Beautiful Spring.
The editor sat in his sanctum,
Weary and haggard and hot;
Combing the various notes and news
That the office boy had brought.

Ah! here are some notes Newton—
Just seven miles from his home—
Replete with farming and herding news,
And also a little poem.

"Beautiful spring,—'Tis spring time,
The snow has gone from the rocks."
"We'll look o'er that at our leisure," he said,
And laid it aside on a box.

The next bore the stamp of "Woodland,"
And lumber news it brought;
And a leaf of eight-lined poetry,
Entitled "Spring time shots."

"Spring! Happy spring has arrived,
The fields have doffed their cover."
"We'll tend to you later," the editor said,
As he laid it beside the other.

Then "Musings" and "Pleasures of spring time,
The best of the seasons four."
He pulled off his threadbare jacket
And hung up his hat, (on the floor.)

"An ode to gentle spring tide,"
Next clamored for space.
He drew a big 'bandanna' forth
And mopped his dripping face.

"Spring time is here with its music
And its soft and balmy airs."
He boxed the office boy's yard-wide ears
And kicked the dog down the stairs.

"Spring masings—Spring time is sweet;
Spring time is the season for me."
He put on his much-abused jacket and hat,
And strided off home to his tea.

Down south in health-promising Dixie,
Where birds unceasingly sing,
A maniac editor paces his cell
And fights with a phantom "spring."
ALIN ANSON.

An Earlier Woman Than Eve.

The Talmud of the Jews speaks of an earlier woman than Eve, named Lilith, who gave birth to nothing but demons and then fled away from Adam, her husband, for whom Eve was then created. By the way, if this account be true, Adam must have been a man of a quarrelsome disposition, for we are told that on account of trouble between the latter pair he was separated from his wife for a period of 200 years. During that time he lived a life of penitence on the site of the Temple of Mecca, where he was instructed in the divine commandments, instructions which he very much needed, apparently, by the angel Gabriel.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Sir Andrew Clark's London Hospital Address on Tea.

"The cup that cheers but not inebriates," is, according to the latest dictum of Sir Andrew Clark, a cup of "Black China Tea." Sir Andrew's opinions of the various other teas may be gathered from the following extract from an able and characteristic lecture which he delivered to the Students of the London Hospital on the 13th October, 1891. In the course of the lecture, while describing the appropriate treatment for a certain patient whom he had just examined, he recapitulated to the Students the articles of diet best suited to the case. "Let him," he said, "have plenty of good feeding and at the close of his meal let him sip a cup of milk and water, or a cup of tea. And here I must pause to speak to you about tea. Tea is a blessed beverage. I do not know what I should do without it. But there is tea and tea; and one of the teas which I have in my mind is the representation of all that is physiologically wicked. I go about town a good deal holding consultations here and there, and about five o'clock when I get into a place the lady of the house will say to me, 'Sir Andrew, you look so tired, do let me give you a cup of tea.' I say 'Thank you very much.' But the tea has stood for half an hour, and she remarks, 'I know you do not like it strong, Sir Andrew,' and then she puts about a table-spoonful of tea into the cup and fills it up with water. Now I call that positive cruelty to give tea like that to anybody, and I hope you gentlemen will always set your face against such a beverage. Tea to be useful should be, first of all black China Tea—the Indian Tea which is being cultivated has become so powerful in its effects upon the nervous system that a cup of it taken early in the morning, as many people do, so disorders the nervous system that those who take it actually get into a state of tea intoxication and produces a form of nervous disturbance which is most painful to witness. If you want to have, either for yourselves or for your patients, tea which will not injure and which will refresh, get black China Tea putting in the right measure—the old-fashioned teaspoonful for each person and one for the blessed pot. Then pour on briskly boiling water, and within five minutes you must pour it off again, or it will become wicked instead of good. Let this patient, therefore, have half a pint of milk and water or cocoa, or half a pint of tea, à la Clark, if you please."
—Extract from Sir Andrew Clark's Annual Lecture to Students of the London Hospital.

Water as a Medicine.

The human body is constantly undergoing tissue change. Worn-out particles are cast aside and eliminated from the system, while the new are ever being formed, from the inception of life to its close. Water has the power of increasing these tissue changes, which multiply the waste products, but at the same time they are renewed by its agency, giving rise to increased appetite, which in turn provides fresh nutriment.
Persons but little accustomed to drink water are liable to have the waste products formed faster than they are removed. Any obstruction to the free working of natural laws at once produces disease, which if once firmly seated, requires both time and money to cure.
People accustomed to rise in the morning weak and languid will find the cause in the imperfect secretion of wastes, which many times may be remedied by drinking a full tumbler of water before retiring. This very materially assists in the process during the night, and leaves tissue fresh and strong, and ready for the active work of the day.
Hot water is one of the best remedial agents. A hot bath on going to bed, even in the hot nights of summer, is a better reliever of insomnia than many drugs. Inflated parts will subside under the continued poulticing of real hot water. Very hot water, as we all know, is a prompt checker of bleeding, and besides, if it is clean, as it should be, it aids in sterilizing our wounds. A riotous stomach will nearly always gratefully receive a glass or more of hot water.

How to Cure all Skin Diseases.

Simply apply "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT." No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for SWAYNE'S OINTMENT. Lyman Sons & Co., Montreal, wholesale agents.

The Horse.

Horses like skimmed milk and it does them good.
Familiarity with objects is the only remedy for shying by a horse.
Straw will do for horses food but it is constipating. Look out for it.
Give the horses a few potatoes frequently; it will help rid them of worms.
Never be satisfied with your horses if their coats stare and they appear dull.
It is better to give stallions regular, but not hard work to develop vitality and energy.
Professor Semborn's experiments "seem to show that a rather large ration of grain for work horses is an economical one."
Have soft, good-fitting harness. Be firm but kind in your treatment and the horse will become attached to you and do good service.

Best Ever Made.

DEAR SIRS,—I can highly recommend Haggard's Pectorial Balsam as the best remedy ever made for coughs and colds. I am never without it in my house.

Sentiment Has Flown.

It was the great reproach against the English workhouse in old times that husband and wife, even in advanced age separated, and the touching wish embodied in "John Anderson, my Jo," could not be carried out. But, as a matter of fact, it now appears that the wish itself is wanting.
"I've looked after he for forty years," says an ancient dame, "and I've had enough of it," and "I came in here on purpose to get out of the reach of the old gal's tongue," retorts the husband. Only a few couples still care for one another's society, we are told.

Points About Poultry.

"Luck" in the poultry yard is a rarity—it needs another letter, for it is "p-luck" that wins.
The editor of the Farm-Poultry says, "I don't care a picayune for 'points' if my fowls will only lay eggs."
Never be in a hurry to get young chickens to go upon the roost; let them make a sufficient growth to fly well.
Meal, bran, and potatoes or turbot and mashed in about equal proportions makes a good feed for breeding ducks.
Separated and raised by themselves pullets will be worth more for use than if allowed to run with the cockerels.
Ducks confined to yards will lay more eggs, and there will be better fertility, than when they have an unlimited range.
As ducks do not roost it is not necessary to have high houses, yet at the same time if they are too low they will be inconvenient to clean.
If you are keeping poultry for profit, try and manage them so as to have eggs to sell when prices are highest. This is usually during late summer, and during the first and middle of winter.

What Can be Done.

When the system is overloaded with impurity, the circulation sluggish, and the stomach out of order, as is often the case in spring time, there is no remedy so efficacious as Burdock Blood Bitters to remove every trace of impure matter and restore perfect health.

His Prophecy.

"This child," said the clergyman, who was about to christen Brown's baby, "may some day make a noise in the world."
And the next minute, when Master Brown felt the cold water, the good man's prophecy was verified more speedily than he had expected.—Truth.

Miscellaneous Recipes.

EGG DRINK.—One quart of cold water, a cupful of sugar, an egg, a teaspoonful of tartaric acid. Beat the egg to a froth, beat in the sugar, and the other ingredients stir well and drink at once.

CREAM CANDY.—Two cups of sugar, a cup of water, a tablespoonful of cream of tartar. Boil without stirring until it will harden in water like spun glass. Add a small piece of butter and work in a little vanilla as you pull it.

NUT CANDY.—Two cups New Orleans molasses, three-fourths cup of sugar; boil until it will harden quickly in water. Add a piece of butter and a coffee cup of walnut meat just before taking from the fire. Pour into shallow pans and check off with a knife.

PLAIN CARMELS.—One pound of brown sugar, a quarter of a pound of chocolate, one pint of cream, one teaspoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of molasses. Boil for thirty minutes, stirring all the time; test by dropping into cold water. Flavor with vanilla and mark off in a pan.

CURRENT JELLY.—Stem ripe currants, scald them in a porcelain kettle, do not let boil; strain through a coarse jelly bag and then through a flannel bag; allow a pound of sugar to a pint of juice. When the juice has boiled fifteen minutes, add the heated sugar and cook five minutes longer. Take from the fire, let cool slightly, pour in glasses and set aside until cool.
