THE STEVENS TRIAL.

W. F. Best, analytical chemist of St. John, testified he had examined the contents of the stomach of the deceased and found nothing poisonous or injurious to the health.

DORCHESTER, June 17.—On the opening of court this morning, Hon. Dr. Pugsley called G. H. Dunlap, M. D. He testified that he was secretary of the Moncton board of health. He made a post-mortem examination of the body in the latter part of January. Was not present when the body was exhumed. Dr. Mitchell had gone before he arrived. Examined the legs and arms only. The body was turned over on the face. Did not examine the back particularly. The legs appeared to be colored reddish all over, though there were dark spots with abrasions in the centre of the spots which were scattered pretty well all over the legs and arms. In the post-mortem, found the brain's condition normal and healthy; lungs and pleura do in the heart found some clots of blood and one fibrous clot; it was covered with fatty tissue and thought then microscopic examination might show fatty degeneration. Mabel's death might have been caused by a great many things; could not account for the heart being empty at time of death; it is often the case.

Cross-examined by Mr. Powell.—Saw nothing unusual or suspicious in the application for burial certificate. He examined the legs and arms pretty thoroughly and saw no stripes or anything he could call stripes. The abrasion of the cuticle was caused by decomposition. That was his matured judgement. The spots were scattered over the legs and arms. A scratch would have a like effect. Believed there was a scratch near the eye, but could not speak with distinctness about it. If a whip were applied to a human body shortly before death, so as to leave a mark, he would expect a continuous mark. Did not think the marks or little spots he saw on the legs and arms were produced by a whip. There were marks on other parts of the body, but he did not examine them. Saw no elevated marks. Did not know elevation was one of the distinguished characteristics of marks made before and after death; believed the books said so, but had never tested it. Sudden death may occur, and no cause be apparent by post-mortem. There was no question on that point. There could be severe pain in the bowels without any inflammation at all. With a heart like this very severe pain might produce death, and severe pain might be produced in a great variety of ways that would leave no post-mortem trace.

To the court.—The abrasions he saw or the spots on the limbs were in his opinion caused by decomposition.

This closed the case for the crown.

DORCHESTER, N. B., June 19.—When the court met to-day Mr. Powell moved for the prisoner's discharge, first, on the ground there was no evidence to leave to the jury; second, no evidence of violence having been committed; third, that if violence was committed there is nothing to connect the prisoner with it; fourth, that even if there is such evidence there is no evidence to show it was in excess of that punishment which a person standing in loco parentis was justified in administering; fifth, if there is evidence of violence there is none that it caused Mabel's death; sixth, there is no evidence of any fear on part of deceased such as would be necessary to produce death by shock.

Judge Landry refused the motion, but said he would reserve the points raised by Mr. Powell.

Adjourned till nine o'clock tomorrow.

Adjourned till nine o'clock tomorrow.

DORCHESTER, June 20.—When the court opened, Hon. Dr. Pugsley submitted the plans of the Stevens residence, Moncton, which has been prepared by his honor's order, for use in the case.

J. Elbert Church, M. D., was the first witness called this morning by Mr. Powell. He was present at the examination of the body of Mabel Hallet Stevens. Was employed by Mr. Stevens to watch the proceedings; did not participate in them. Dr. Mitchell and Dr. Purdy were present. When taken from the coffin there was a mark on the left eye, with discoloration; a mark on cheek and slight mark (an old scar) under the hair. That was all he observed on the head and face. Dr. Mitchell pressed on the inner corner of the eye and about a drop of pus exuded. The mark on the cheek was very superficial; appeared like a scratch. There was some discoloration on the wrists and irregular marks. Could not call them patches. Effects of decomposition were there. On the body and legs were a number of spots. The legs presented a reddish color, converging into different shades. From the head up six or seven inches there was a spot the serum from which discolored the lining of the coffin. Decomposition was active there. Did not observe any dark continuous stripes; there were post-mortem changes in the form somewhat of rings. Had there been continuous stripes on the body he would have seen them. Made no incisions; was there only to watch proceedings. His opinion was the marks were post-mortem changes. Was present with Drs. Dunlap and Purdy at the autopsy. Dr. Dunlap first opened the head, took out the brain, examined it thoroughly and found it in a normal condition. Next took out the lungs, and opened the chest. Observed little adhesion of lungs, it being indicative of some old pleural trouble. (Whip shown to witness.)

In his opinion a mark produced by that whip being applied with any force to the naked skin would be continuous. Standing at an angle spots would show in a row, but they did not form continuous lines on the body. After death by shock the heart is generally found distended with blood. When at the post-mortem, his first impression was she died of shock. Deduced that from failure to find any cause of death. From his reading of the best authorities since then, he was satisfied his first impression was erroneous, there being too much blood in the heart. Agreed with Dr. Mitchell that the marks on the wrists were caused by lifting the body. Saw that the cuticle was broken on the spots on the body. This was the result of post-mortem changes, or might have been caused by taking off the clothing. A post-mortem often failed to determine the cause in sudden death. Death might result from pain alone; sudden, as in neuralgia of the heart which he thought would leave no post-mortem effects visible in the heart. The marks on the wrists might have been produced by pulling on the garments. No positive opinion could be formed as to any marks without cutting. Putting a child in her room two hours earlier than usual and giving her her meals there for a couple of weeks might have a little temporary effect, but it would depend on her disposition. If timid and sensitive the effect might have been noticeable; not so if the girl was of a more morose disposition. As respects flesh Mabel was in good condition, indicative of sufficient supply of food. There was nothing in the body's condition to suggest deficiency of food.

Witness occupied the room in front of Mabel's, and never knew the door between them to be locked; was very kind to Mabel when Mrs. Stevens was away; Mabel did not like Mrs. White. Mrs. Stevens was kind and generous to the poor and those who were around her.

Cross-examined.—During one fortnight while she was there witness understood that Mabel was to keep to her room when in the house.

Adjourned till tomorrow.

DORCHESTER, June 21.—David Caldwell was the first witness called this morning by Mr. Wells for the defence. He testified he was a brother of Mrs. Stevens. First visited her at Moncton about Xmas, 1890. Remained till pretty near April, '91. Saw Mabel Hallet a good deal during that time. Next time visited his sister Saturday, Xmas eve, 1892. Arrived about 8.30 or 9 p. m. Saw Mabel the following day in the bath room and down stairs. Saw her in the house and on the street on Monday, and in the bath room on Tuesday. During the week until New Year's saw Mabel off and on. She seemed just the same as when he had been there in 1891. Saw her the Monday and Tuesday after New Year's. Miss McDonald was there the day before Mabel died. Witness was in the house, upstairs and down, the day she died. Miss McDonald left about 6 p. m. Tuesday, and Mrs. Stevens went out at the same time, returning about 7 p. m. Had dinner a few minutes after Mrs. S. came back. Mrs. S. said before dinner she was going to give Mabel some oil. After dinner witness went into the library down stairs. Mr. and Mrs. Stevens went in with him. All remained there till about 9 o'clock, when Mrs. Stevens went out to
