed there would be an entrance not far off. It cuts off a long round, coming through the woods. I walked over. I did not bring the trap, as I was in hopes Lady Caroline might ask me to stop luncheon, and we could have our very last match at lawn-tennis for this season, afterwards. Do you think she will? Shall I have to beg it very humbly? I'll say anything, you know."

"Yes, Oh, I am sure," murmured Rosamund, with a troubled look that went to her cousin's heart in spite of his diversion at the ludicrous dilemma thus opened.

"I think—I am sure—that is——"

"(That is, if you would go round by the front door, and keep quiet about this side path, and meeting us, and lawn-tennis, and everything you ought not to mention," was what she wanted to say; but how make this understood?)

"I am sure mamma is—at home," continued the speaker, hurriedly; and though we have taken in our nets, as the weather has been so bad lately, they can be put up again in half a minute. I will tell the men on our way back."

"Just the day for a game, isn't it?" said Gilbert, looking round. "What a lot of glass you have here! It must require a tidy lot of men to keep it all in working order. A fine show of grapes too," peering in, as he passed a house. "The door is locked, I'll wager," trying the handle.

"That's always the way. They never let you touch one on the vine. At my father's I always make 'em bring the key——"

"We have forgotten the roses, Hartland," said Rosamund suddenly stopping short.

"And the geranium-cuttings," added he.

"Roses? Geranium-cuttings?" interrogated Gilbert.

"I came down on purpose to gather some of the late roses for mamma, and Hartland had commands for geranium-cuttings for Aunt Julia," said Rosamund, laughing; "and here we have never once thought of either, and it is too late to go now. We are bad messengers, Hartland."

"You had forgotten all about them?" demanded the new-comer, as though struck by the idea. "Were you going for them, by any chance, when you met me?"

That, he thought, might reasonably account for forgetfulness on her part, if not on Hartland's. But to his dismay, it did not appear that his appearance on the scene had had anything to do with it.

"We—where were we going, Hartland?" said Rosamund.

Hartland knew as little as she. He looked at her, looked about him, and confessed his blank ignorance.

"Lord!" ejaculated Gilbert with an angry laugh, for he did not like this. "I never heard such a joke in my life. Not know where you were going! Lord! It is as well that neither of you are in her Majesty's service, that's all I have to say. Come then, Miss Rosamund, let me help you to get the roses——"

"Oh no, it is too late."

The Sparham Case.

KEMPTVILLE, July 24.—Much interest is felt by residents of this place in the case of Mr. W. H. Sparham, of Ottawa, to whom reference was made in an Ottawa despatch a few days ago, as a sufferer delivered from kidney disease by the use of Dodd's kidney pills. Mr. Sparham was born and brought up here, and is well known and universally popular. His friends here had heard of his illness, and his failure to obtain relief from all the medicines he tried before taking the pills. Their wonderful effect in his case will make the remedy more popular in this vicinity, for all now are fully aware of its good properties.

Comet Has a Companion.

SAN JOSE, Cal., July 17.—An important discovery regarding the new comet has been made at the Lick observatory. Photographic plates reveal the fact that the celestial visitant has a companion. The second comet is enveloped in the tail of the first, and its tail merges into that of the other. The second comet cannot be seen through a telescope. It appears to move in the same orbit as the main one, or an orbit exactly parallel, and at the same rate of speed.

This discovery makes more certain the theory that the original force which throws out comets sends out more than one at a time.

DON'T LOSE THE BABY.—Every mother knows how critical a time the second summer is, and how many little ones die during that period from Summer Complaint, Dysentery, Diarrhea, and Cholera Morbus; and how anxiously she watches day by day, lest the dread disease snatch away the loved ones! There is no disease that comes so suddenly, or is frequently so quickly fatal, as these Bowel Complaints, and in a large majority of cases doctors and medicines seem to be of no avail. There is, however, one remedy, which in forty years of trial has never been known to fail when taken according to the printed directions, and this is PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER. It is so safe and sure that no mother is justified in being without it. A bottle in the house ready for sudden sickness will often save a life. You can get the new Big Bottle for 25c.

The Useful Egg.

The white of an egg is one of the most efficient remedies for a burn or a scald, excluding the air at once, and affording instant relief. It is also used as an antidote for several poisons, taken internally, especially those of a corrosive nature.

Will Wonders Never Cease?

The Cosmopolitan Monthly Magazine of New York City has been considered for some time the brightest periodical in the list of great magazines and it has always been in the first rank of illustrated publications. Its subscription price for one year is $3, and on this account the wonderful offer made by the publisher of Progress of St. John comes in the nature of a surprise. It is well known that Progress has built up a great circulation at a subscription price of $2 and now it proposes to still further increase its readers by offering the Cosmopolitan for one year for 85 cents additional. To explain further, any one not now a subscriber to Progress who sends $2.85 to the publisher of that bright weekly, will not only receive the Cosmopolitan Magazine, for one year but Progress as well for the same time.
